At Least Stern Parent Had Son's Rapt Attention

Father had decided that he must administer a strict lecture to his six-year-old son. The boy had been naughty, but did not seem to appreciate the fact, and it was with some reluctance that the parent undertook a scolding.

He spoke judiciously but severely; he recounted the lad's misdeeds, and explained the whys and wherefores of his solemn rebuke, while his wife sat by, duly impressed.

Finally, when the father paused for breath, and, incidentally to hear the culprit's acknowledgment of error, the lad, his face beaming with admiration, turned to his mother and said: "Mother isn't father interesting?"

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Axis Powers Protest U. S. 'Custody' Of Ships Seized in American Ports; Jugoslavia Aims at National Unity In Program of Anti-German Activity

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

AXIS SHIPS:
Protective Custody

Protest from the Axis powers was not long in coming following seizure by the United States of some 69 German, Italian and Danish merchant ships docked in American ports.

According to federal officials the ships were seized for "protective custody" on the grounds of sabotage. Finding definite traces of systematic sabotage, the navy's intelligence service started the chain of events that led to the seizures. When the first evidence was uncovered the facts were laid before President Roosevelt and with his approval the coast guard received its orders to place the ships under "custody."

One explanation of the action came from Herbert Gaston, assistant secretary of the treasury, who said the move was "protective" and aimed to "prevent the further wreaking of damage which would constitute a menace to American ships and traffic being carried on in the harbors of the United States."

When the seizures were made there was found plenty of evidence to back up the suspicion of sabotage. Many of the ships' crews had wrecked the machinery of their vessels to the point where getting them out of port was impossible. First reports indicated that the sabotage had been confined to Italian ships.

German and Italian embassies in Washington issued the first notes of protest to the state department but did not immediately disclose their contents. From Rome and Berlin came unofficial reports that the move had a most serious aspect to the foreign powers. The Danish government reported that no protest was being issued.

ROOSEVELT:
Hits Out

President Roosevelt took time off from a fishing trip off Florida to hit out at antagonists of freedom, liberty and the pursuit of the ideals of the present administration by going ashore at Port Everglades, Fla., and broadcasting a punch-packed message to the American people who were clinging to their firesides as winter hit back for a moment at many sections of the nation.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT and Stephen Early, his secretary, are pictured as the former broadcast his "Jackson Day" speech to the nation.

The President warned that the threat of Nazi and Communist doctrines were drawing more tightly around the American nation day by day. He said he was gratified that Americans are heeding the nation's determination that, with all America's resources and power, it should help those who block dictators in their march toward domination of the world.

The occasion was the President's Jackson day address. He made it the occasion of another defiance of the dictatorial powers in Europe. He also took occasion to call attention to the manner in which, he said, the Communists are attempting to undermine American free labor.

He warned the people that hard days are ahead. He said that everyone would have to labor shoulder to shoulder at the national defense wheel. The broadcast was made from the wardroom of the presidential yacht Potomac. Oddly only a freight shed separated his yacht from the Nazi freighter Arauca which was chased into Port Everglades harbor in December, 1939.

From the Potomac, as he broadcast, the President could see the Nazi swastika flying from the stern of the Arauca, as he pointed out to his nation over the air-waves what sort of a world it would be if democracy did not prevail.

He said in part:

"The decision we (the United States) have reached is not a partisan decision. The leader of the Republican party, Mr. Wendell L. Willkie, in order and in action is showing what patriotic Americans mean by rising above partisanship and rallying to the common cause.

JUGOSLAVIA:
Challenge

The sudden and almost bloodless upset in the government of Jugoslavia was a challenge to popular imagination. In the briefest of intervals the people rose against the Vienna-signed Axis pact, overturned the government, placed Regent Prince Paul and his mates under military arrest, and seized the power.

Yet there was not an immediate turnaround, and though the British and American press welcomed the overturn with joy, it was evident to close observers that it was too early to toss hats in the air and to say that Hitler had been outfaced.

The Nazis immediately, it is true, demanded a clarification of the Jugoslav attitude toward the action of the predecessor government, nay, the Nazis handed it out in the form of an ultimatum.

Yet there was deep doubt over the whole situation. How sincere, demanded the watchers, were the Jugoslavs in their about-face?

Was the nation, ringed about on three sides by hostile powers, and with aid from the British and the United States, though promised, entirely problematical, going to stand up to the Nazi threat of armed invasion, not only from the west, with German troops, but from the north, also, with the Fascist legions?

Here a Nazi soldier and Rumanian sailor are shown on guard duty on the Black sea. If a general Balkan conflict results from the Jugoslavian defiance of Hitler Germany might have to contend with Russia, which, like Rumania, has a border on the Black sea.

Early in the diplomatic move there was evidence that the people were wholeheartedly in favor of the United States and Britain—that they were not willing to ally themselves with the Nazis. But there were those who were inclined to question the early shouts of Long Live Britain and Long Live Russia which were heard side by side in the streets of Belgrade.

Russia and Britain were not openly allies. What did this mean? Did it mean that the Jugoslav people had secret information that Russia had turned against Germany? Did it mean that the dispatches saying Russia had lined up against Germany, had refused oil to the Nazis since last September meant that something reminiscent of the Treaty of Tilsit had occurred.

Or did it simply mean that along with the shouts for Britain there had been Communists shouting for Russia? Soon after the governmental overturn there was evident the fact that the Croats, Serbs and Slovenes, the integral parts of Jugoslavia, were not as one on the issue.

But later reports indicated that Jugoslav national unity had been reached in opposition to the Axis powers.

R. A. F.:
Rampage

The Royal Air Force, taking advantage of every break in the weather, and with a fine disregard of increasingly heavy attacks by the Luftwaffe, carried out repeated daylight attacks and night bombings over Germany and the occupied territories.

British pilots claimed that they had skimmed 20 feet over roof tops in France and Belgium and while machine-gunning military objectives had witnessed the heartening sight of the populace waving them on from the ground.

The story was told how speedy little RAF fighter planes, attacking in pairs, swooped down to fire blasts at railways, roads, shipping and German planes on the runways.

So complete, was the British report, of the RAF mastery of the situation, that not one German fighter rose to challenge them and not even anti-aircraft fire was encountered.

However that might be, German sources did admit that the bombings on Bremen and other key cities had been serious, though minimizing damage of military importance

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

A DRESS that's complete in itself and smart for general wear. A jacket that transforms it into a street ensemble. And both carefully styled, accurately sized, to fit large sizes perfectly. All that, surely, is a good deal to get in one easy and inexpensive home pattern. Yet that's just what you get when you send for this one—No. 8886. That high-cut front panel has a magically diminishing effect upon your waistline and hips. Beltless, to accentuate height, the dress is gathered for correct fit over the bust.

The jacket, made with pleats drawn in by a tie-belt at the waistline, opens in the front to show the crisp frill and buttons that trim the frock, with a charmingly soft, somewhat formal effect.

TIPS to Gardeners

CHOOSE BEANS WISELY

THE gardener should be well acquainted with the many available varieties of stringless beans, if he is to get the most from his bean crop.

If earliness is the principal interest, the gardener should select either Bountiful (green-podded) or Golden Wax (yellow). Bountiful is excellent for use when small, in shoe-string size. It is also a good choice for home canning, for it produces abundantly.

The gardener interested in yield over a long season should select both a bush bean, and a pole bean. The pole beans begin producing when the yield from the bush beans tapers off.

Kentucky Wonder is one of the best all-purpose pole beans. It provides good quality snap beans. When past the snap stage, the pods may be cut up, and cooked southern style. Later, this bean may be used in the green shell stage. In the more mature stage the beans may be used in baking or in soup.

HEALTH HINTS for LIVESTOCK

PREPARED BY AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTH

HUMAN SMALLPOX HAS COUNTERPART IN SWINE DISEASE

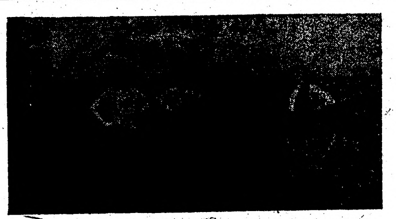
Swine raisers have had increasing trouble during the last few years from a hog disease which very closely resembles the human ailment, smallpox.

Swine pox, as it is called, chiefly affects young pigs and growing shoats. The pox appears on the hair-free portions of the body, especially on the belly, snout and armpits. At first the spots are the size of a pea, then they blister, and finally form a crater-like scabbed sore, the typical pox lesion. Swine pox also appears sometimes on brood sows, pox sores developing on their udders and teats. In these cases, suckling pigs develop sore mouths, and starve.

Farmers should be cautious about introducing new pigs into a herd, and should always isolate them for a few weeks. The buyer should demand a certificate of veterinary inspection when new pigs are purchased. Poxy pigs should never be sold to neighbors, as the disease is very contagious.

Prompt attention by a veterinarian will greatly reduce losses from swine pox, if treatment can be started when the first spots or blisters begin to appear.

Swine pox is generally characterized by a breaking out on the under surface of the body.



The field of barley at the right—almost waist high—demonstrates how yields are being increased on many farms along the Great Northern Railway. The knee-high barley at the left was planted at the same time. The application of phosphate fertilizer resulted in ten days earlier maturity and 26 bushels more barley to the acre. The phosphated field yielded 56.6 bushels of 44-pound grain to the acre; the other field, 30.7 bushels of 40.5-pound grain. The picture was taken on a farm near Pipestone, Minnesota.

"The Well is Dry"

That wouldn't be good news to any farmer. But at the worst it probably would mean no more than digging a new one.

Far worse if the farm itself should wear out!

A half century has passed since the Great Northern was built through the unsettled Northwest and immigrants were unloading their tools of husbandry from box cars to begin the taming of plains and forests.

Through all these years thousands upon thousands of tons of crops have been removed from the farm lands along the railroad—crops that have built your cities and towns—crops that have provided the principal traffic of the railroad.

Hand in hand with the building of the Great Northern, efforts were begun to enrich and conserve the fertility of the land.

The experimental farms which James J. Hill established near St. Paul and in the Red River valley, the experiments he encouraged and supported wherever he laid his rails, and his employment of soil and livestock experts—these were the forerunners of the county agents and the state and federal experimental stations of today.

A half century ago, in talks at State Fairs and at meetings of farmers and livestock growers, Mr. Hill was pointing out the danger of taking fertility too much for granted.

Today the Great Northern and its corps of agricultural experts are co-operating with progressive farmers and state and federal agencies in programs to restore fertility where there are signs of approaching depletion and to enrich and conserve it elsewhere.

Different lands and different areas, of course, call for different methods—in many places, the application of phosphate; in others, crop rotation and increased use of natural fertilizers; in dryland areas, strip farming which by alternating fallow and crop strips holds fertile top soil on the farm; improved types of soil tillage to minimize drifting and retain moisture; the seeding of crested wheatgrass and other cover crops to tie down fertile top soils; and contour furrowing to decrease erosion.

And so "railroading" and farming in the territory opened up by the Great Northern have come down a half-century-old road together. They are still traveling together because both are "landed" interests. Their future is bound to the soil. And they are resolved to keep that future ahead of them and not behind them!

Hatcheries Begin Pike Stripping

That prize Minnesota game fish, the wall-eyed pike, set the State Bureau of Fisheries into action last week.

Scores of hatchery foremen and other personnel left for the north country to begin preparations at the State's 11 spawning stripping stations for what officials hope will be a record take of eggs.

Detailed preparations are necessary before the difficult, and often hazardous, tack of netting the wall-eyes begins. Stakes are driven into the water beds before the ice goes out, and nets are readied.

The pike run begins coincident with the breakup—around mid-April in a normal year. The time of the run is later along the international boundary than in northcentral regions.

Broken nets are one of the principle "headaches" of the pike run. Since the seine traps are usually set against the mouth of streams—to catch the wall-eyes as they struggle up the current—ice chunks, logs, brush and other debris frequently drift down and tear them.

Among the hatcheries and stripping stations now being manned are Tower, Ranier, Baudette, Wasnkish, Redby, Cut-foot-Souix on Winnibigoshish Bemidjs, Park Rapids, Jenkins, Detroit Lakes and Ottertail.

The State Bureau of Fisheries plans expansion of its pickeral propagation this year. Nets will be set near the Twin Cities for the collection of spawn to be handled in the St. Paul hatchery. The Glenwood hatchery will also take care of pickeral.

The highschool Glee Club under the direction of Miss Sandberg, willl journey to Hallock to participate in the district music contest on Saturday, April 19. Eleven schools with some over 600 contestants will take part. Activities will begin at 8:30 a. m and continue through the day and evening.

Open House At Refuge

Open house will be held at the Mud Lake National Wildlife Refuge in Marshall county during National Wildlife Restoration Week which is now (April 14-19) being celebrated throughout the country, sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation, it was announced by C. B. Vogen Refuge Manager of the Fish and Wildlife Service, United States Department of the Interior.

Individuals and private organizations who wish to visit the refuge may make arrangements with the management at the refuge headquarters located 11 miles east of Holt.

With an are of 66,000 acres, the Mud Lake National Wildlife Refuge was established primarily for the protection of waterfowl, upland game birds, and shore birds. This refuge is one of 263 administered by the Fish and Wildlife Service throurhout the United States, Alaska, Puerto Rico, and Hawaii, Vogen said.

These refuges have a total area of about 13,500,000 acres, ranging in size from 1-acre islands to the Aleutian Islands National Wildlife Refuge in Alaska, which comprises almost 2,000,000 acres and extends 1,200 miles westward from the Alaska Peninsula.

Establishing refuges is, of course, only a beginning, Vogen added. Many of the areas obtained were only prospective refuges at the time and required a great deal of developement. Improving refuges, he explained is one of the Service's objectives.

Much of the work, Vogen said, has been carried on with the aid of the Civilian Conservation Corps. Help has also been given by the W. P. A. and N. Y. A. On the Mud Lake National Wildlife Refuge the work has been done with the help of CCC.

We have received a card from Bernard Larson stating that he has arrived at Silverton, Oregon, and that he likes the climate there just fine.

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Johnson and baby last week moved to Duluth where he will be engaged in farming about 10 miles out of the city.

Most of the side roads here, most of which never have had any gravel on them in the first place are now next to the old-time trails. They are even worse as a car makes a worse rut than a wagon.

Mrs. Fred Petersen spent last week in St. Paul visiting relatives.

Hitchhiker Depot

Weary hitchhikers have found such comfort in the "depot" set up by Thomas J. Bromfield at Albion, Mich., that they stop at the rate of 300 a week. Bromfield, a filling-station operator, built the resting place a year ago. While hitchhikers sit on a bench under the trees, a large painted thumb tells passing motorists they are willing to ride awhile. The thumb is adjustable and may be turned to point either way down the road.

Local Bankers Hosts to Ass'n

The Marshall County State Bank will entertain the member banks of the Northwest Clearing House Ass'n, at their annual spring meeting which will be held in the village of Holt on Saturday, April 19th, 1941.

The membership of the Northwestern Clearing House Ass'n consists of member banks of Pennington, Marshall, Kittson, Roseau and Lake of the Woods County. It is estimated that around forty members will attend the business meeting in the afternoon, which will be held at the Holt School, followed by an evening dinner which will be served by the Ladies Aid of the Nazareth Lutheran Church. The Honorable Oscar R. Knutson, Judge of the 14th Judicial District will address the bankers at the evening dinner and Mr. Fricker, cashier of the local bank has also arranged several musical numbers.

Mr. W. R. Holbrook, Vice President of the State Bank of Warren and Mr. C. B. Dahlquist, Cashier of the Citizens State Bank of Roseau are President and Secretary, respectively, of this association.

The Holt News joins with the people of this village in welcoming the bankers to our village.

American Legion Meeting

The County Council of the American Legion will meet at Middle River Saturday evening, April 19 at 8 o'clock.

Speakers for the evening will be Joe Kise of Moorhead, District Commander; Leslie Welter, Legion contact representative of the Fargo hospital and Walter Johnson, Federal contact representative.

Elmer Eid of Grand Forks will also speak. Rev. Bergee of Middle River will be Chaplin for the evening.

Other numbers on the program will be selections by a male quartet, Accordian selection by Louis Swenson; and vocal solos by Ole Brenna, Jr.

Lunch served by Ladies Auxiliary of Middle River.

National Defense Agency

The Farm Security Administration of the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture has been designated as a National Defense Agency, according to word received this week by Hilding W. Thelander, Marshall and Penington counties FSA supervisor.

Federal programs contributing directly or indirectly, or both, to national defense have been given a defense rating. Mr. Thelander said a chief contribution of Farm Security to national defense is its rehabilitation of farm families who have suffered the plight of economic insecurity.

"The Farm Secnrity program is helping such families to achieve a 'stake' in democracy," said Mr. Thelander.

FSA makes short term, low interest loans to farmers unable to obtain credit from any other source. A farm and home management plan is worked out with each borrower family, with emphasis on diversified "live-at-home" farming which enables the family to produce much of its own food supply and feed for livestock.

L. L. Bible Camp Program

The Luther League of Nazareth Lutheran Church will sponsor their annual Bible Camp on Sunday evening. The program is so planned that every effort is being made to impress the work of the Lake of the Woods Bible Camp upon the young people and also their parents. Among the things planned is a Bon Fire scene where evening devotions are held which is very inspiring to the Campers. Then too the evening will be closed with a 30 minutes showing of colored movies from the 1938, 1939, and 1940 camps. If time permits, Rev. Hanson will show his personal movies of the 1939 and 1940 Camps. In the event that the church should be too crowded and all cannot see the Camp Movies, they will be shown again after the lunch hour. Lunch will be served by the young folks who have been at camp or are planning on going. There will also be a collection taken during the program. The proceeds from the collection will go towards the Bible camp. The local league has set a goal to attain and whatever may be derived above this goal, will go to those who are planning on attending camp this summer. The program begins promptly at 8:00 p. m. All are invited.

School Music Festival

The local school will present a program of music at the High School Auditorium, April 25th at 8:15 p. m. This program will consist of selections by the band, glee club, rythm band, piano students, and individuals. The groups have been working hard all year toward this event. There will be a admission charge of 10 and 15 cents to defer expenses of the glee clubs trip to the district contest. Make it a point to plan to be present for this enjoyable program.

THE pink and green chintz covered boxes on these closet shelves are lined with plain green cambric and they are hinged so that the front may be opened without taking off the lid. Any box of good stiff cardboard may be hinged and covered in this way. Library paste may be used or wall paper paste mixed with as little water as possible to make it spread smoothly with a paint brush. Adhesive tape or other strong gummed fabric tape will be needed to hinge the boxes.

ADHESIVE TAPE
CLIP
PASTE FABRIC AROUND SIDES OF BOX AND LID THEN PASTE PIECES ON TOP AND BOTTOM-LINE LID AND BOX WITH PLAIN CONTRASTING MATERIAL

Cut the box lid straight across with a sharp knife three inches in from the front edge. Cut out the front of the box and hinge the pieces in place. Now, cut and paste the covering pieces, as directed in the sketch. Apply the paste on both the back of the fabric and the box and smooth the material in place with a dry, clean cloth. Cover sides first with fabric straight around and about ⅛ inch over edges; then cover top and bottom; then the inner sides with the plain fabric ¼ inch below the edges and ½ inch over the top and bottom; then cover the top and bottom inside.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

STAGE ✩ SCREEN ✩ RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

WHEN you see "Men of Boys Town" (Spencer Tracy and Mickey Rooney), watch three very young men who have important roles; it's more than likely that, when they grow up, they'll be tops among leading men. Metro thinks so.

They are Darryl Hickman, aged eight; Bobs Watson, who's nine, and Larry Nunn, just thirteen. You probably saw Darryl as "Winfield Joad" in "Grapes of Wrath." Norman Taurog thinks he's one of the finest child actors he ever directed. Bobs has seven brothers and sisters who have film careers. Says Taurog, "Whenever I have needed a regular kid, I have found that I could depend on the Watsons." Bobs got his break because none of the other Watsons fitted the role.

As for Larry, he'd made a name for himself in radio before he tackled Hollywood, two years ago; "Strike Up the Band" was his first picture.

For more than a year there's been discussion at Warner Bros. about filming the life of George M. Cohan, and at last a deal has been arranged with the famous song and dance man. James Cagney will play the lead, probably getting to work on it some time this summer, after he returns from vacationing at his place at Martha's Vineyard, Mass. Mr. Cohan will supervise the production.

American people have more than a generous sense of humor; they have generous hearts as well. It's proved every Sunday on the "Double or Nothing" radio program. Walter Compton, master of ceremonies, asks each guest the name of his favorite charity; if the contestant can't answer his questions, the prize money is given to some charitable institution.

Leading figures of grand opera, the theater, the sports world and big business have tried their luck on the program, and many have given their winnings to less fortunate persons. Martha Raye and Frank Forrest, the program's popular tenor, gave theirs to the Red Cross. Lyle Talbot had a question from a woman who wanted to buy her blind son a Seeing Eye dog; he gave her his winnings, and the listening audience subscribed the remainder. Frederick Jagel of the Metropolitan Opera sent his to the Hundred Neediest Cases.

Rita Hayworth returns to her home lot, Columbia, to play opposite Fred Astaire, and dance with him in a musical, "He's My Uncle"—she's just finishing a dancing role in "Blood and Sand," with Tyrone Power. Penny Singleton was selected America's Number One Blonde by beauty shop owners and operators at the International Beauty Show held in New York recently. The pretty screen and radio star won out over Madeline Carroll and Alice Faye, who were runners-up; it was said that during the past year she'd done more than anyone else to make American men blonde-conscious. As "Blondie" on the screen and the air she's inspired many another young wife and mother, who've appreciated her quite as much as the men did.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Terrific Fighting Marks Nazi Thrust Into Jugoslavia and Greek Territory; British Lose Bengasi to Axis Forces But Capture Addis Ababa in Ethiopia

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BALKAN DRIVE:
Under Way

With Adolf Hitler's charge to "carry the war to Britain wherever she may be" ringing in their ears, the Nazi soldiers that make up his armies smashed across the frontiers of Jugoslavia and Greece.

Early reports of the fighting in the Balkans were vague, scattered, incomplete. Nazi claims indicated that their movements were on schedule. Greek sources at first claimed the Nazi heavily armored machine was bogging down.

One of the first objectives by the German forces was reached when armored troops and parachutists reported they had broken through to the Aegean sea in eastern Greece. This movement was said by military experts to cut off Greece from her potential ally, Turkey.

Even as the German troops moved toward the Jugoslavian and Greek borders announcement was made that Russia and Jugoslavia had signed a new "non-aggression" pact. British were hopeful that this was further indication of what appeared to be a trend of Soviet movement away from the Hitler sphere of influence.

In Jugoslavia before the fighting began there were last minutes moves to "placate Berlin," and a last-minute notice from Berlin that these peace overtures "came too late." But Jugoslavia apparently was standing for something far bigger and wider than her own narrow physical confines. Jugoslavia was becoming a byword for courage and daring throughout a jittery world.

Particularly was this noticeable in shaky spots like certain South American countries which saw in the sudden reversal of the Serbs, Croats and Slovenes against the government which had signed up with the Axis a sign that Nazi Germany might not have a sinecure in conquering Europe.

They saw that even in the midst of the Nazi-dominated Balkans a certain country, surrounded on four sides by enemies, could have the bravery to stand up to these enemies and to defy them, with all their superior power, to cross their rocky borders.

Not that anyone figured the Jugoslavs would be a "pushover" for the Nazis, in fact, the Nazi position was none too good, for most of the terrain held by them was hostile, and Britain, with 10 to 15 divisions of men, well provided with armored equipment and airplanes, were dug in just south of the Bulgarian border, ready to give Jugoslavia and Greece more than lip-service if, as, and when the attack should come.

C. Fotitch, Jugoslav minister, leaves the White House after calling upon President Roosevelt to thank him for his message to the boy monarch of Jugoslavia, King Peter.

What part the United States was playing could not be said, although President Roosevelt said that lease-lend aid was being sent to "more than one country," which might include Britain and Greece, or Britain and Jugoslavia, or all three.

Just before the statement from the White House was made, however, the President had conferred with the Jugoslavian minister.

How well prepared Jugoslavia was seemed to be a moot point. Food was short, but so it was in all the Balkans—in all Europe, for that matter. The numbers of the army were large, estimated at from 1,200,000 to 1,500,000, but these figures the Battle of France showed might mean much or little.

There were many who believed that the Jugoslavs, who have the advantage of having the crucial Danube river run through a portion of their country, the part of the river which is so rapid and hemmed in by mountains that a canal bears shipping at that point, might explode huge charges of TNT in the mountainsides and render river and canal unfit for shipping for many months.

Already they had blown up many important bridges in the valley of Vardar, and had shown a grim determination to make a fight out of the Nazi invasion at all points.

BRITISH:
Lose Bengasi

The evacuation of Bengasi, capital and port of Libya, was admitted by the British, who reported that the withdrawal was "according to plan" and that Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell was merely "picking his battleground" on which to meet the Nazi-reinforced Fascist troops.

Later dispatches seemed to indicate that the Australia-New Zealand army in Africa had halted the Nazi-Italian drive, for it was said that "the situation was well in hand," and the shooting down of six German planes and the damaging of two others was reported officially.

However, on the same day came war office warnings to the British public not to be surprised if there were further withdrawals, saying that it was officially doubted if the "halting" of the German-Italian advance was permanent.

Better news for the British however was the announcement that the Ethiopian capital of Addis Ababa had been taken from the Italians without a struggle. This capture came as a climax to eleven weeks of hard fighting to smash Italians African empire to bits.

IRAQ:
Stages Coup

There was a military coup d'etat in Iraq, historic Bagdad being the scene of a governmental overturn staged by army forces led by Rashid Ali Gailani.

The coup was viewed differently in various quarters, Bagdad itself, two days later, announcing that one of the main features of the new government would be fulfillment of all international obligations, particularly with Britain.

This is Emir Abdul Ilah, regent of Iraq, who ruled for five-year-old King Feisal II and is reported deposed and fleeing for his life after the military coup d'etat.

Previously it had been hinted in dispatches from London, passed by the censor, quoting Soviet circles in London as saying that it was believed the coup d'etat was inspired by the Axis, and that the objective was going to be the establishment of Nazi air bases in Iraq.

This naturally was disquieting to London, as if carried out it would place Nazi airplanes in a position of dangerous proximity to the Red Sea and the Suez canal, the defense of which had been going well for Britain.

STRIKES:
Mostly CIO

The calling of a strike against the plants of "Big Steel," the United States Steel corporation, by C.I.O. unions proved that the labor situation was still acute, although the soft coal strike was settled, and the men went back to work digging the important fuel out of the ground.

Just 48 hours before the settlement was reached, four men were shot to death in Harlan, Ky., a bloody center of previous strike rioting. Just before the settlement of the bituminous coal strike, it was estimated that 530,000 men were out of work in the United States as the result of strikes, adding considerably to the number of man-days lost in the national defense.

Philip Murray, head of the C.I.O., called the strike against U. S. Steel, declaring that the companies had refused to heed a demand for a 10-cent an hour wage increase. The company has 261,000 wage earners. The C.I.O. also wants a closed shop.

The Ford strike had closed the biggest single industrial plant in the nation, employing 86,000 workers.

Its gates were marked by many scenes of violence as pickets battled with workers.

Back of these front-line scenes were back-stage battles. The Ford counsel obtained an injunction against the strikers, and the strikers promptly subpoenaed Henry Ford, Edsel Ford and Manager Bennett to appear in court.

The next move saw Ford Attorney Capizzi making a court motion that all labor board citations against the company be thrown out as the C.I.O. union was dominated by Communists.

PATTERNS
SEWING CIRCLE

YOU must have a button-to-the-hem frock this season. This thoroughly American classic blooms in the spring with perennial but ever varied smartness. Here's a new design (No. 1338-B) that gives you a new slant on an all-important style — specifically, the rakish angle of the buttoned pockets, stressed by rows of stitching. The notched collar is made with the new longer points. Easy to make, to put on and to wear.

This classic style makes up smartly in practically every run-about fabric—flat crepe, thin wool, spun rayon and silk print. Pattern provides for short sleeves, or long sleeves in the popular bishop style. Detailed sew chart included.

Pattern No. 1338-B is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20. Corresponding bust measurements 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38. Size 14 (32) requires, with short sleeves, 4 yards of 39-inch material; long sleeves, 4⅜ yards. Send order to:

5. Bauxite.
6. A rodent found in China has earned this name because of its strange antics, apparently while trying to catch its own tail.
7. The iris.

TIPS to Gardeners

REGARDING HERBS

MANY home gardeners may be interested in growing herbs this year because of the war, and because they make everyday dishes more appetizing and flavorful.

Herbs may be grown in a plot about four by six feet to supply the average needs of a family. They should have full sunlight and be planted in good loamy soil.

Almost all popular herbs—balm, basil, borage, fennel, marjoram, rosemary, thyme, sage, anise, dill, and caraway—may either be used when young, and fresh, or prepared for use dried.

Anise, basil, borage, dill and savory are annuals; caraway, and fennel are biennials, and balm, marjoram, sage, rosemary, thyme and chives are perennials, although balm and marjoram are best treated as annuals.

All the herbs mentioned here will probably produce enough growth for use the first year, however, if seeds are planted early, and climate is normally temperate.

Household Hints

Chopped onions and celery, browned in chopped salt pork, improve the flavor of green beans, stewed tomatoes or carrots.

* * *

Add a tablespoon of flour to creamed butter and sugar before adding milk, when making a cake. This coats the fat particles and keeps the mixture from curdling.

* * *

Word of caution: If you are not going to wear your new hose promptly, rinse them carefully in warm water. This will prolong their wearing qualities.

* * *

Jerusalem cherry trees require twice as much water as other plants. Set pot with tree in it into water that comes up just over top of pot and let stand until water bubbles up.

HEALTH HINTS for LIVESTOCK

PREPARED BY AMERICAN FOUNDATION FOR ANIMAL HEALTH

THE 1941 SLEEPING SICKNESS THREAT

Owners of America's billion dollars worth of horses and mules are wondering just what to expect this year from the virus of dreaded sleeping sickness or encephalomyelitis.

Starting in California some ten years ago the disease gradually spread Eastward until in 1938 it resulted in some 300,000 cases with a 25 per cent death loss. Quick, cooperative campaigns by horse owners and veterinarians, using the newly developed vaccine made from chick embryos, held the disease in 1940 to some 8,000 cases.

All virus diseases tend to occur in cycles and there is no reason to believe that the virus of horse sleeping sickness is an exception. Weather conditions also influence this disease. It was especially prevalent in dry years when summer heat was severe.

To date, proper vaccination with two spaced doses of chick embryo vaccine is the only known safe and sure way to avoid fatal sleeping sickness. Horses and mules should be vaccinated at least a month before summer outbreaks of the disease are liable to occur.

Very recently, veterinary scientists have vastly improved the already efficient chick embryo vaccine. By proper refining methods, a large quantity of the chick embryo tissue which has no immunizing value is now removed. The vaccine this year will be for injection into the layers of the skin, and not under the skin as in the former product. The method is called "intradermal vaccination" and almost completely eliminates risk of unexpected swellings or aftermaths due to hypodermic punctures. Tests made on live horses show that the new intradermal method is even more efficient than the latest refined methods of last year.

Protecting against sleeping sickness by the new intradermal vaccination. This work should be done by a trained veterinarian.

While no one knows just what the disease will do this summer, all livestock authorities advise that the safest, best and cheapest thing to do is to have all work animals and riding stock properly vaccinated before the outbreak season. All horses and mules of the United States Army have received the new intradermal method this spring.

"BEER, the AMERICAN DRINK"

You are here in Minnesota—in America—because one of your ancestors was above average. Because he or she had that ingredient of daring—of adventure and love of liberty that caused his breaking tradition and venturing forth to a new land of opportunity.

In the toil and sweat of building a new country new habits and customs were formed. One of the early American customs woven into the pattern of life was the brewing and drinking of beer. The privilege of drinking beer brewed from grains grown on our own soil is the heritage of the masses who till the fields and do the work of the Nation. Truly it may be said that Beer is the American Drink.

Incidentally, every day our National Government is paid over a million dollars by the Brewing Industry. While the average citizen is carrying a heavy tax burden, it would be still greater if it were not for beer taxes.

Seven Million Trees To Plant

Seven million trees will be planted in Minnesota this sping in community and school forests as a result of recent legislation which enables the Department of Conservation to supply native coniferous forest planting stock for use on lands owned by the state or any political sub-division.

Trees may be planted upon lands set aside and dedicated to forestry or conservation purposes for period of not less than 25 years, according to the law. This means that for the first time state nurseries may furnish trees to counties, townships, villages and schools. Also closely cooperating with the new planting program is the state highway department.

Applications from communities all over the state for trees can't be filled by state nurseries in spite of the fact that for the past two years the reforestration program has been accelerated at the rate of three million trees a year.

Ready for planting now at the Badoura State Nursery are six million trees. Many private nurseries throughout the state have pledged cooperation with the Division of Forestry so that no community desirous of starting a forest will be without stock. Only "sub-divisions of the state" are eligible under the new law. This does not permit the Department of Conservation to furnish trees to individuals for farm woodlots nor does it permit the distribution of food and cover plants for game except on state lands.

The new law greatly assists in the reforestration of Minnesota's native coniferous trees such as white pine, norway pine, jack pine, white and black spruce, white cedar, tamarack or larch and red cedar.

Adult Confirmatirn Class

On Wednesday evening, April 30, at 8:00, there will be an Adult Confirmation Class organized in Nazareth Lutheran Church. The meeting will be held in the Church Parlors. The number of times to meet will be decided upon at this meeting. Dr. Martin Anderson's Adult Manual will be used. Anyone interested in this class is invited to be present. The adult class confirmed two years ago numbered seven and it is hoped that even more will atrend this spring.

Augustine-Lubitz Wedding

The Lutheran parsonage in Holt was the scene of a pretty wedding on Thursday afternoon, April 17, at 3:00 p. m. when Miss Angeline M. Augustine, daughter of Mr. J. P. Augustine, became the bride of Mr. Lawrence Lubitz. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated using the single ring ceremony. Their attendants were Miss Evelyn Bengtson, a friend of the couple and Mr. Marlan Augustine, a brother of the bride. The bride was attired in a Navy blue crepe street dress with a corsage of pink and white carnations and sweet peas. The bride's maid's dress was similar to that of the bride and she too wore a corsage of pink and white carnations and sweet peas.

Following the ceremony, the bridal party, together with a few friends and relatives were entertained at a luncheon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Benitt, east of town. Following the luncheon, the newly-weds left on a wedding trip to the southern part of the state. Upon their return, they will make their home at the Augustine farm where the groom is running his own farm nearby.

Girls Glee Club Rating

The success of the local High School Girls Glee Club at the district contest is indicated by the fine rating that they received. The girls were in competition with ten other schools, all of which are larger schools. Taking part were Hallock, Stephen, Argyle, Lake Bronson, Newfolden, Karlstad, Kennedy, Middle River, Lancaster, and Strandqnist. The local group received a B rating. Only Newfolden gained a higher rating. A great deal of credit is due the girls and their leaders Miss Sandberg and Miss Mattson, who have worked hard for this recognition. The judges comments were as follows "This glee club, singing 'Music When Soft Voices Die' reflect the youth of the girls' voices and as it is evident that many younger voices are being used, one can appreciate that tone is small. They are, however, singing with good attention to phrase endings and word endings. These girls seem to be interested in what they are singing and reflect it in the expression of their faces which is a very commendable thing. Rating B",

T. W. Thorson,
Director of Music of Crookston Schools.

Over fifty groups composed of over 600 students took part during the entire days program.

We have a record of the number sung by the girls at the contest. Anyone wishing to hear this may do so at any time by seeing Miss Sandberg.

Hear our Girls' Glee Club at the fine music program at the school house Friday evening.

Mrs. Julius Borchert of Mentor spent a few days this week at the G. Sanoden home.

Several little folks gave Evey Wegge a birthday party Saturday afternoon at the W. Wegge home.

Declamatory contest Thursday evening, May 1, at the Holt Highschool.

Luther League Convention

The annual convention of the Thief River Falls Circuit Young People's Luther League and Choral Union of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America will be held in First Lutheran Church Rev. E. B. Klaver, pastor, at Karlstad. The convention opens on Friday evening, April 25, and closes Sunday evening, April 27.

Rev. C. M. Hanson of St. Paul Evangelist in the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America will be the Convention Speaker. The program will be given by young people representing the 40 Leagues of the Circuit. The Choral Union Concert will be given on Sunday evening when the choirs from Thief River Falls, Roseau, Baudette, Greenbush, Viking, Middle River and other points form a massed choir and sing under the direction of Rev. H. O. Aasen of Baudette, assisted by H. M. Hitterdal of Thief River Falls.

The officers of the Luther League organization are: President, Rev. T. C. L. Hanson, Holt; Vice President, Mr. Raymond Dordal, Karlstad; Secretasy, Miss Tryphena Anderson, Roseau; Treasurer, Mr. Marl an Augustine. The Choral Union officers are: Chairman, Mr. John Imsdahl of Baudette; Sec.-Treas. Mrs. R. S. Rice, Roseau; Music Director, Rev. H. O. Aasen, Baudette; Assistant Music Director, Mr. H. M. Hitterdahl, Thief River Falls.

Indications are that a large number of young folks will attend from Holt. Miss Marian Backlund and Russel Sanoden are the delegates from Nazareth Luther League. Miss Evelyn Larson is giving a paper on the theme "the Way of the Ungodly." The Convention theme is based on Psalm 1 with the theme "Which Way?" If it is not possible to attend on Friday evening or Saturday, Sunday offers a fine program in divine worship in the forenoon. Rally services in the afternoon and the Convention closes with the Choral Union Concert in the evening.

Celebrate 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden were pleasantly surprised on Sunday afternoon when about 65 friends and relatives gathered at their home to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary.

A program consisting of speeches by Rev. Dordal, Mr. Borchert and Julius Borchert of Mentor; Mr. Thompson, Mrs. Lorentson, Mr. Karvonen and Rev. Hanson were given and vocal solos by Mrs. Dordal and Russel Sanoden.

Mr. and Mrs. Saneden responded expressing thanks.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanoden wore flowers, a gift from their daughter Opal. A beautifully decorated wedding cake, baked by Mrs. Borchert of Mentor, graced the table at which a buffet lunch was served.

The honor guests were presented with a set of dishes and a cash purse.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sandberg Mrs. C. A. Larson, Guy Anderson and Rev. Hanson were Crookston visitors on Tuesday.

Mrs. C. H. Gunheim, Mrs. Geo. Fricker, Mrs. O. J. Backlund, Mrs. Paul Olson and Mrs. H. O. Hanson were entertained at the G. Sanoden home Tuesday afternoon.

Defense Savings Bonds

The United States Defense Savings Bonds and Postal Savings Stamps will be placed on sale at the Holt Post Office at the opening of business on Thursday, May 1, as part of the national effort to make America.

Postmaster Inga O. Berget announced today that plans are nearly completed for this community, along with thousands of others from coast to coast, to do its full part at the opening of the savings program.

Postmaster General Frank Walker, in a letter to Postmasters throughout the country, said that the help of local postmasters would be "a real service to the country." A Defense Bond may be purchased May 1 for $18.75. In ten years, this bond will be worth $25.00. This is an increase if 33 and one thiid per cent, equal to an annual interest return of 2.9 per cent, compounded semi-annually. Any time after sixty days from the date of purchase, the bond may be redeemed for cash, in accordance with a table of redemption values printed on the face of the bond.

Local Bankers Hosts to Ass'n

The Marshall County State Bank entertained the members of the Northwest Clearing House Association at their annual spring meeting here on Saturday afternoon and evening. The membership of the clearing house association consists of members of banks from Pennington, Marshall, Roseau, Kittson and Lake of the Woods counties.

About forty members were here for the meeting and they were treated to a fine banquet at the Nazareth Lutheran Church which the local bank had arranged with the Ladies Aid to serve.

J. Fuller Pep
By JERRY LINK

The widow Brown who's been sparkin' old Jed Moore says it isn't Jed's dancin' that fascinates her; it's his "pep appeal."

Which shows she's a discernin' woman, because Jed's a full-fledged vitamin fan and eats his KELLOGG'S PEP every morning.

PEP hasn't got all the vitamins, of course, but it's extra-long on the two that are extra-short in many people's meals—B₁ and D. What's more, it's plumb delicious. Why not try it tomorrow?

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BECAUSE Carole Lombard and Clark Gable interested themselves in his career, tall, handsome Reed Hadley, who hails from Texas via New York theater and radio acting stopovers, appears to be safely launched in Hollywood.

He first attracted Miss Lombard's attention a few weeks ago, when he appeared with her on a national broadcast in New York. Gable met him at that time also. Both were impressed with young Hadley's appearance and talents. Gable suggested to Director Clarence Brown that Hadley be tested for the role of a young British officer in "The Uniform," at Metro, in which Gable and Rosalind Russell are co-starring. An important requirement was that the actor chosen for the role be able to wear a uniform worn by Gable. The young actor fitted the uniform, and the part was his—no test was required, just an interview with Brown. At the same time casting officials grabbed him for "Man From the City," with Robert Sterling, Paul Kelly and Marsha Hunt.

Ray Milland

Ray Milland is moving right ahead, and fast. After turning in a fine performance in "I Wanted Wings" he was chosen by Cecil B. De Mille for one of the two male starring roles in "Reap the Wild Wind." It's a tale of the Florida kets, a hundred years ago, and Milland is a fighting young lawyer from Charleston, who smashes a desperate crew of ship wreckers and wins the girl. John Wayne has the other stellar male role—that of a sea captain who also wants the girl. And all in Technicolor.

—*—

Getting a screen test isn't too easy, and Richard Wallace, director of Harold Lloyd's first production for RKO, "A Girl, a Guy and a Gob," explained why the other day. He computes the cost of a test at from $1,500 to $3,000. The candidate is brought to Hollywood, make-up artists go to work, hairdressers and wardrobe department heads are called in. An experienced actor is selected to appear opposite the candidate—and there are the salaries of the director, cameraman, electricians, sound men, etc. Then the candidate may be no good!

George Raft

George Raft, who has one of the largest and most expensive wardrobes owned by Hollywood actors, is breaking in some $22.50 suits for his role as a power lineman in Warner Bros.' "Manpower." That's the picture in which Humphrey Bogart was slated to share honors with Raft and Marlene Dietrich, but Raft, who wisely realizes his limitations, refused to appear with him. Ida Lupino didn't want the talented Mr. Bogart in "The Gentle People" with her, either. Warners offered him a nice, fat part in "Bad Men of Missouri" but he would have none of it, and was suspended.

—*—

John Loveton, producer of "The Court of Missing Heirs," insists that actors in mob scenes say sane, pertinent words. He had his lesson long ago; he was part of a mob scene on a radio drama broadcast, and when an unexpected silence fell on the air his voice boomed out, shouting "Gobble! Gobble! Gobble!" He's never acted since, but as a director he cracks down on anyone who doesn't contribute something sensible to those background murmurs and mutterings.

—*—

Paramount believes that a new Jean Harlow, or Clara Bow, has been discovered in the person of "sultry, blonde" Veronica Lake, (to quote a press agent) who is featured in "I Wanted Wings." "Not since Greta Garbo leaped to overnight fame in her first picture, "The Torrent," have New York movie critics lavished such acclaim upon a newcomer," to quote another press release. Maybe so, but the low cut of Miss Lake's necklines made such an impression on a good many people that they hadn't a great deal to say about her acting.

ODDS AND ENDS—Universal has taken an option on the screen services of Baby Sandy's brother—who is one week old . . . The March of Time's latest, "The F. B. I. —1941," shows how the Federal Bureau of Investigation is concentrating on the prevention of espionage and sabotage in industry . . . Mutual's "The People's Playhouse," heard Tuesdays and Thursdays, presents dramatic sketches based on ideas submitted by the public . . . RKO is screening "Parachute Battalion," with Robert Preston, Nancy Kelly and Harry Carey . . . You'll see Tommy Harmon, All-American half-back, in "Harmon of Michigan."

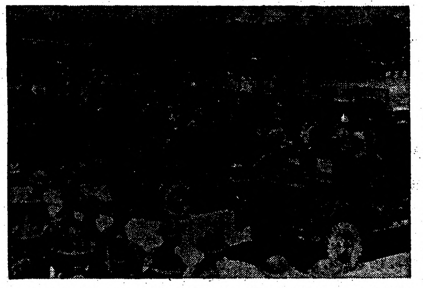
Conflicting British and Nazi Reports Tell of Fierce Fighting in Balkans; Russia-Japan Sign Neutrality Pact In Surprising Diplomatic Maneuver

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



Concrete evidence of the manner in which the U. S. army is being expanded in line with the defense speed-up is this view of the motorized Ninth division during a review at Fort Bragg, N. C. Some 15,000 men and about 1,500 vehicles of all types participated with three infantry companies marching in front of the motorized units.

BATTLE:
Of Greece

Descriptions tending to show that the Battle of Greece was becoming even fiercer and more furious than anything which had taken place in France or the Low Countries were penned by newspaper correspondents during the early days of the Balkan struggle, although these correspondents were having difficulty in getting their stories across.

Never in warfare had there been such confusion in reports. One day the Nazis predicted that the Jugoslavs would "surrender in 48 hours," that "tens of thousands of prisoners had been taken," that King Peter had fled to Turkey and that General Simovic had done likewise to Moscow.

On the same day the Jugoslavs denied all these reports and said their "resistance was stiffening," told of bitter "counter-attacks" and urged the people not to believe false reports.

Nazi reports that there had been a governmental overturn in Croatia were followed by dispatches telling of the invasion of Croatia by Hungary. On almost the same day came Serbian dispatches telling of "stern resistance" north of Zagreb, in the very territory where the Hungarian invasion was supposedly taking place.

Athens was virtually the only source, except Berlin, that was apparently getting news direct. From the Athens dispatches came a series of events that clarified themselves, though the picture in the gross was still much muddled.

These told of two main achievements on the Grecian front by the Nazi invaders. They were (1) the break-through from above the Struma river valley, and (2) the capture of Salonika.

The latter came with a suddenness that was utterly shocking to those who had believed that the Greeks would do the impossible, and put up a stern fight. It also was a shock to those who had believed that the British were based on Salonika.

A glance at the map showed the import of the news. Eastern Thrace had been cut off, and how many Greek soldiers were in that territory Athens alone knew.

The Nazis immediately sent out a dispatch saying that 300,000 men had "laid down their arms." The Greeks said they were continuing to fight, but admitted the eastern forces had been cut off. It was not immediately apparent why they would have to surrender, for the way seemingly open for them, if beaten, to retreat and interne themselves over the Turkish border.

Another vital phase of the battle then manifested itself, when it became known that the Greeks had decided to make their main defense line a V upside down, stretching from near Valona on the Adriatic up to Lake Ochrida in the center, and to the Aegean near Katerina on the east.

It became known that from Mount Olympus, mythical home of the Greek gods, near the Aegean sea, to Lake Ochrida was the "Anglo-Greek line" and that here the main resistance could be looked for.

The contact came after about five or six days of fighting, when the Germans broke through at Monastir gap (Bitolj) and ran slap into heavy British and Greek contingents.

What happened then was not clear, but the Greek dispatches immediately began to take on a new note of confidence. The Germans had been hurled back—their advance had been shattered, the Germans were in full retreat—these terms and others of like ilk were used.

Whether this would prove a turning point or a standing point where the war might halt its fierce movement, remained to be seen. Typical of the puzzling reports were some that told of British and Nazi tank battalions slashing in an open plain—when the relief maps showed the lines to be drawn in a mountainous territory.

According to the most optimistic Greek report, the vanguard of German tanks, motored armored cars, motorcycles and divebombers struck against the organized central line of the Greeks and British on a 12-mile front.

The report said "the defeat of this German column was a terrific disaster. The German tanks, motorcycles and infantry were hurled back into a broken retreat on a 12-mile front, from Florina to Vanitsa."

Berne, Switzerland, was one of the few points which was sending anything that sounded at all reasonable about the Jugoslavian situation. It seemed that the Serbs were planning to defend a big triangle, mostly mountainous, which seemed to leave Belgrade and other parts of the Jugoslav plain territory undefended.

One corner of this triangle was the southeastern town of Skolpje, but the fall of this point was early claimed by the Nazis. But for days thereafter the Jugoslavs were reported from Berne to be counter-attacking vigorously in this neighborhood, and to be driving southward from central Jugoslavia with determination and courage, determined not to be cut off from the Graeco-British lines.

Part of the German strategy, however, was to accomplish just this, and early it was claimed that the Germans and Fascists in northern Albania had joined hands, though this was not borne out immediately in subsequent stories from the front.

Churchill warned that some "surprise move" might come from Russia, and indeed the whole of Europe watched expectantly.

NEUTRALITY PACT:
Soviet-Japan

In an unexpected diplomatic move Russia and Japan announced the signing of a five-year neutrality pact between the two countries. In effect the pact provided that either nation would not become involved should the other find itself involved in war.

The pact came as a surprise to international observers who had been inclined to believe that the Russian government was beginning to lean away from axis-dominated policies. It was said in some sources however that Russia was anxious to be sure that she would not be attacked by Japan should the Soviet find it necessary to open a military drive against Hitler in the Balkans.

For Japan the pact looked like a green light for a further stepping up of war against China and an expansion move to the south in the Pacific area.

SPREAD RUBBER CEMENT ON BOTH SIDES OF EDGES AND THE BACK OF BIAS TAPE-LET DRY AND THEN PLACE TAPE OVER EDGE AND PRESS WITH A WARM IRON CUT CARDBOARD TO FIT OUTSIDE HAT CROWN
JOIN ENDS WITH GUMMED TAPE

FEMININE headgear usually holds its shape best if it rests right side up on a stand that fits inside the crown, but this is not true of a man's hat. Its dashing lines may be preserved by placing it upside down in a holder. All of which is worth remembering when you are fixing up "his" closet or even when you are generously preparing to share a small corner of your own.

The man's hat box, shown here, is covered on the outside with maroon and blue cotton print and lined with blue chambray. The lid and the front of the box are hinged with adhesive tape before the covering is pasted on with stiff paste. The stand is made of cardboard, as shown in the sketch, and is covered to match the box. The maroon bias tape edging of the stand is cemented in place in a way that you may find useful in making many other things. The secret is in spreading the cement evenly on both surfaces, letting it dry, and then vulcanizing the two together with the heat of the pressing iron.

TIPS to Gardeners

TRIM FLOWER GARDEN

THERE is much value in keeping the flower garden trimmed. Wise gardeners pick bouquets of favorite annuals like Marigold, Zinnia, Petunia, Sweet Peas and Snapdragon with systematic regularity, for the picking promotes continued blooming.

Periodic trimming is not best for such small, low-growing edging flowers as Alyssum. A complete cutting, however, will benefit this type of plant. This treatment may be applied to Ageratum, Linaria, Lobelia, and Nemesia as well as Alyssum.

Pinks, Cynoglossum, and Dwarf Bedding Rust Resistant Snapdragon are grown both for cutting and for garden beauty, but they too will profit by a thoroughgoing "haircut" such as that prescribed for the smaller, edging favorites.

It is advisable to pick the flowers of certain popular perennials when they are in their prime, to prevent their running to seed, and to promote the production of a second crop of blossoms in a single season. Delphinium, Sweet William, Coreopsis, Perennial Dianthus, and Pyrethrum should be handled in this manner.

Desperate Feud

The Tewksbury-Graham feud, which raged in Gila county, Arizona, between 1887 and 1892, was the most desperate fight of its kind in the history of the West. Starting with a dispute over stolen cattle, it quickly involved all the men and boys in three large families and numerous friends, all of whom, with one exception, were killed. In some of their battles as many as 20 men fought on a side.

British Coastline

Together with Scotland, Wales, and North Ireland, England has a varied shoreline of more than 5,000 miles to watch against threatened invasion. Near-by independent Eire, across the Irish channel, with approximately 1,000 of additional miles of coastline, is also a big worry to Britons, although Eire has declared that its defense will be managed without direct British military aid.

IT'S UP TO YOU TO JUDGE . . .

¶ Most large organizations today have skilled men whose job it is to create a public opinion favorable to the organization and its products. This is known as the creation of good will — one of the most necessary ingredients in business.

¶ But the peculiar thing about good will is that it only comes to those who deserve it. In other words, asking the public for good will is'nt enough: the business must be worthy of that good will through giving good service, through selling good merchandise, through maintaining fair prices.

¶ One of the chief services of advertising to you as a consumer has been in pointing out the manufacturers and merchants who deserve your good will. It has done this by telling you the story of their goods and their policies — and then letting you judge for yourself if they are worthy of your support.

¶ Advertising shows you exactly where you can buy, with perfect assurance that here you will find a man who is worthy, a product which is honest, a price which is right.

The Bible Camp Night held at the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Snnday evening was a successful event. Over 20 people took part in the program. The Bonfire scene won the acclaim of many. Colored movies of the Bible Camp were shown and faces fron Holt and community were much in evidence. Previously the Luther League had pledged $15.00 to the Building Fund at Camp. The financial object was to reach this amount and what may derived above this amount, would be used for the local leaguers to attend camp To the happy surprise of these young folks, the offering amounted to $14.30 and the sale of lunch netted $11.80, which left over $11.00 to be used by the Leagurers so they can attend camp. Later in the seasen, or on about June 22, the Leaguers plan to sponser some event for themselves, so they can raise about one half of their $5.00 Camp fee. The largest and most modern iron ore docks in the world, at Allouez, Wisconsin, owned and operated by the Great Northern Railway. "24" and "12" are magic figures here. They keep this part of America's life line flowing smoothly at peak efficiency—24 hours a day; ore cars 24 feet in length; 12-foot centers between openings to the ore pockets, loading chutes and hatches of the steamers. The docks, which extend 2,244 feet into the bay and rise 82 feet above the water, contain 1,352 pockets, each with a capacity of 327 long tons.

The G. N.'s No. 1 Job

Let's go up on the iron range, in northern Minnesota, where America's life line begins.

You stand on the brink of a yawning man-made chasm. In it could be dumped the Fort Peck, Grand Coulee and Boulder dams, or all the material excavated from the Panama Canal!

It's the largest, open-pit iron ore mine in the world—this mine at Hibbing—2½ miles long, a mile wide, and more than 300 feet deep. You're looking down on 60 miles of railroad track, with toy-like trains and power shovels scooping up the ore.

Down there, you realize, are the beginnings of battleships, airplanes, tanks, cannons, trucks, and automobiles.

For, from this red ore, the ingenuity of American industry creates everything made of iron and steel.

The task of moving nearly one-third of all the ore which the hard-pressed blast furnaces of this nation can handle this year is the Great Northern's No. 1 job on the national defense program.

Between the opening of navigation this spring and next fall's freeze-up—about 210 days—the Great Northern will be called upon to move 24 million long tons of iron ore from the open-pit and underground mines on the Mesabi range and load it into boats at the head of the lakes.

It will require thirteen trains a day during most of the season—each loaded with more than 10,000 long tons of iron ore—a shipload to a train!

2,200 cars of ore a day will have to be assembled on the iron range; moved 112 miles to the terminals at Allouez; and a corresponding number of empty cars returned and distributed to the mines.

Each carload of ore has been sampled before it leaves the mine, and in the Allouez yards the cars are switched and assembled so that whole boatloads of the ore can be built up in sections of the ore docks to meet the different specifications required by various steel mills.

Modern facilities and equipment, together with a highly specialized personnel, enable the Great Northern to meet these demands of a national emergency with the utmost confidence that its obligations will be fully and competently discharged.

Rotate Your Garden Crop

Most Marshall county farmers would expect poor results if they raised the same crop on the same land year after year, paying no attention to the principles of good rotation. And yet, says County Agent R. A. Reierson, good farm crops men have a way of putting the garden in the same spot for years on end. Lack of rotation is one of the chief reasons why gardens on some farms have a way of "fizzling out" in spite of good care, he believes.

E. M. Hunt, extension horticulturist at University Farm, says that rotation is probably the most important step toward elimination of the plant diseases and insect pests that make gardening distasteful to so many people. Old garden ground becomes infested, and the same pests will attack several different kinds of plants.

The early spring herbs and vegetables that are most suitable for the small backyard garden are not as susceptible to disease as those that make their most important growth in the midsummer months. Therefore, it often works well to put these in the garden plot close to the kitchen door.

On the other hand, crops such as tomatoes, melons, cucumbers, babbage, beans and peas, sweet corn and potatoes will usually do best on rotation ground some distance from old garden plots. These same crops are also well suited to cultivation with horse and tractor implements.

Hunt's recommendation is, therefore, to have two gardens, a small one close to the house for early vegetables and flowers, and a large quantity production plot on good soil, possibly in connection with a cornfield.

Given Wedding Reception

Friends and relatives from Thief River Falls, Middle River and Holt gave Mr. and Mrs. Orville Risberg (Hazel Furr) a wedding reception at the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Thursday evening. A short program was given and a delicious lunch served. The honor guests received many nice gifts.

Iron Ore Taxes Increased

Members of Minnesota's legislature were back at home this week after a strenuous closing week of the session in which they increased the state occupational and royalty taxes on iron mining, reduced the state tax on property and put through many other important bills affecting the state as a whole.

The legislator voted before adjourning to limit the state tax on property to a maximum of nine mills for each of the next two years, compared to the ten mills which had prevailed for some years.

The occupational tax on iron mining was placed at 10½ per cent for the next two years, making the highest rate by a considerable margin that has ever been imposed on the mining companies. The mining companies have paid an occupational tax of 9 per cent during the past two years. A provision was attached to the bill offering a special concession to companies mining low grade ores and underground ores where labor costs are high. Deduction of a percentage of the labor costs will be allowed in the case of such companies to encourage development of the low grade ores and increase employment. The royalty tax was placed at the same rate as the occupational tax.

The legislature included in the occupational tax bill a provision recommended by Gov. Stassen, setting aside 5 per cent of the money received by the state general revenue fund from the tax during the coming year and 10 per cent thereafter to promote the development of new resources and rehabilitation of the people in the mining areas, the work to be carried on under direction of a commissioner of iron range resources.

Coupled with the fight over the iron ore bills in the closing days of the session was a bill placing lower per capita limitations on expenditures of some of the communities on the iron range. The bill was passed after amendments had been made making its provision less drastic.

Another measure occupying attention of the legislature in the closing days was the puzzling question of relief. After discarding various proposals, the two houses finally passed a bill appropriating $9,000,000 for relief, to be financed by issuance of bonds. The proposed cigarette tax, urged as a means of providing a larger relief fund, was killed, as were other plans for getting additional revenue, among them a series of bills designed to give the large cities a chance to levy local relief taxes.

Increased provision was made for school aid during the closing days of the session. The bill as finally passed carried appropriations $8,102,000 for the first fiscal year of the biennium and $8,257,000 for the second year. This is $559,000 more than was appropriated for the two years of the last biennium.

Less spectacular than some other sessions, the session just closed passed nevertheless a number of measures that have statewide interest. Among such measures, put through earlier in the session, were:

Abolition of the one-mill Dunn road tax on property, removing a tax of about $1,200,000 on property.

Enactment of a 4 cent gasoline tax, which will make available about $4,000,000 more money for roads after deducting the loss from the one-mill tax.

Passage of the "crude petroleum" bill, allowing farmers to get an improved tractor fuel taxfree, without having to obtain refunds.

Enactment of an 8 percent excise tax on income of banks.

Foot Prints on the Sands of Time

The past record of a man or an institution is a reliable omen of the present or future. A long record of reliable, honest and sincere service, are factor that make up a part that can truly be pointed to with pride, these are "footprints" that lead to success.

The past record of this paper is our strongest recommendation.

We today pass into another stretch of time, having started Volume No. 31 of the News and hope that we have so served our readers and advertisers that we may merit your continued support in this field of business.

We have been at the piloting end of this paper for the past sixteen years and have seen some very exciting changes take place in this community. This paper is the historian of this peaceful community. In the files of it you can check back thru the copies of 1,560 weekly issues In these fifteen hundred numbers are recorded a lot of local history about Holt and the people in the entire community.

Had Successful Convention

The Young People's Luther League Convention and Choral Union held in Karlstad last week was very successful with a fine program and large crowds at all sessions. Rev. T. C. L. ## Defense Savings Bonds

The United States Defense Savings Bonds and Postal Savings Stamps will be placed on sale at the Holt Post Office at the opening of business on Thursday, May 1, as part of the national effort to make America impregnable.

Postmaster Inga O. Berget announced today that plans are nearly completed for this community, along with thousands of others from coast to coast, to do its full part at the opening of the savings program.

Postmaster General Frank Walker, in a letter to Postmasters throughout the country, said that the help of local postmasters would be "a real service to the country." A Defense Bond may be purchased May 1 for $18.75. In ten years, this bond will be worth $25.00. This is an increase of 33 and one third per cent, equal to an annual interest return of 2.9 per cent, compounded semi-annually. Any time after sixty days from the date of purchase, the bond may be redeemed for cash, in accordance with a table of redemption values printed on the face of the bond.

Returned Home Sunday

Mrs. Victor Johnson returned to her home here on Sunday after a four year stay at the sanitorium at Thief River Falls. We are snre that her family were all smiles to see their mother come home and the entire community wishes her the very best of a welcome back to her home and friends here.

Two cars of stock were shipped out of here Saturday. The Association shipped a car and Mr. Benitt accompanied that to South St. Paul and H. Moberg shipped the other carload. According to reports the stock prices are very good now.

Many farmers here have built new brooder houses this spring and are going into chicken and turkey raising on a much heavier scale than before.

TIPS to Gardeners

BULB SUBSTITUTES

WITH the supply of many popular spring-flowering bulbs cut off because of the war in Europe, gardeners are seeking certain substitutes.

The color and form of many annual flowers makes them excellent choices for replacing the bulb favorites. As in the case of bulbs, the seed of these annuals may be planted in the early fall, for blossoming early the following summer.

The fresh yellow color of Daffodils, for instance, may be captured nearly as well in the petals of Sunshine Calendula, or in the rich hues of California Poppy (Extra Golden). The shape of the California Poppy and the Shirley Poppy closely approaches the typical Tulip shape.

The soft colors associated with the Tulip may be replaced best by Larkspur, with its tints of white, blue, pink, rose, lilac, and carmine. The newer, tall-growing Super Majestic Larkspurs are most desirable.

The blossom-crowded spikes of Snapdragons are likened by many to the Hyacinth. It is best to grow the dwarf rust-resistant strains of Snapdragon, with attractive varieties such as Compact Bedding Bronze, and Salmon Pink adaptable also because of their suitability for massed bedding, as Tulips are so often used.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

British and Greek Retreating Action Inflicts Heavy Loss on Nazi Troops; Convoying of Ships to British Isles Receives Careful Study by Congress

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

GREECE:
And Britain

Backs to the wall, with the Swastika flying on historic Mount Olympus, Greeks and British fought side by side a continuing rear-guard action which was costing the Nazi forces dearly for each mile of territory gained, but which even the Greeks and British believed could have only one finish—ultimate defeat.

The Germans were seeking this victory to give it to Der Fueher as a fifty-second birthday present, but this was denied them. Yet the latter days of the fighting were marked by a curious attitude on the part of the British press—many of the papers calling for a withdrawal of the troops while the daily reports told of marvelous resistance, of heavy toll from the attackers' columns, and long lines of prisoners and wounded in Nazi uniforms pouring into Athens.

Generally speaking, there was little, if any, bombing of the historic Greek capital, cradle of modern civilization, filled with priceless relics of the days of Pericles. The Germans claimed they were bombing Athens not at all. There were, in fact, small reports of damage, much smaller than would have been the case if bombing of the capital were a part of the German plan.

KOSTAS KOTZIAS
He faced a difficult task.

The first German success in Thrace and Macedonia was followed by a general and continued advance toward strategic points, and culminated in a break-through, which forced the abandonment of the Mount Olympus line, and the entrance of the attackers into the vast Thessalian plain.

The Nazi tactic seemed to call for picking out one or two vital weak spots in the defenders' positions, and attacking these with furious pincers assaults, exactly similar to the method used in the Battle of France.

That they were not immediately successful in a larger measure was a tribute to two things—the fighting qualities of British and Greeks, and the absence of panic-jammed roadways, interfering with orderly military transport.

Not repeated were the awful scenes of Poland, where the Nazi tanks advanced to their triumphal-entry of Warsaw over the terrified and broken bodies of thousands of Polish civilians—men, women and children.

And these also had been the scenes enacted in the Low Countries, where the Nazi Panzer operators themselves were said to have been sickened as the caterpillar tractors ground noncombatants' bodies into the pavements of the roads on which they swarmed in their forward march.

Yet the outcome of the battle was hardly expected to be favorable to the defenders. This was seen in the earliest statements of Churchill himself, in the continued demand that the British defenders take to their ships and escape while they might, in the sudden "suicide" of Alexandros Korizis, premier of Greece, who, it was announced officially from Athens, took his own life in anguish at the failure of his country's defense.

The turbulent character of the news caused this death to be reported as a mystery for nearly 48 hours, with German sources claiming that the British had murdered Korizis "because he had wanted to surrender the Greek army," and other sources claiming that he was murdered by Nazi agents who wanted his natural successor, said to be more pro-Axis, in his place.

But King George II foiled any such plot, if plot there was, by taking the reins of government in his own hands, and forming a military cabinet to take the place of that headed by Korizis.

Kostas Kotzias was named vice premier and charged with the difficult task of forming the new cabinet.

In the midst of this gloomy outlook, President Roosevelt said that one of the dangers of the entire American setup for the national defense and aid to embattled democracies was that the people "are not sufficiently aware of the serious character of the European war situation."

This condition, the President said, it will be his purpose to attempt to rectify, though how he was to do it was not immediately apparent.

CONVOYS:
And Mr. Tobey

Senator Tobey of New Hampshire got onto the front pages with a bang when he, the original foe of convoying, openly declared that he had been informed by certain persons whose anonymity he protected, that the United States already was engaged in convoying aid-to-Britain materials on Atlantic waters.

This was immediately and categorically denied by two authorities. These were Secretary Hull and Admiral Stark. The administration rested on these denials, and administration spokesmen said they certainly believed the public should believe the positive testimony of these two men rather than the unsupported and anonymous evidence presented by Senator Tobey.

However, though this apparently spiked Tobey's verbal guns, Senator Nye stepped into the breach and took up the fight and always in the background were Senator Wheeler and other isolationists to keep kicking the anti-administration ball around.

Wheeler's slogan was that the public wanted to keep the country out of war, but the Gallup poll found that 27 per cent of the people were even willing to send part of the navy and part of the air force overseas right now, though only 17 per cent were interested in sending part of the army.

But there seemed a definite dissatisfaction with the British convoy method, that of sending 30 or 40 ships with a couple of small naval vessels as guard, and no guard at all until the forty-second parallel of latitude was reached.

SENATOR CHARLES W. TOBEY
"Front pages with a bang."

The American method, of parallel lines of naval vessels guarding the whole route, and each ship moving at its natural speed, gained more favor, yet how Britain could spare the ships without more aid from the U. S. navy appeared the major problem.

And this brought the convoy question popping up again and again.

JUGOSLAVIA:
Gesture

The sudden capitulation of the entire Jugolsavian army after nine days of brave fighting against insuperable odds and under impossible conditions, made of the Serbian and Slovene resistance simply a noble gesture that brought a sympathetic response from watchers on both sides of the Atlantic.

Maj. George Fielding Eliot, one military columnist, said the Jugoslav sacrifice was not in vain, and pointed out the military advantages it gave to Greece.

Yet to the man in the street it had been a vain sacrifice, they were unable to understand its benefits, and all that emerged was the gesture of bravery, of independence, of hoping against hope that their autonomy, their homes, their nation and their freedom might be saved.

Many expressed themselves puzzled that the Jugoslav nation should have resisted at all.

Military Medal

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Corporal Harold Sims, grandson of Admiral William S. Sims, commander of the U. S. navy in the World war, is shown leaving Buckingham palace after he had been decorated with the Military Medal by King George.

U. S. ARMY:
Training

The early contention of many army experts that America could not hope to train men in modern warfare in one calendar year, starting with the raw civilian, brought from many sources the word that it would be more than borne out now that the troops were proceeding into advanced training.

The army had now reached, in numbers, well past 1,200,000 men, and in this group were 27 infantry divisions alone. These men, it was said, already had been given a good course in basic discipline and ordinary infantry training, but even this was entirely preliminary to serious consideration of modern warfare, and was not finished yet.

One American officer, in the Army Journal, criticized the war department for permitting delays in the training of troops. It was said that there was a good deal of irritation expressed in high department quarters over the frank words of this officer.

One of the chief bottlenecks, of course, has been the lack of equipment of the newest types with which to train the men, assuming that their basic course is soon finished.

But the article in the Army Journal and another in the Cavalry Journal commenting on the first, revealed that our army is lagging in instruction on the use of flamethrowers, on defense against chemical warfare and in many other fields, particularly as to modern combat.

A plan to cut the draft age down to 18 met early antagonism in congressional circles, but that the administration had not abandoned the idea was seen in facts and figures later made public.

For instance, the Census Bureau estimated that the lowering of the age limit would place 3,645,267 more men within the range of the selective service law.

But if the maximum age limits were lowered to 30 years, more than 5,000,000 would be taken out of the law's scope, it was said.

LONDON:
Really Blasted

Lest Britain might think that Hitler had moved all his air force into Africa and the Balkans, the German Luftwaffe started a terrific series of raids on London, doing the British capital damage on such a large scale and causing so many casualties that accurate estimates were not obtainable a week later.

Lord and Lady Stamp, the former honored repeatedly in this country, were killed, removing an important figure from the government. City block after city block was demolished. Hundreds and hundreds of persons were wiped out in underground shelters, struck by direct hits.

The first raid lasted 10 hours. The second, Hitler's "birthday blitz," was only slightly less severe.

Britain came out of it with Londoners fighting mad, walking about the streets, looking at the wreckage, demanding "Bomb Berlin, Bomb Berlin!" They scrawled these words with chalk on the sidewalks, on the walls of torn buildings, they chanted it in the canyons of their wrecked city.

The R. A. F. had stormed Berlin a few days before the first big raid, and the raid itself had been a reprisal—but the British forgot this and demanded more reprisals. This the R. A. F. did the following day, the air ministry announcing that bombs of a larger caliber than ever used before had been dropped on the German capital.

German admissions of damage were small. Only 15 had lost their lives in the first raid, Berlin said, and no casualties and minor damage was reported in the second. How true this minimizing of the damage was, no official report revealed, but returning British airmen claimed the result of the reprisal was "extensive."

The slamming attacks of the German air force continued all over the British isles with one foray over northern Ireland, with Belfast hard hit.

Mr. Menjou, famous for his wardrobe, and Miss Swanson, equally famous for hers, have been having wardrobe tests at RKO; she has a reputation in New York for being able to wear just anything at all and look smart in it.

✳

Joan Crawford's New York fans, who troop around at her heels whenever she's in town, recently presented her with a rather staggering birthday gift—a birthday card more than two feet square, which they'd had autographed by dozens of famous theatrical people.

✳

The public apparently spends a lot of time and thought on trying to beat the quiz shows; the newest wrinkle bobbed up recently in connection with Ben Bernie's program. For two weeks he was besieged with requests for tickets to the repeat show. Here's the reason:

The final contestants vying for the prize of $100 are selected by their ability to guess from a recording how many shots are fired out of a machine gun in so many seconds. One night on the first show, the number of shots fired was 52. On the repeat show, all the contestants promptly guessed 49, 50 and 51. But they were fooled—Bernie had 93 shots fired the second time, by letting the record run longer.

✳

Because a singer on the "Uncle Ezra" program got a chance to make a movie with Shirley Temple, the announcer on the same program gets a chance to be a network singer. The first singer is Bob Nolan, the announcer is Cy Harrice.

✳

ODDS AND ENDS—Clark Gable's next for Metro, "Honky Tonk," in which Lana Turner will appear opposite him, turns him into a confidence man and swindler who becomes a power in a town in the Yukon . . . RKO will introduce a new romantic team in "Lady Scarface"—they're Frances Neal and Dennis O'Keefe, and the story's a comedy with a gangland background . . . Wendy Barrie and George Sanders will be teamed in "The Gay Falcon," mystery picture to be made by RKO; Michael Arlen (remember "The Green Hat"?) is the author . . . George Brent and Basil Rathbone have the leads in "G-Man Versus Scotland Yard."

Secret of Tanks

Army tanks were so named almost by accident. They were called "tanks" by the British war office early in the 1914-18 war, before they made their public appearance, in order to prevent information of their real nature passing into enemy hands. Letters, telegrams, and telephone messages concerning "tanks" would cause no suspicion regarding their real nature . . . and the name stuck.

Tanks were first used in the British attack on Flers on September 15, 1916.

That Nagging Backache
May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action
Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.
You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

PATTERNS
SEWING CIRCLE

DO YOU take a large size—anywhere between 36 and 52? Then this dress will simply delight you. It's so becoming and successful that two neckline styles are suggested in the pattern (No. 1333-B). One is the plain v-neckline cut to smart new depth, and the other is turned back in narrow revers. Make the dress in household cottons, trimming with braid and adding a couple of pockets, and it will be one of your most comfortable work-a-day styles. Make it of light, inconspicuous prints, flat crepe or spun rayon for street wear, with plain neckline, softened by a narrow touch of contrast.

The detailing is perfectly planned to create the high-busted, slim-hipped line most becoming to large figures. The skirt has a gradual flare. It's one of those utterly simple dresses that has loads of distinction.

Pattern No. 1333-B is designed for sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 38 requires, with short sleeves, 5⅛ yards of 39-inch material without nap; long sleeves, 5¼ yards. 1⅛ yards braid or ¾ yard contrast for neck fold. Detailed sew chart included. Send order to:

The largest and most modern iron ore docks in the world, at Allouez, Wisconsin, owned and operated by the Great Northern Railway. "24" and "12" are magic figures here. They keep this part of America's life line flowing smoothly at peak efficiency—24 hours a day; ore cars 24 feet in length; 12-foot centers between openings to the ore pockets, loading chutes and hatches of the steamers. The docks, which extend 2,244 feet into the bay and rise 82 feet above the water, contain 1,352 pockets, each with a capacity of 327 long tons.

The G. N.'s No. 1 Job

Let's go up on the iron range, in northern Minnesota, where America's life line begins.

You stand on the brink of a yawning man-made chasm. In it could be dumped the Fort Peck, Grand Coulee and Boulder dams, or all the material excavated from the Panama Canal!

It's the largest, open-pit iron ore mine in the world—this mine at Hibbing—2½ miles long, a mile wide, and more than 300 feet deep. You're looking down on 60 miles of railroad track, with toy-like trains and power shovels scooping up the ore.

Down there, you realize, are the beginnings of battleships, airplanes, tanks, cannons, trucks, and automobiles.

For, from this red ore, the ingenuity of American industry creates everything made of iron and steel.

The task of moving nearly one-third of all the ore which the hard-pressed blast furnaces of this nation can handle this year is the Great Northern's No. 1 job on the national defense program.

Between the opening of navigation this spring and next fall's freeze-up—about 210 days—the Great Northern will be called upon to move 24 million long tons of iron ore from the open-pit and underground mines on the Mesabi range and load it into boats at the head of the lakes.

It will require thirteen trains a day during most of the season—each loaded with more than 10,000 long tons of iron ore—a shipload to a train!

2,200 cars of ore a day will have to be assembled on the iron range; moved 112 miles to the terminals at Allouez; and a corresponding number of empty cars returned and distributed to the mines.

Each carload of ore has been sampled before it leaves the mine, and in the Allouez yards the cars are switched and assembled so that whole boatloads of the ore can be built up in sections of the ore docks to meet the different specifications required by various steel mills.

Modern facilities and equipment, together with a highly specialized personnel, enable the Great Northern to meet these demands of a national emergency with the utmost confidence that its obligations will be fully and competently discharged.

Help Norway May 17

More than 500 communities throughout the nation will celebrate May 17th, Norway's Independence, with fund raising programs for the benefit of Norwegian Relief.

This is the announcement today of Dr. Orlando Ingvoldstad, Chicago, executive secretary of Norwegian Relief who has set a goal of one million dollars by June 1. The campaign will reach its climax on the "Syttende Mai", traditional Norse Festive Day.

Programs will include nationally known speakers.

Duluth has booked Mayor Brock of Narvik. Minneapolis is staging a mass rally in its municipal auditorium. Chicago has planned programs. The St. Olaf College Lutheran choir is dedicating a program to the people of Norway in a radio broadcast on May 16 under the direction of the world famous F. Melius Christensen.

"According to recent news dispatches, the people of Norway will be forced to toil on their traditional holiday. We in our freedom can by our programs and contributions bolster the morale of a nation in need. We can send supplies, food, clothing and shelter now urgently needed in Norway", Dr. Ingvoldstad said.

"Throughout the country the response to the appeal for funds is gratifying", the secretary said. "Scores of examples of persons making actual sacrifices in order to make a contribution, have come to our attention. Small communities in the midwest are measuring their gifts in thousands of dollars instead of hundreds."

There's the story of a small town editor who dropped into a restaurant and ordered milk and bread. A man sitting next to him asked, "On a Diet?" the fellow sighed, "Naw, on a weekly newspaper.

One Dollar Fishing License

New one dollar fishing licenses authorized by the recent legislature were mailed to all county auditors this week as the state attorney general ruled all anglers must purchase the higher permit to participate in the current angling season.

Looking toward new revenue for an expanded fish propagation program, the new fishing license law provided:

1. Increase of the individual resident angling license from 50 cents to one dollar effective at once.

2. A resident man-and-wife license for $1.50

3. That persons receiving old age pensions may fish without purchasing a license; they will be issued a special "no fee" license.

Attorney General Burnquist, in a special opinion covering the new statute, also ruled fishermen who have purchased 1941 license for 50 cents must cash these in on the one dollar permits. They will be given a half dollar credit.

Old age pensioners who have already purchased 1941 license for 50 cents may not be given refunds under the law, Burnquist said. Along with other fisherman pension recipients, they must apply for the special "no fee" license.

Printing presses hummed Monday night--only a few hours after Governor Stassen signed the bill--grinding out supplies of dollar licenses for county auditors. These were to be placed in the mail Tuesday and Wednesday to reach all regions before start of the trout season.

Conservation Commissioner W. L. Strunk, although cautioning all anglers to secure the dollar permits as soon as they are available, said fishermen will not be held responsible for them in the event county auditors have not received the new forms. However, he warned, the Department expects to have all supplied with the licenses this week.

Under the new fish license law 60 percent of all receipts are earmarked expressively for the Fish Propagation Fund -- monies which must be devoted exclusively to fish propagation activity including new hatcheries, research, and lake and stream surveys.

School Election

In accordance with the amended school election code the annual school election of the Holt Consolidated School District No. 35 will be held on Tuesday, May 20th from 8 p. m. to 9 p. m. It will also be necessary for the candidates for office to file by Tuesday, May 13th. Filing can be made with the clerk of the Board of Education. There will be two directors elected for a three year term. The terms of Mr. Sanoden and Mr. Moberg expire this year.

The Weather

The weather this week has been on the cold and wet order. Late Monday we had a hard wind and heavy rain. Tuesday night we had more rain and all day Wednesday it kept up a steady drizzle that threathened to turn to snow. As we went to press yesterday it was still cloudy and, cold as a fall day.

Examine Crippled Children

An opportunity for medical examination and other valuable services will be provided for the crippled children of this district who are under 21, and financially unable to obtain private orthopedic care at a clinic to be held at the High School Building in Thief River Falls, May 17. Registration hours will be from 8 a. m. to 2 p. m.

It is requested that persons attending the clinic for the first time bring a letter from their family physicians. In addition to the medical examination, which will be given by an orthopedic specialist, the clinic service includes an opportunity for vocational consultation. Arrangements will also be made for hospitalization and field nursing sesvice for those cases requiring it.

A local advisory committee composed of a nurse from the Bureau for Crippled Children and representatives of local groups will have charge of arrangements in the district. Mrs. Clara Paulson is general chairman.

The clinics, which form a part of the regular program of the Bureau for Crippled Children, are conducted with cooperation of the physicians of the Minnesota-Dakota Orthopedic Club, the Giltette State Hospital for Crippled Children, the Vocational Rehabilitation Division of the State Department of Education, and the Minnesota Public Health Association.

Women's Federation Meeting

The annual spring meeting and Rally of the Women's Missionary Federation, Thief River Falls District, of the Lutheran Free Church will be held Thursday, May 15 at Greenbush, Minn. There will be two sessions. The morning session beginning at 10:30 will feature Mrs. M. G. Vaageness, missionary on furlough from Madagascar, as the guest speaker. The afternoon session will be taken up with business of the Federation, such as election of officers and discussion of projects being carried out this year. Members from the various congregations will furnish music and give short talks to add to the fellowship.

All ladies aid presidents and officers are especially urged to be present and as many other ladies of the congrygations as can possibly attend are invited to do so. The Bethania Ladies Aid of Greenbush will serve a noon luncheon between sessions.

Willie was on the hunt for information. He had been set to entertain a portly visitor, who, having no inquisitive children of his own, had answered all his questions with unusual patience.

"And what," was Willie's 198th question, "are houses made of?"

"Houses," replied the stout man, "are made of bricks."

"And what are engines made of?"

"Engines are made of iron."

"And what is bread made of?"

"Flour."

After a pause, Willie asked: "Well, what are we made of?"

"Dust and earth, my son."

"My," said Willie, "they must have made a whacking big hole when they took you out!"

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

TWO April weddings in the Hollywood movie colony are still topics for conversation, one because it was so conventional, for Hollywood, the other because it was so unusual for that colony and just the accepted thing anywhere else.

The Yuma marriage of Constance Bennett and Gilbert Roland was Hollywoodian. It was Miss Bennett's fourth marriage, they drove to Yuma by themselves and the clergyman had to supply witnesses. The other, Deanna Durbin's marriage to Vaughn Paul, was a big church wedding, very beautiful, and motion picture stars who were friends of the bride and groom were invited but not featured as part of the performance. An achievement, in Hollywood!

Rudy Vallee is ready to chuck his areer and undertake a new one at the drop of a megaphone. Now appearing in Columbia's musical picture, "Time Out for Rhythm," with Ann Miller, Rosemary Lane and Allen Jenkins, he's ready to drop acting and singing if he can get a chance to direct pictures. He's even bought a home in Beverly Hills to be near the center of the movie business.

During the next few months there will be a virtual parade of film players to the Latin-American countries. Spencer Tracy and Eleanor Powell are slated for good-will visits; Douglas Fairbanks Jr. will be a sort of good-will ambassador, and Marsha Hunt plans on spending six weeks in South America after she's finished "Blossoms in the Dust."

Orson Welles

"Citizen Kane," Orson Welles' first RKO Radio production, aroused plenty of controversy long before it was released, and will be one of those pictures that people will argue about years after they've seen it. It may not be the best picture ever made, but certainly it is one of the best—but there are those who maintain that it should never have been made at all. Welles himself scores superbly as writer, actor and producer; the rest of the cast is so good that you forget that they're acting.

The first day she appeared on the "Manpower" set Marlene Dietrich announced that she'd take whatever punishment the script asked George Raft to hand her. That included his slapping her twice across the face, knocking her down a flight of stairs, then leaping after her and hitting her across the mouth with the back of his hand.

But George hit her harder than he intended, Marlene tumbled down the stairs (as per script), but wound up by severely spraining her ankle (which the script did not call for!).

Two more well known stage and screen players—Martha Sleeper and William Harrigan—have joined the cast of "We Are Always Young," Mutual chain's star-studded serial. That cast probably includes more "name" actors than any other serial on the air; among them are Jessie Royce Landis, Linda Watkins, Margalo Gilmore, Joe Laurie Jr., Horace Braham, Pert Kelton, George Coulouris, and William Janney, who's starred.

*

Andy Hardy's own, a squadron of RAF fighters, will soon take to the air. Mickey Rooney, the Hardy series "Andy," received a letter the other day from a young RAF flier who wrote "We're all young fellows in this squadron and we all think you're an o. k. sort of lad, so we've nicknamed our squadron (soon to see action) for you."

*

Stirling Hayward lost Madeleine Carroll in "Virginia," but he's slated to win her in "Dildo Cay." As originally planned, it was Dorothy Lamour whom he was to win, but she will be unable to finish her current assignment in "Aloma of the South Seas" in time to appear in the picture.

As soon as Abbott and Costello finish "In the Navy" they'll begin "Ride 'em Cowboy" . . . Shirley Temple will have a brand new hair-do when she returns to the screen, and her hair, growing darker as she's grown older, is brown instead of golden.*

TIPS to Gardeners

GARDENS OF QUALITY

THERE have been changes in recent years in garden practices that are worth reporting. Gardeners formerly allowed vegetables to grow as large as possible. This procedure gave a higher yield in pounds, but very often it lowered the quality of vegetables.

Some vegetables, of course, like tomato, must be mature to be palatable; but carrots, cucumbers, beets, summer squash, turnips, radishes, and others are more tender and tasty when not much more than half grown.

Gardeners are finding that it is wise to plant oftener than once or twice a year, to maintain a regular supply of proper-sized vegetables. Gardens prove more enjoyable, and more profitable when successive plantings of favorite crops are made every two or three weeks, providing garden-fresh vegetables for the table over a long season.

It is also true that few gardeners today save flower seeds. Fine flowers growing in the home garden often are cross-pollinated by others of the same species, making flowers grown from their seed inferior, and untrue.

TRUTH

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Extends Its Neutrality Patrol To Protect 'Aid-to-Britain' Shipments; Germans Drive British From Greece; Lindbergh Resigns Air Corps Post

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

U. S. ATTITUDE: ### Toward War

In this country the reaction to the loss of the Greek campaign was sharp.

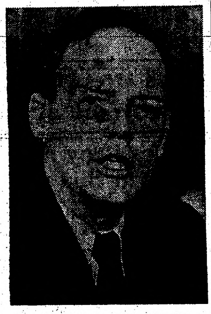
The forces of the isolationists immediately took to the air, held a giant mass-meeting in New York, which was marked by violence outside the hall, and, paced by Charles A. Lindbergh, took an "I told you so" attitude, urging the nation to believe that British defeat of the Nazis was not only impossible, but that British loss of the war was a certainty, and that if America gave "all-out" aid to Britain that we, too, would suffer through this defeat.

President Roosevelt, frankly infuriated by this attitude and these utterances, had Secretary Hull and Secretary Knox take to the radio and prepare the way for a statement by the President which ripped the "defeatists" up the back, and made it plain that the government would have none of this attitude.

The administration, they said, was frankly committed to "all-out" aid to Britain, and would go its way toward this goal. Instead of retrenching on this policy, as urged by the Lindbergh coterie, it was boldly announced that the government would extend its aid still more vigorously.

Singling out Lindbergh especially for administration ire, the President, in a press conference, characterized him as an "appeaser" and "defeatist" and used the word "copperhead" in making a comparison with earlier days in American history.

Aftermath of the President's remarks regarding Lindbergh was the news that he announced his resignation as a colonel in the U. S. army air corps reserve. He said he was "greatly disturbed" at the implications made by the President regarding his loyalty toward the United States. He had been an officer in the reserve air corps since 1927, year of historic flight to Paris.



CHARLES A. LINDBERGH
He "took the air."

PATROL:
Extended

The navy, said the President, now was engaged in extending the neutrality patrol 1,000 miles out into the Atlantic, and that its protection to American shipping, especially to vessels carrying aid to Britain, would know no boundaries on the seven seas.

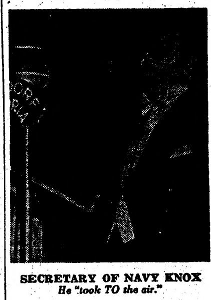
This brought the question of convoys out into the open, which the President had simply leaped over in his statement, taking the stand that discussion of convoys was beside the point, as he considered it the navy's job to keep the waters 1,000 miles off the American coast safe for all shipping.

At the same time he made the rather cryptic statement that he had information that the Nazis already were setting foot on Greenland and that the United States would deal with this phase of the situation, which indeed brought the war mighty close to this country.

In the meantime newspapers took another poll of the senate on the question of convoys, and found that body to be in favor of convoying supplies to Britain, though only by a vote of 50 to 45. If convoying meant active participation in the war, as many claimed, the informal canvass of the senate showed the temper of congress, at any rate.

Included in the tentative list opposed to convoying were 25 of the senate's 28 Republican members. The only official act connected with the subject of convoying was the Tobey resolution, and they were seen as supporters of this measure. Adding to this the non-intervention Democrats, and some other scattering votes, and Tobey's resolution, which would forbid convoying, could only look for 45 votes.

The Tobey move, however, was not considered so vital by some senators, these holding that President Roosevelt's executive power as navy head would permit him to put a convoy plan into effect by executive order, with no sanction by the senate or house asked or needed.



SECRETARY OF NAVY KNOX
He "took TO the air."

GREEKS:
'Out'

Closing days of the Greek campaign were stirring. The British made a noble stand of three to four days at Thermopylae pass, historic rendezvous with heroism of Leonidas in ancient days, only to lose the pass after heroic resistance and after inflicting admittedly heavy casualties on the invading Nazi hordes.

The second great stand was made on Mount Geraneia; the British high command, after a careful advance study of the terrain, finding places to defend that the Germans had claimed were impossible.

There was hardly a question even in British and Greek circles of making a successful stand, but the valiant Australian and New Zealand soldiers fought a rear-guard action that military men said would live in history.

Main objective of the British, after the port of Piraeus was shown to be impossible as an evacuation port, was to gain the southern portions of Greece and make the final stand on Crete and other islands.

The flight of the government from Athens prepared the Greek people for the eventual occupation of the historic capital by the Nazis. Yet the Greeks, with unswerving devotion to their cause, seemed not dismayed by the loss of their capital, but seemed willing to fight on to the end, as did the British.

Churchill had prepared the British for the bad news of the Greek campaign, and toward the close Athens dispatches frankly admitted that the final stages of the fighting were simply rear-guard actions.

While there was again raised in England among the people the cry of "too little and too late," the people of Australia seemed little inclined to criticize, but on the other hand seemed proud of the achievement of their armies.

The loss of the Greek campaign was more of a shock to those in the United States who had been hoping that American aid through the lease-lend bill might turn the battle.

Yet from more considered sources came the word that the Greek defense should not be viewed in that light, but rather from the standpoint of a general harassing and delaying action against Germany.

The cost to the Nazis of having to transport food and men and munitions for the final weeks almost entirely by plane must have been enormous in fuel alone, which Germany was unable to spare.

The surprise expressed by King George of Greece at the sudden surrender of the army of Epirus which precipitated the close of the Nazi Greek campaign and just preceded the flight of the government to Crete caused the commanders later to tell part of the story.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in U. S. Defense news

¶ Administrator Henderson of the Office of Price Administration and Civilian Supply requested manufacturers of farm implements not to increase the prices of farm machinery at this time. Mr. Henderson pointed out that in announcing the steel price schedule he had stressed the wide range of finished products of which steel is a part and the importance of maintaining stable prices in these finished products.

¶ Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced an agreement setting up a fund of $50,000,000, contributed by the U. S., and $20,000,000, contributed by Chinese government banks, to stabilize Chinese currency. A joint statement by Mr. Morgenthau and Dr. T. V. Soong of the Central Bank of China, described the agreement as a "co-operative agreement between friendly nations that are working together in many ways."

Costly Toys

The yacht Rainbow, built at a cost of $400,000 only six years ago to defend the America's cup against Mr. Sopwith's Endeavour, has been sold as scrap for one-third of her original cost. These modern racing yachts are nothing but speed machines. They cannot be turned to any other use when their racing days are over.

Of Lipton's four first Shamrocks the only relic is a mast now used as a flagstaff at an American university. Every one of the modern cup racers has gone to the scrap yard. These ships were not fit for anything but racing, and their average life has not been more than three years.

Record Supply Of Wheat

Record breaking supplies of wheat in this country and the world will mean ruinous prices to wheat producers if they do not take steps to control the surplus by voting in favor of marketing quotas on May 31, Charles N. Kranz, chairman of the local AAA committee, said this week.

"In 1931 we had a billion bushels of wheat and no AAA farm program. That year we had a world wheat price of 40 cents a bushel and wheat farmers in this country received 40 cents a bushel and less," Mr. Kranz said.

"In 1941 we will have another billion bushels of wheat. But in 1941 we have AAA program and farmers are receiving better than 80 cents a bushel for wheat despite a world wheat price of less than 40 cents a bushel."

"If we do not take steps to control marketing of surplus wheat and support prices by government loans our wheat prices are going to drop, and drop fast," Mr. Kranz said. A favorable vote on a marketing quota for wheat means government loans to support wheat prices and assures cooperating AAA farmers that surplusses produced on the excess acres above allotments by non-cooperators will be controlled."

If farmers vote 'no' to marketing quotas they are voting 'no' to government loans. A 'no' vote means the entire wheat supply, one of the largest on record, will be dumped on the market, which does not include any foreign outlet and is limited to domestic consumption."

Raise Big Tomato Crop

In critical times such as these we are especially interested in making ourselves strong to meet the problems of the future.

Health is strength. The right food makes health. The surest way to have plenty of food is to raise it yourself.

The home garden makes an essential contribution to the family food supply. That contribution will be more important this year when the nation's food resources are being mobilized for defense.

Do you know that Minnesota's best garden food is the tomato? It provides the same food elements that are in oranges and grapefruit — plus some extra ones. Tomatoes grow well in our climate. They are easy to can, and they fit into all kinds of recipes. They yield abundantly.

Why not put in some extra plants this year while there is yet time.

Have plenty to supply the family the year around. Twenty-five plants for every person in the family is not too much. If you haven't time to hoe them, save that work by putting the tomatoes next to a corn field and cultivate them at the same time as you go thru the cornfield.

Next fall, put up hundreds of quarts of tomatoes and juice. That is the cheapest and best health insurance you can buy in times when food prices are uncertain says the County agent.

Grasshopper Meeting

Farmers of Marshall county are going to watch the grasshopper situation very closely this summer in spite of the fact that the danger of serious damage in Minnesota is much less than last. County Agent R. A. Reierson said today that local farmers will again cooperate with state grasshopper control officials in setting up a county organization and arranging to have poison bait on hand if and when it is needed.

T. L. Aamodt, assistant state entomologist in charge of hopper control, says that persistent control work over the past few years has resulted in a marked reduction of the grasshopper danger. The 1941 map, just released by the state entomologists office, puts a large share of the state area in the "light infestation" class. However, Aamodt urges farmers of this county to keep the battle going by organizing to meet hopper attacks. Local infestation of hopper eggs, plus the nearness to areas which have more than normal infestation, point to a need for unrelaxed activity this year.

A county-wide meeting of town board members, county commissioners and farmers has been called for May 19 in Argyle. At that time grasshopper baiting plans will be talked over with state entomologists.

The 1941 grasshopper map is based on surveys conducted late last summer and during the fall to determine the number of adult hoppers present at egg laying time, and the number of eggs to be found in the soil. These surveys have been found to be very accurate in past years

Therefore the map is expected to give an accurate forecast of Minnesota conditions this summer.

Mrs. Eddy Henning and son of Middle River spent the week end here at the Fred Peterson home.

Caught Large Sturgeon

A six foot six inch long, 143 pound rock sturgeon—one of the largest fishes ever take in Minnesota— fouled the Department of Conservation's nets at the Red Lake pike hatchery at Waskish last week.

Captured alive, the huge fish was banded by Jack Manweiler, Baudette biologist, and promptly returned to the water. It attracted hundreds of visitors from nearby communities during the 24 hours it was held.

The sturgeon was found swimming in the badly jammed rigging set up by the department at the mouth of the Tamarack River to catch wall-eyed pike for egg stripping. It was first noted by Waskish Superintendent Hjalmar Swenson.

Hatchery attendants kept it alive in a special holding crib floated out on the river. Release, it swam out toward the white-caps lashing in from Upper Red Lake, none the worse for its experience.

The sturgeon was not the only fish captured in the nets. Also taken during the two weeks of pike netting were 15 beaver---all released unharmed when taken from the nets.

A 25 pound buffalo fish—first ever recorded for Upper Red Lake—was also taken. In addition 11 small sized German carp were taken. It was one of the few times carp have been recorded for Upper Red Lake.

There was no spawn to take from this giant-sized fiish. Fish authorities still know nothing about the propagation of sturgeon, although they have studied the species for years. It was estimated that this fish is about 150 years old as sturgeon grow about a pound a year.

A 200 pound stuageon caught at Lake of the Woods some years ago was exhibited at the State Fair news reports claim.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Brown and Ken from Mayville, N. D.; Mr. and Mrs. Ben Maijala and children and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Engen and children were dinner guests at the Christ Engen home Sunday.

PATTERNS
SEWING CIRCLE

ONE pattern, but two distinct fashions—that's what you'll receive when you send for design No. 1351-B. And what attractive new sports fashions they are, too! One is a well-tailored play suit, with becomingly flared shorts, dart-fitted, easy waistline and convertible neckline finished with a notched collar, like a shirtwaist. The other is a princess pinafore with sunback and buckled shoulder straps. When little Miss 8-to-16 dons the jumper over her play-suits, with the collar fastened demurely close to the throat, she's dressed for runabout. And of course she can wear the jumper alone, as a sun-frock, when summertime comes.

Both halves of this very generous pattern are easy for the inexperienced mothers to make, and by repeating it in different materials you can equip your sports-loving daughter with a whole season of fun clothes. Choose sturdy, sunfast cottons like seersucker, gingham, gabardine or denim.

Pattern No. 1351-B is designed for sizes 8, 10, 12, 14, and 16 years. Size 10 requires, for play suit, 2⅛ yards of 35-inch material without nap; for jumper, 2⅞ yards. Send order to:

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Valuable Oil Supplies of Middle East Result in Shift of War Scene to Iraq, But 'Battle of Atlantic' Still Remains As Most Important Phase of Conflict

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

When the British put forth an effort to hold the Iraq oil wells by force they faced cavalrymen like these. These Iraqi troops make an impressive sight on parade but Iraq asked Germany for heavy mechanized forces to aid in keeping the British from complete control of the highly valued oil fields.

(See Below: WAR—Changed Scene)

WAR:
Changed Scene

Although nothing in the European war was a certainty except its uncertainty, it seemed reasonably likely that the attempted Axis pincers move against Suez via north Africa and the Middle East would change the vital scene of the war to that locality.

That Suez eventually would fall to the German-Italian forces was deemed a likelihood, though the failure of this campaign would conversely mean a distinct turn of the tide in British favor.

Even before the outset of the campaign, when the British had concluded the first move into Iraq, the British ministry of information attempted to prepare the public for an adverse outcome by letting it be known that even the fall of Suez would not be fatal to the British cause.

Indeed, the propaganda articles pointed to Alexandria as a much more vital spot in the Mediterranean than Suez, but how this helped when Alexandria was as much of an Axis objective as Suez was a little difficult to see.

Perhaps it was that the British thought they could hold out at Alexandria after Suez had fallen, thus naming the objectives in chronological order.

All this was considerably in the future, however, for the British attempted to "jump the gun" as they had at Salonika and Piraeus, by landing an expeditionary force in Iraq. There was one vital difference, however, that in Iraq they were meeting an unfriendly regime, whereas in Greece the landing was welcomed, as the Greeks already were at war with the Axis.

Within a few days after the landing from the Persian gulf the British found themselves virtually at war with Arabia, though the Iraq army was only 28,000 regularly armed and uniformed men. But the government which had got its power through a Nazi-inspired coup d'etat, ordered all citizens to grab whatever arms they had and to wage a holy war against invading England.

Objective

Vital objective of the British was to prevent damage or seizure on the part of the Arabs of the vital Mosul oil fields, and the British drive was aimed particularly at Kirkuk, the start of the pipeline from the Mosul fields which supplied airplane and fleet fuel for the Mediterranean forces.

However, though the Arabs were conceded little chance to stand up to the British attackers, they were on the ground, and even as they started shelling British troops and the Habbaniyah air field, and even as they started appeals to Germany for help, thus laying the groundwork for the landing of a German expeditionary force, Arabs seized the Kirkuk end of the pipeline, and were reported to be flooding the oil fields.

It could not be estimated how much damage was being done, but though the pipeline seizure was pleasing to the Germans, a serious sabotage of the oil fields would prove embarrassing to Germany, though much more to the British.

For the Germans stood even more in need of oil than the British. The latter could get oil from other sources, notably from the United States, but one of Germany's secondary objectives in the Near East was this same group of oil wells.

Of course, if the German drive southward should succeed, the Haifa end of the pipeline would fall as well as the Kirkuk end, not to mention the oil field itself.

Formula

None doubted that Germany would hold to this so far winning formula of warfare and leave the Arabs largely to their fate until the planned advance had been thoroughly worked out. This was the method employed in northern Africa, where the Germans let the Italians take their beating until they were driven back to Tripoli.

Then the forces of the Reich crossed the Mediterranean, largely in Italian ships, landed on the north African coast, and promptly and with high speed drove the British back on their heels, taking everything that the Italians had lost in a matter of weeks, where it had taken the British months.

This was the western end of the pincers which was aimed at Alexandria Egypt and Suez, with the move of the eastern end, which started with the Grecian campaign and the general Balkan infiltration, expected to start as soon as the proper diplomatic and military preparation was finished.

Many believed the Germans would have to hurry this time, for some observers reported the Russians to be drawing troops from the eastern part of the country, and beginning to concentrate them in central Russia.

This might mean two things, either a protective movement, or an effort to beat the Germans to the Near-Eastern punch and to go into the Eurasian territory themselves, perhaps through Persia. There was an outside possibility that Russia, however, might content herself with a Persian grab, and aim toward British India.

Soviet Upset

The Soviet was considerably upset, it was true, by the German entry into Finland; was more upset by the infiltration into Bulgaria; and still more bothered by the reports from Turkey that the Turks were planning to follow the lead of all Balkan countries except Jugoslavia and Greece, and permit the Germans to have their will unchecked.

Should the Russians actually jump actively over to the British side of the war, which was deemed extremely unlikely until the British had imparted a serious defeat to the Axis, then the whole complexion of things would be changed and Italy and Germany would find themselves with a real problem on their hands.

What seemed most likely was the eventual fall of Asia Minor to the Axis, and even at long last the fall of Suez and Alexandria.

Closest observers of the war believed that even with all of this the British had a chance to win if they could definitely win the battle of the Atlantic; could definitely resume the unchallenged mastery of the seas; could receive from the United States "all-out" aid including active entry into the war; and could repel an invasion of the British Isles themselves.

Those in touch with the Washington scene believed this country much closer to being actually in the war, with some actually predicting that our entry was no further off than 60 days.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in Defense News

¶ The state department granted unlimited licenses to the British Iron & Steel corporation and the British purchasing commission under which customs collectors are authorized to accept shipments of specified products, without the presentation of license forms, going to British New Guinea, British North Borneo, Federated Malay States, Unfederated Malay States, Hongkong, Oceania, Papua, and Sarawak.

¶ OPM Director of Priorities Stettinius put into effect blanket priority ratings enabling manufacturers of airplane frames, engines, and propellers to obtain needed materials "to speed production of military airplanes for the United States and Great Britain." Mr. Stettinius also announced immediate application to 16 vital defense metals of a system of inventory controls designed to prevent excess stocks in industry.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers
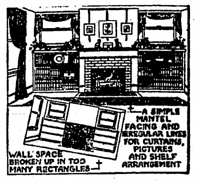
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



A SIMPLE MANTEL FACING AND IRREGULAR LINES FOR CURTAINS, PICTURES AND SHELF ARRANGEMENT
WALL SPACE BROKEN UP IN TOO MANY RECTANGLES

SMALL windows and book shelves at the sides of a fireplace often create a monotonous series of rectangles. Watch out for them for they play an important part in decorating plans. You see them here in the small sketch—six of them—window; over-mantel space; window; book shelves; mantel; book shelves—around and around they go.

The only architectural change shown in the large sketch was a mantel facing built of three boards and simple mouldings. This broke up one rectangle. Irregular lines for swag drapes over the windows softened the angles of two more. A large picture or mirror over the mantel just added still another rectangle, so small prints were hung with ribbons. The arrangement of vines, books and bibelots on the shelves took care of the rest.

* * *

NOTE: Directions for cutting and making the swag draperies shown in today's sketch may be found on page 17 of Book 1, in the series of service booklets offered with these articles. Also book 7 is now ready for mailing. It contains more than 30 of these homemaking ideas with step-by-step directions for each; as well as a description of the series. ## Little Herbert Was There To Give the Game Away!

On arriving home father found a foreign coin resembling a quarter in his small change, so he went out to do a little shopping, taking Herbert, aged five, along.

He went to the grocer's, and the grocer, looking at the coin, said with an air of surprise, "Why, this is not United States money!"

So the man went to the druggist's, and there tendered the coin. The druggist informed him that the coin was of foreign extraction.

"Good heavens, so it is!" exclaimed the father. "I wonder where I got that?"

"Don't you know, dad?" spoke up Herbert. "That's the one the grocer wouldn't take!"

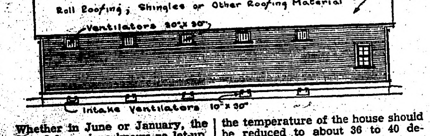
EXPERT TELLS HOW TO STORE ONIONS PROPERLY



Roll Roofing, Shingles or Other Roofing Material
Ventilators 20"x 20"
Intake Ventilators 10"x 30"

Whether in June or January, the demand for onions knows no let-up. Many dishes, both humble and aristocratic, owe their tastefulness to this basic "flavor" food.

The grower who would meet this year 'round demand, however, harvests his onions only once a year and must somehow protect them successfully against changing temperatures if he is to get better prices when onions become less plentiful. Storage facilities become increasingly important as farmers recognize that it's good business to hold the finest stock for late winter deliveries.

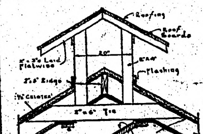
Onions must be well ripened when stored. Plenty of ventilation, coupled with a temperature of from 80 to 90 degrees, should be maintained in the storage house during curing time. The onions should be stored in crates in such a manner as to permit the free circulation of air around them.

The necessary movement of outside air through an onion storage house requires properly spaced ventilators both at the floor and ceiling levels so that when the vent doors are open a current of air can continuously rise up and out.

Experts have a homely method of determining when onions are sufficiently cured in storage. At this stage, they say, onions will "rattle like blocks of wood" when poured from one crate to another.

After the onions have been cured the temperature of the house should be reduced to about 36 to 40 degrees and held there.

To be able to cure and then hold proper temperatures, an onion storage should be constructed along lines suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture. Agricultural engineers state that in addition to adequate ventilation, insulation built into walls and ceiling is necessary to offset climatic temperature changes.



Insulating board is recommended as being the most practical and economical. However, one should take the precaution to select an insulation board that is weather-proofed, moisture resistant and protected from attack by dry rot and termites.

Experts estimate that for a stored crop of 1,500 bushels a house 16 by 36 feet in size will be needed. For a 10,000 bushel storage the house should be 32 by 72 feet.

Creameries Picnic June 8

The 14th annual picnic of the Marshall County Creameries will be held Sunday, June 8th, according to E. M. Evans, president of the board of the county creameries organization.

The first meeting for formulating the plans for the picnic were held recently at Newfolden when representatives of all the county creameries met up. Another meeting will be held soon to act on all business and work out the final details of program.

No decision has been made to date as to where the picnic will be held. It is hoped by the officers of the creameries association that the event can again be held in the Middle River State Park, but due to the fact that the state park board may not meet the wishes of the creameries for holding their picnic there, it may be held somewhere else.

Invitations are being extended to John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes Creameries, and R. A. Trovatten, commissioner of agriculture, to be speakers for the day.

Wheat Farmers Vote May 31

Approximately 1400 farmers in Marshall County will be eligible to vote in the referendum on a marketing quota for wheat Saturday, May 31, 1941, according to Chas. N. Kranz, Chairman of the Marshall County AAA Committee, said in anouncing the polls would open at 9:00 A. M. and close at 7:00 P. M.

"Every farmer eligible to vote should vote," Mr. Kranz warned, "because the results of this election will determine the income from wheat during the marketing year.

"A 'no' vote means you are voting against wheat loans and are requesting that no measures be taken to control the huge supply of more than a billion bushels of wheat. A 'yes' vote means wheat loans and control excess production of wheat."

Newfolden and New Solum farmers will vote at Ellerth School Dist. 97. Farmers from Spruce Valley, Cedar, Holt, Excel, Agder, Moylan and Espelie will do their voting at Steiner Hall.

Rev. T. C. L. Hanson was at Newfolden on Sunday evening where he delivered the Baccalaureate address to the High School Graduating Class. Graduates from this community are Misses Marles and Verna Peterson and LaVern and Marian Johnson. Among those attending the services from Holt were: Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Karvonen, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson and family and Mr. and Mrs. Anton Peterson and family.

Muskellunge Propagation

Muskellunge propagation activities moved forward in the Department of Conservation this week with three major rearing ponds in operation and thousands of fry released from the Nevis hatchery into surrounding lakes.

Dr. Samuel Eddy, famed fish expert of the University of Minnesota, is supervising the pond activities. They are concentrated at the huge battering of rearing units maintained by the Izaak Walton League and known as the Minneapolis Bass Pound.

In three large rearing ponds covering more than eight acres, the Department is holding more than 4,000 muskies—sizes ranging from tiny fry to more than 20 inches, the latter yearling fish.

Eddy and Department officials plan to produce ample muskie brood stock from this supply—sufficient fish to restock all of Minnesota's northern muskie lakes in time. The experiments apparently demonstrated the feasability of pond production of the species.

In one pond approximately 80 muskies one year old are held. These fish have grown from small fry size to more than 20 inches the past 12 months.

This week 4,000 fry sized muskie from the Nevis hatchery were stocked in the large Minneapolis pond.

Observe Memorial Day Here

Plans are in progress for a splendid program to take place on the school grounds at 2:00 p. m. Friday, May 30. Through the cooperation of the American Legion post of Thief River Falls the program promises to be complete.

The committee in charge would like to know of all veterans resting in the local cemetory. Anyone having any knowledge of such are asked to contact Mr. Oakey as soon as possible. This information will help in decorating such graves. Everyone is cordially welcomed to spend a pleasant afternoon at the program.

At the morning services at Nazareth Lutheran Church on Sunday, the Sunday School will make its awards to all those who have had perfect attendance during the year. All indications are that there will be 27 who will receive this award. No exceptions nor excuses for not being in Sunday school have been accepted. Considering the fact that enrollment is only about 70 this is a very high average. All are invited to be present.

Hans Fosholm, who has been very ill the past month, was taken to St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls last week. He returned home Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Oakey and Jackie and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Forder spent Sunday and Monday fishing at Lake of the Woods

Paul Olson, who has been ill for some time, was taken to St. Luke's hospital on Monday where he is receiving treatments.

A picnic will be held for the people of Marshall County and vicinity, residing in Oregon and Washington on Sunday, May 25, 1941 at Blue Lake Park near Portland, Oregon. Everyone bring their own lunch. Those wishing further information call Lancaster 7951 in Portland.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been fine and the farmers are trying to hurry and finish thier late seeding. On Monday afternoon we had another heavy rain shower but since then it has been cool and nice to work.

Made Holiday By Specific Law

Memorial day is the second of the seven days which have been designated legal holidays in Minnesota by specific laws. Washington's birthday, in 1860, was the first day to be set aside by specific enactment as a holiday in the state. Memorial day became a holiday in 1889.

The other five days which have been made legal holidays thru specific laws are general election day, Labor Day, Lincoln's birthday, Good Friday, and Armistice Day.

No public business may be transacted on three other days, according to Miss Lois Fawcett, reference librarian of the Minnesota Historical society, in a report upon legal holidays in Minnesota. These are New Year's day, Independence day and Christmas day. These three days, while included in "Mason's Minnesota Statutes," under "Holiday", have not been set aside by a specific statute.

Thanksgiving day becomes a holiday each year by proclamation of the governor. Leif Erikson day and Columbus day since 1931 have been designated as days to be observed by appropriate exercises in schools.

New Flax Tow Mill Opens

After several trial runs featured by shutdowns for adjustments the temporary machinery of the flax tow mill of the Smith Paper, Inc., at Red Lake Falls was put into operation on a 24 hour basis just recently. Production having ceased when the mill burned down on March 8, the mill is almost two months behind schedule. The concrete work on the new 40 foot scale was completed last week. On the new buildings the metal roofing is now being applied. Metal window frames are being installed and these will be glazed with wire glass as a protection against fire. All the new buildings have many skylights.

Uncle Phil Says:

Yet They Die Together

Sometimes we bury our friends a good deal sooner than their faults.

We would recognize opportunity more easily if it were not so often disguised as work.

Some men lie awake all night planning how to win success. But those who get it stay awake in the daytime.

Veracity of a Whisper

Some people believe anything you tell them—if you whisper it.

The hardest tumble a man can take is to tumble over his own bluff.

Pearls of wisdom aren't always the "cultured" variety.

Those Harmful Favors

Peace rules the day, where reason rules the mind.—Collins.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

The Everglades—Once a Waste Now Center of Sugar Industry

A dozen years ago the Florida Everglades were barren and unproductive. Today they are the center of a sugar industry which provides more than 5,000 people with employment and which spent over a million and a half dollars in 1940 for materials purchased in 19 other states. The ten plantations of the United States Sugar corporation spread over thousands of acres of these glade lands. These photos show what goes on during the harvest season at Clewiston, Fla.

The girls at the left look very industrious, but they are only out for a frolic in the sugar cane.

As grown in the Everglades sugar cane is cut in the field, moved in tractor wagons to the railroad, and hauled by train to the raw sugar mill at Clewiston.

The harvest garnered, the cars are locked to the rails and tilted. The cane is now on its way to become sugar. Planting is planned to provide canes which mature on a regular schedule during a six-month period.

The raw sugar flows into sacks from automatic weighers, each sack getting the same amount of sugar when the boy releases a trigger. The sacks are weighed again, later.

The long journey starts. Up the escalator go the sacks to the freight cars, then to the refinery, where the yellowish raw sugar is refined into the white table product.

Harvest season in Florida's Everglades is a season of merry-making.

Ask Me Another

A General Quiz

1. Are alligators the slow, creeping creatures they appear to be?
2. Are all national flags alike on both sides?
3. What lake, 12,500 feet above sea level, is the highest large body of navigable water in the world?
4. Are marriages in England restricted as to the time performed?
5. What is a tympanist?
6. What is the principal language of Brazil?

The Answers

1. No. They are real sprinters when they care to run. Their legs stretch out to 18 inches in length when in top speed.
2. The national flags of Paraguay, Lithuania and Yemen, Arabia, are not alike on both sides.
3. Lake Titicaca (in Bolivia).
4. Marriages in England are legal only when performed between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m. on week days.
5. A drummer.
6. Portuguese. Italian and German are widely spoken in the southern states.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

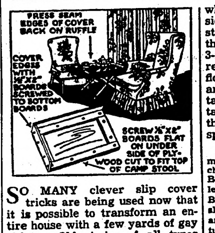
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



PRESS SEAM EDGES OF COVER BACK ON RUFFLE
COVER EDGES WITH ½"X2" BOARDS SCREWED TO BOTTOM BOARDS
SCREW ½"X2" BOARDS FLAT ON UNDER SIDE OF PLY-WOOD CUT TO FIT TOP OF CAMP STOOL

SO MANY clever slip cover tricks are being used now that it is possible to transform an entire house with a few yards of gay chintz. Old chairs of all types step right out and become the life of the party in smart new frocks. Even tables and lamp shades are slip-covered but the best trick is to make something out of next to nothing by slip-covering it. A smart coffee table from a camp stool for instance.

The lower sketch shows how to make a substantial removable top for the stool. The 2-inch boards which are screwed to all four sides of the top fit down over the stool. Flowered chintz is used for the top of the cover and a plain 3-inch glazed chintz frill is added repeating one of the tones in the flower pattern. The seam allowance around the cover may be tacked to the removable top of the table and the whole thing may then be folded away in a small space when not in use.

• • •

NOTE: You will find directions for remodeling and slip-covering many types of chairs, as well as an out-moded couch in Book 5 of the series of home-making booklets offered with these articles. The new Book 7 contains a number of ways to use slip covers. In it boxes become ottomans; and an old wicker chair is padded and tufted. Each book contains more than thirty useful home-making projects with complete directions for making. Send order to:

STAGE ☆ SCREEN ☆ RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

MARCH OF TIME cameramen went on a long and perilous voyage to film some of the material used in "Crisis in the Atlantic"—they went from Canada to England aboard a tanker in convoy. The film also includes the first pictures to arrive here from Greenland since that strategic island has become so important.

"Crisis in the Atlantic" vividly portrays the many aspects of the struggle to keep the sea lanes open so that war materials and food can be sent to Britain, and depicts as well the joint U. S.-Canadian defense efforts involving bases from the Arctic to the South Atlantic. It's a film scoop; don't miss it!

Brian Donlevy has been spending a lot of time learning to do something that will be quite useless in private life. In "The Great Man's Lady," a Paramount production, he plays the part of a professional gambler, a master hand at cheating. And what makes it all the more painful is the fact that Donlevy has an abhorrence of all card games, even the game of Authors.

Brian Donlevy

Bette Davis is at it again, playing one of the most unpleasant women ever seen on the screen. It's for "The Little Foxes," RKO's screen version of the tremendously successful play. It was RKO, you may recall, that set Miss Davis squarely on her feet, dramatically, by casting her as the heroine of "Of Human Bondage"—a role few actresses would have had the courage to take. She took it, and made movie history.

—*—

Anna Neagle does an entire dance number while submerged in a glass tank filled with water in her new picture, "Sunny." Back in England she won medals for swimming and diving, so she got into a scanty sequin costume and combined her talents as a swimmer and a dancer. The story's laid in New Orleans during the Mardi Gras, and Ray Bolger and John Carroll head the supporting cast. The under-water dance is a stunt new to pictures—new, as well, to Miss Neagle, we might add.

At the age of 97 Bob Hope's grandfather is helping to extinguish incendiary fires in the English village where he lives. "My health at present is much better than my disposition," he wrote his grandson. "I don't mind staying up at night to see your pictures, but I hate to have to miss my sleep just to put out some fires."

Meanwhile Bob is slated to do another of those hilarious comedies with Paulette Goddard; it's called "The Murder Farm," and sounds as if it might even top "The Cat and the Canary" and "The Ghost Breakers," their previous collaborations.

Agnes Moorehead, who plays the mother in Orson Welles' remarkable "Citizen Kane," first encountered Welles when he was five and she was not much older. He strolled into a hotel lobby with his father, describing a concert which he had just heard, and doing it so dramatically that she never forgot him. She makes her film debut in "Citizen Kane," and gives a beautiful, sincere performance. In fact, the whole cast does that—you forget that the people on the screen are acting, because they seem so real.

Barbara Stanwyck and Robert Taylor didn't tell even their best friends that they were going off on that West Indies cruise; waited until just before the boat sailed to send telegrams announcing their plans. It's their first vacation together in 18 months, and their second trip together since they were married three years ago. They sailed as Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Brugh, hoping to avoid advance plans for ovations at their various ports of call.

ODDS AND ENDS—Warner Brothers drafted college students to man the guns in "Dive Bomber" and "The Flight Patrol"—the army draft left a shortage in the ranks of extras . . . "Robin Hood" is going to be a Republic serial, with Roy Rogers in the title role . . . Robert Cummings will be Deanna Durbin's leading man in "Almost an Angel" . . . Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy are beginning their fifth year with that coffee program—and when they started Bergen wasn't at all sure that he could turn out a script a week . . . "The Pause That Refreshes on the Air" has been renewed for another 26 weeks—one of the few network shows to run all summer.

Masonry Via Wire

Even the laying of a cornerstone has been done over electric wires, says Colliers. Not long ago in London, 10,000 Masons in an exhibition hall watched a dignitary go through such a ceremony, every movement of laying the substitute stone actuating, through electrical synchronization, the laying of the real stone on the site of a hospital several miles away.

Even Court Ruling Couldn't Make Absent Plaintiff Talk

"I understand that you called on the complainant. Is that so?" demanded a browbeating barrister of a man he was cross-examining.

"Yes," replied the witness.

"What did he say?"

"Counsel for the other side objected that evidence as to a conversation was not admissible, and half an hour's argument ensued. Then the court retired to consider the point, announcing some time later that they deemed the question a proper one.

"Well, what did the plaintiff say?" repeated the cross-examining attorney.

"He wasn't at home, sir!" was the answer.

Poultry Raisers Have Big Job

Poultry raisers have a big job. They have been asked to contribute toward national defense by stepping up egg production 6 per cent in the next 15 months.

This will call for an increase of 15 per cent in the chicks hatched this spring. County Agent, R. A. Reierson, points out that these extra chicks will be a source of increased revenue only with the best of management.

He quotes a statement received recently from Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist at University Farm, on the added danger from death losses and slow growth that comes when more chicks than usual are raised on any farm. This statement mentions particularly the need for greater care than ever in providing clean range for the growing stock. Clean ground is range that has not been used for chickens for a year and preferably for two.

Prospects are good for favorable egg prices this fall, according to Miss Cooke, but only healthy well-grown pullets can make the most of those prices. Coccidiosis, worms, and other diseases are always lying in wait on ground used for chickens year after year. Even when brooder houses are not movable, it is possible to avoid exposing growing pullets to the dangers of these ailments. A wire-floored sunporch attached to the brooder house protects chicks during the brooding period. On range, the wire-floored roosting shelter furnishes ideal conditions for growth and is both cheap and easily moved.

Confirmation Here Sunday

Confirmation services will be held at Nazareth Lutheran Church on Sunday morning at 11:00. 15 young people who have received instruction in the Christian faith by the pastor for the past two years will be confirmed. They are as follows:

About 17 ladies visited Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson Tuesday afternoon it being her birthday. There were also some who called in the evening.

Look For Grasshoppers Now

Farmers of western Marshall County are already experiencing damage to grain fields because of grasshoppers. This damage is not confined to any particular area as all of the western twenty five townships have reported that the young grasshoppers have attacked the crop in the borders of grain fields.

Due to the ideal soil temperature it is estimated that 60 to 70 per cent of the grasshopper eggs have hatched. There are millions of small hoppers along the roadsides, fence rows in the borders of fields and in fields of clover and alfalfa. As yet these small hoppers are confined to their hatching beds.

Conditions are right for their control. Every farmer should be on the alert and should inspect his farm daily and where ever the hoppers are found bait should be spread, Much depends on what action is taken now. The wholehearted cooperation of every farmer in this county will do much toward the control of these pests. The attitude of the farmers will determine whether there will be a crop or a failure.

Every effort is being made by the county and WPA to supply bait in adequate amounts. Much bait was wasted in 1940. In order that every one can do his part in the control program it is requested that bait be conserved. Experience has proven that 20 pounds of wet bait per acre is sufficient for each baiting. Just a few flakes per square foot is all that is requested, using the bait in this way will do away with mnch of the danger of livestock poisoning.

Wheat Farmers Vote May 31

Recent amendments to the Agricultural Adjustment Act will make three major changes affecting the 1941 wheat marketing quota and wheat loan provisions, according to Chas. N. Kranz chairman of the Marshall County AAA Committee.

The recent action (1) exempts from quotas farms planting 15 acres or less of wheat (present legislation exempting farms whose normal yield multiplied by the acreage of wheat on the farm is less than 200 bushels continues in effect); (2) raises the marketing quota penalty from 15 cents a bushel to 50 % of the national average loan rate offered cooperators or about 48 or 49 cents a bushel; and (3) sets the wheat loan rate at 85 per cent of the wheat parity price at the beginning of the marketing year.

As a result of the amendments Mr. Kranz points out, all farmers, except those who have 15 acres or less of wheat or whose 1941 acreage will have a normal production of 200 bushels or less, will be subject to the quota and they are eligible to vote in the referendum which has been set for May 31.

Under the marketing quota, which is designed to divide more equally among all farmers the limited available market, all farmers may sell or feed all they produce on their acreage allotment, plus any old wheat carried over from previous crops.

"This means that farmers who have seeded within their wheat allotments may market all their wheat," Mr. Kranz explained. "On the other hand, farmers who have seeded wheat in excess of their acreage allotments will be subject to a penalty on the normal or actual production of such excess acreage, whichever is smaller. All other wheat produced may be marketed without penalty.

"Farmers may take care of this marketing excess in one of three ways. They may store it under bond, in which case they are eligible for a wheat loan at 60 percent of the regular rate on excess wheat. They may deliver it to the Government which will divert it from the regular trade channels. As a third alternative the producer having a marketing excess may pay the penalty on it."

The new amendment, which has raised the penalty quota from 15 cents a bushel to 50 percent of the basic loan rate, will make the penalty about 48 or 49 cents a bushel on the farm marketing excess.

The change in the loan provision increases the national average loan rate from the 65 cents actually lent in 1940 to a natianal overage of about 97 cents this year. In 1940 the Marshall Co. average was 75 cents as compared with the national average.

"Whether or not the 1941 loan will be offered depends upon the outcome of the referendum," Mr. Kranz said. "Briefly, no quota - no loan. That's the law. Loans are prohibited when supplies exceed the quota level, if the quota is voted down in the referendum.

"The quota is an assurance by farmers that they will do their part in protecting the value of collateral under Government loan. Since the loan has proved itself an important price support and an essential part of the Ever-Normal Granary for storing wheat supplies, farmers and consumers alike have a vital interest in the outcome of the referendum."

In MEMORIAM

We cannot but halt a moment, as we cross the threshold of the beautiful month of May, in silent honor of those who gave thier all that we might prosper and live in a world of happiness and peace. "Their" day comes in May. A single day out of a year of length - - yet more hearts, and minds, and love, will surrender on Decoration Day than on any other day of the year.

The torn hearts of the mothers who lost their boys on the battlefields of Europe will rest easier as the Almighty casts his reflection over the world on Decoration Day. The graves of those "boys" will again feel the tears of the loved ones left behind.

No honor is too great for those who laid down their lives in the wars of our nation since its birth. No flowers are beautiful enough to grace the graves of our "Soldiers".

Is is our prayer, and the prayer of countless others in all parts of the world, that Decoration Day, this year will serve to tender the resting places of our great, and ease many heavy hearts.

Two Ships -- 125 Million Gone

The British and Germans have really celebrated the past few days. The first to score was the big Nazi battleship Bismarck when on Saturday it sank the world's mightiest dreadnaught, the 42,100-ton Hood, Englands choice ship. The score was even again Tuesday when other big British ships sunk the 35,000-ton Bismarck the same way.

The Hood completed in 1920 cost about 45 million dollars.

The Bismarck, Germanys top ship which it took four years to build and, completed only two years ago, Feb. 10, 1939, cost 80 million dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peterson entertained relatives and friends on Sunday in honor of Miss Ruth Saastad who was celebrating her birthday.

By LEMUEL F. PARTON

(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

Iron Hat Instead Of Mortar Board Crowns Beauty

NEW YORK.—George Ade is the first and the last of the modern fabulists. He might still do something, factual but still fabulous, like most things today, about Theresa Bonney. The "once upon a time" was in 1921 when the pretty American girl from Syracuse turned in her thesis for her doctorate of letters, at the Sorbonne in Paris. Her subject was "The Moral Ideas in the Theater of Alexander Dumas the Younger." The cheers were resounding and international.

Miss Bonney previously had romped through the University of California and had taken her master's degree at Harvard. European bureaus of American newspapers rushed girl reporters to Paris to extoll her beauty and her intelligence. She did not disappoint them. All the garlands of the Groves of Academe were hers, to say nothing of her flair for clothes. The least the girls could figure for her was the presidency of an American college.

Today is today, and in the years in between Adolf Hitler has brought about drastic revision of "moral ideas" in France and elsewhere. And in these years, Miss Bonney has had a ringside seat at the apocalypse. Just now the Vichy government awards her the Croix de Guerre for "bravery and devotion" in evacuating refugees during the German invasion of last year.

She needed no identification here, as she had already gained fame, not as an intellectual but as a photographer whose closeups of chaos are official records in the Library of Congress and in the French archives. Last December, she received a grant from the Carnegie foundation to return to France and continue her pictorial record of the war.

The hair-pin turn in her career came just at the time women were discarding hair-pins. In Paris, she sold a story to an American newspaper. They cabled for a picture. She had trouble in getting it and decided to put an end to such difficulties. With her sister Louise and her mother, in America, as partners she organized "Bonney & Co.," operating the "International Picture bureau." Lacking an important picture, she bought a camera and started shooting. Her pictures were even a bigger success than her thesis. Baron Mannerheim let her get into the thick of the fighting in Finland and awarded her the White Rose of Finland.

Witty, dark-haired and vivacious, she made friends and frequently was a click or two ahead of her rivals in some new and unheralded belch out of hell. She brought back to the Library of Congress 200 pictures of the blitzkrieg.

L. B. Mayer Came Up All the Way From Sea Bottom

LOUIS B. Mayer, motion picture executive, the highest paid American with his salary of $697,047 in 1940, came a longer way up than others of the SEC listing—from the bottom of the sea in fact. At the age of 14, he wore a diving suit, salvaging iron from sunken ships at New Brunswick. His family had brought him at the age of three from Minsk, Russia, where, like George M. Cohan, he had been born on the Fourth of July—in 1885.

He sold his iron in Boston, saved $600 and bought a tumble-down theater at Haverhill, Mass., in the early days of the custard pie dynasty of the movies. In 1914, he got the New England rights for "The Birth of a Nation." That routed him to Hollywood, the presidency of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and a long, fast run-around on the grand circuit of movie high finance.

He registers vitality in every move and gesture—never taking anything calmly or in his stride. He mixes sentiment and business, sticking to a lowly paid employee like an heirloom, but firing an assistant mogul at the drop of a hat.

◆

ROBERT BREENAN, Eire's minister to Washington, who is negotiating for food and arms from the United States, used to be a writer for American pulp magazines. He has been incarcerated in British jails in Dublin, Cork, Dartmoor and Gloucester. He was one of six men who were sentenced to execution, in the war against the Black and Tans, but as the others were being led out to be shot, he was, for some mysterious reason, given his liberty. In 1920, De Valera made him undersecretary of the foreign office.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

War Approaches New Critical Phase As 'Showdown' Looms in Near East; Defense Mediation Board Struggles To Avert Strikes in Vital Industries

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Marshal Petain's decision for France to collaborate with Adolf Hitler's government has made the tiny French mandate of Syria the center of unrest and a potential battleground. Here are pictured French colonial troops on parade in the streets of Beirut, chief city of Syria.

NAZIS:

Creative Pause

Although fighting continued heavily in North Africa and seemed to be stepping up on the Iraq front, Berlin talked of a "creative pause" which could be regarded as a precursor of events of great magnitude.

Berlin claimed the turning point of the war was at hand, and pointed to diplomatic spearhead attacks in France and the Near-East as the type of thing referred to in the "pause."

As Britain caught its breath for a few days after the terrific bombing of London and other cities, casualty lists were made up showing that 86,312 citizens had been killed or wounded by bombings since last June.

Yet the two worst months were September and October, not March and April, as most had thought. There were 32,000 casualties in the fall months, and only 23,000 in March and April. This showed a better defense in shelters, as there was no question but that the spring raids had showed much more power than those in the fall.

In the matter of losses at sea, there was somewhat of a drop during the month of April, and in early May, one week showing only a loss of 36,000 tons, or at the rate of about 150,000 tons a month, as against previous months when the rate hopped up to around 250,000.

This was in spite of the fact of longer days and better weather for submarines to operate in. Many believed the R.A.F. raids which held the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau apparently damaged at their docks in Brest were responsible in great measure for the fall-off in sinkings.

Reports from North Africa tended to show the British army of the Nile picking up somewhat in verve and apparently in machines, though some reports showed the supply of tanks to be so low that the British were arming trucks with cannon and sending them out into the desert in lieu of tanks.

Tanks were moving off American assembly lines, but how many were getting to Britain and especially to the Near-East and North African fronts remained a mystery.

There were increasing evidences that the British and Nazis were going to hook up in a big battle in the Near-East, and perhaps this time on somewhat more even terms.

Within a day after the Nazi planes moved into Iraq via Syrian airdromes, a brief death notice in a Berlin paper told of the loss of a young pilot named Von Blomberg, son of the Field Marshal, also former war minister, who was ousted in 1938 when he married a carpenter's daughter.

It was not said where Von Blomberg died, but the British radio said it had been determined that he was one of the first casualties among the Nazi fliers to enter Iraq.

London did not try to minimize the importance of the Near-East flight, and official circles likened it in scope to the Battle of the Atlantic, and stated that the British control of the Near-East would be thoroughly defended.

Word came through that Nazi infantry units were moving into Syria through the Bosporus, and would be sent to Iraq, undoubtedly well supported by mechanized forces.

From the British viewpoint, the stalemate in North Africa was a tribute to the heroism of the under-equipped army of the Nile, and the long defense of Tobruk, backed up by the navy, showed how thinly the long Italo-German rear was held.

Salum changed hands five or six times in a week, and some cases of British advances into Libya were reported, though Axis sources always claimed the British were "chased back."

MEDIATION:

Bigger Stick

American industry, geared up to its highest pitch in history, and realizing, whether the public did or not, that the call for 40 billions of dollars worth of material was equivalent to asking industry to work an American miracle, teetered along on the brink of the cliff of labor troubles but without actually falling over.

It was evident that somebody or some agency, presumably the defense mediation board, Dr. Dykstra chieftain, was wielding a bigger stick than the department of labor conciliators ever did, and was wielding it to some purpose.

Strike threats, not so much strikes, became the order of the day. The soft coal strike was halted, then threatened to break out again, but the mediators were "on top" of the trouble and hoped to quell it. The hard coal miners, 100,000 of them, threatened to walk out, demanding more wages.

Nastiest threat of all was the General Motors strike, which had Knudsen of OPM up a tree when he called it the "most dangerous." The C. I. O. Automobile Workers group wanted a 10 per cent pay raise and a closed shop. The strike was set for one morning, and three hours before it was due to break a 24-hour truce was announced, and a couple of hours before it was expired the strike was settled on a basis of the pay raise but no closed shop.

The Colt's strike, tying up $30,000,000 in machine-gun contracts, lasted only a day. Tanks were moving off assembly lines, 20-mm cannon for airplanes were in mass production, a 3,000-horsepower airplane motor was said to be "less than a year away."

In every way it was apparent that American industry was "catching the idea" that it was being called upon for a supreme effort in which the United States was challenging the world, and was planning to show the world that this country, supreme in machines and machine tools, could dominate the world in military affairs.

But the public still Gallup-polled 79 per cent against active entry in the war, and Dr. James B. Conant of Harvard said "America doesn't know it's in a real emergency." Odd thing about the poll was that nearly the same per cent favored all-out aid to Britain.

OCD:

Ready to Go

President Roosevelt was calling on millions of Americans to enroll in the civilian defense group, under the banner of a new group of initials, OCD, meaning the Office of Civilian Defense. It was expected that Mayor LaGuardia of New York would lead the movement.

The plan was to line up men and women all over the nation for all sorts of duties from airplane spotting to watching for spies or sabotage and even keeping an eye on prices of commodities.

It is planned to build an organization into which millions can be enrolled and trained.

The plan was borrowed wholecloth from England, and has been Britain's most successful organization, aiding the British more than any other one thing in keeping air-raid casualties down, and thus so far stalemating Hitler's efforts to knock Britain out of the war from the air.

Also of immense value in Britain has been the morale-building effect of the civilian defense group, particularly the ARP workers.

TANKS:

And Killers

Even as the first new tanks were moving from assembly lines, the army was concentrating on "tank-killers" and studying several methods of combating the armored weapon.

Among these were tank-traps, land-mines, posts, redoubts armed heavily, and mobile artillery, including, of course, tanks themselves.

Smaller Heads

The hats men wore 50 years ago were bigger than today, for the average size was 6⅞, against the present 6⅝.

Gene Tunney, former world-boxing champion, and Bing Crosby, the crooner, are exceptions, for they both take 7½. So are Mr. Churchill (7⅛) and President Roosevelt (7⅜). Mr. Anthony Eden's hats, however, are only 6¾. The biggest head of note in history was that of David Hume, the philosopher, who took 8½. In some cases men's heads become bigger as they grow older. Sir Flinders Petrie, the British archeologist, took a 6½ when he was 21, 7⅛ when 30, 7¼ at 40, and 7½ at 50.

"The DRINK of MODERATION"

In a "Liberty Loving" country folks are going to gather in social groups and enjoy life. Enjoying life can be carried to extremes or it can follow the road of moderation. Beer fits into the "moderation" picture. Here is a beverage which Doctors hold is not intoxicating, yet it promotes good fellowship and sociability.

The undersigned Brewers are cooperating to the best of their ability to see that beer taverns are respectable, law-abiding and inviting. For it is their desire that beer be sold only under wholesome conditions, so you may continue to enjoy this beverage of moderation.

Incidentally, the Brewing Industry is contributing over a million dollars a day to our National Government in taxes in addition to the local city, county and state taxes.

4-H Club Booths At Fair

The 4H club leaders council decided at their meeting Monday evening that the 4H club booths for the county fair would be limited to topics concerning health and nutrition. Club projects such as Garden, Health, Canning, Dairy, or Potatoes could be used in connection with telling the health story. Several clubs have already indicated that they are making plans for booths at the fair. From the interest shown thus far, a good exhibit of booths is assured.

Final plans concerning the annual 4 H picnic were discussed. It will he held June 19th at the Old Mill State Park, beginning at 11 o'clock a. m. Twenty kittenball teams, including both boys and girls, have already begun a play off series which will determine the four boys teams and the two girls teams that will play for the championship at the picnic.

The date for the 4H achievement day was set for July 31st. Miss Juanita Silcox of the state 4H club staff is expected to be present to judge the Home Economics exhibits.

All 4H club members were urged to take part in the "Our Garden" essay contest.

Sheep are among the most disease-free of farm animals, but they need the help of good management in order to combat successfully internal parasites, says County Agent R. A. Reierson in urging Marshall county farmers to attend the sheep demonstration. One of the most important features of the demonstration will be a discussion of stomach worms, tape worms, nodular worms, and grub in the head.

Simplest methods of giving the drench will be shown, and those attending will receive complete instructions for using the copper sulfate-nicotine sulfate treatment on their flocks. In presenting the demonstrations, W. E. Morris of the Extension Service will stress equipment and methods which make it possible to drench the whole flock with very little time and trouble.

County Agent R. A. Reiersen says that loss in growth of lambs from worms is one of the most serious handicaps to profitable lamb raising here. He points out that worming is not a difficult process, and there is no good reason why any farm flock should be held back by worm troubles.

In order to grow fast and top the market off pasture, lambs not only need good pasture, but they also must be in shape to make good use of their feed.

Other sheep management practices which will be demonstrated at the meeting are dipping, docking, castrating, and pasture care of sheep. Several methods of trimming lambs will be shown.

Butter Output At Peak Level

Marshall County farmers currently enjoying record milk production and the highest butterfat prices in five years are watching the market for signs that this happy combination of heavy yield and favorable price will continue thru the summer months of peak production.

What that means to the farm income of Marshall County is readily apparent in view of the 2,500,000 lbs. of butter produced here last year.

Estimates assembled at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, futures trading center for butter, indicate production to date this year in the state running about four per cent greater than last year. In 1940, Minnesota produced 311,000,000 lbs. of creamery butter, an all time record.

Trade leaders feel that altho production appears headed for a new high, a burdensome surplus need not necessarily result. They point to defense needs to be met, and the nation-wide sale campaign of the American Dairy Association which is working with chain feed stores and independent grocers to stimulate consumer demand.

British buying of American cheese and canned milk is also a market factor, creating a greater demand for milk in these industries. Yet even with this diversion, butter production continues ahead of last year.

Mr. K. L. Halvorsen, Rev. G. T. I. Bergee of Middle River, Misses Otos, Sandberg and Mattson, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sabo, Mr. and Mrs. J. Nelson and Vernon, Mrs. L. Wegge, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden and Opal and Russel, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lorentson and Rev. and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson and Harold were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Karvonen following the Graduation Exercises on Thursday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fricker and children motored to Bemidji on Friday. Mrs. Fricker and daughter LaRue left from there for Chisholm to visit with relatives and Mr. Fricker and Boy spent the week end on a fishing trip.

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

GRETA GARBO has not only acquired a new hair-do for her next appearance on the screen—she's to have a new tint as well. It's a special one concocted for her by Sydney Guilaroff, Metro hairdresser, and he has named it "Moonlight Blonde."

As for the hair-do, it's Napoleonic—a fringe, with a soft point in the back, and "a studied shagginess characterizing the whole coiffure, complete even to forelock"; there's also the influence of the Botticelli paintings, shown in a cap of short curls.

Tim Holt, young star of RKO Westerns, and his father, Jack Holt, will be seen together with Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe in the RKO production, "The Marines Are Ready." They'll appear as father and son for the second time on the screen. The first time was 12 years ago, when Tim, a boy of 10, played the son in his father's starring vehicle, "Vanishing Pioneers." Tim is also a skilled polo player.

Between the scenes in the houseboat dining salon that you'll see in Paramount's "Nothing But the Truth," Bob Hope, Edward Arnold, Leif Erikson and Glenn Anders were amusing themselves by filling the crystal goblets to different levels with water, then playing chimes on them with silver spoons. The prop man nearly had a fit—seems the glasses were part of a dinner service worth more than $2,000.

"Send over to my house for something less expensive," urged Hope. "Our goblets are cottage-cheese glasses!"

Years ago Ruby Keeler was famous on Broadway for her dancing, in the days before she married Al Jolson. On the screen she danced along with other people; now she'll dance alone for the first time in pictures in a musical, "Sweetheart of the Campus," in which she shares top honors with Harriet Hilliard, Gordon Oliver, and Ozzie Nelson and his orchestra. Miss Keeler was a star at the Texas Guinan night club when a lad named George Raft used to stop the show with a skating Charleston.

If you've seen "The Lady Eve" you'll remember those slapstick falls of Henry Fonda's long after you forgot the plot of the picture. Preston Sturges, who wrote and directed the picture, is also responsible for "Sullivan's Travels"—and he started right off by dropping Joel McCrea from a rope's end into a barrel of water. Furthermore, McCrea had to wear a tramp's rags and a five-day beard. Veronica Lake is McCrea's co-star in this newest of the Sturges comedies. They say it will be as funny as "The Lady Eve."

Marlene Dietrich has selected the five men who, she says, have the most "womanpower"—she doesn't say what she means by that, except that it's the opposite of "manpower." Anyway, here's the list—Clark Gable, Orson Welles, Ernest Hemingway, Erich Maria Remarque and Howard Hughes.

*ODDS AND ENDS—Olivia de Havilland and George Raft are Warner Bros. star selections for "All Through the Night" . . . Olivia's sister, Joan Fontaine, has recovered from the flu and gone back to work as Cary Grant's co-star in RKO's "Before the Fact" . . . Herbert Marshall will play Bette Davis' husband in "The Little Foxes" . . . When he finishes "Bullets for O'Hara" Roger Pryor will tour the nation's draft camps with an orchestra . . . Joan Crawford gives what's probably the best dramatic performance of her career in "A Woman's Face" . . . ## Salty Seas

We know that the seas are strongly impregnated with salt, but it does not strike the average person that some seas may be saltier than others. One swimming in the Atlantic ocean would not notice much difference in the salinity of the water were he swimming again in the Pacific, but if he went into the Dead sea it would be another story, for there the water is 24½ per cent salt. There is only one sea saltier, and that is the Great Salt lake, which is 28 per cent. Of all the seas, the Caspian is the least salt, being only six-tenths of 1 per cent, and next comes Lake Van, in Turkey, which is 2 per cent. Lake Urmia, in Iran, is 15 per cent. The great oceans are only 3½ per cent salt, and do not vary appreciably, but inland seas of lesser area are strongly affected by the beds over which they lie, and minerals brought down by streams.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Sinking of Battleship Hood Indicates Failure of British to 'Bottle' Nazi Navy; Germany's Aerial Invasion of Crete Called 'Test-Tube' for Raid on England

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PACE UP:

War Swift

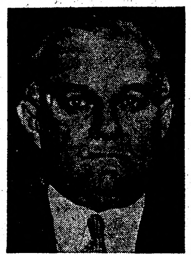
As the United States began to swing into the serious business of getting first-class aid to Britain under the lease-lend bill, though with continued and serious heckling from anti-administration quarters, the Germans suddenly stepped the war up to a furious pace not heretofore dreamed of.

The full-scale aerial invasion of Crete, plainly hailed by the Nazis as a "test-tube" attack for the ultimate invasion of Britain, was the first move, and this was accompanied by news from the ocean lanes that showed the German fleet, instead of being bottled up, was boldly sallying forth not merely into the North Sea, but far out into the Atlantic and near the American zone of protection—Greenland.

The dramatic sinking of H. M. S. Hood came with such unexpected suddenness that it left the world almost breathless—with a sense of shock entirely out of measure with the size of the catastrophe to Britain's cause, the mere sinking of one battle cruiser, albeit the largest in the world.



SEN. JOSEPH GUFFEY
In the Hood's sinking he saw that it demonstrated immediate "necessity of . . . utmost aid to Britain."

It was in the Battle of Jutland that Admiral Horace Hood, namesake of the 42-000-ton battle cruiser, lost his life on the Invincible, a vessel of the same relative class as the Hood, and destroyed in, oddly enough, exactly the same manner.

The story was dramatic enough, the tale of a sea fight between two naval squadrons on the broad Atlantic, both far from their bases. The Hood was the victim of an "unlucky hit" as the British reports said, a 15-inch shell from the German battleship Bismarck striking a magazine, which caused the main magazine to let go, blowing the ship up and sinking her in a matter of seconds.

Most of the crew of 1,304 were drowned, presumably the captain and admiral, as the Hood was flagship and bore the admiral's colors.

But back of it all questions were asked and only some of them had the answers forthcoming from British sources.

One of these was the query of why the battle had taken place so far out on the Atlantic. The British answered this by saying that their squadron had deliberately let the German ships get far away from their base in order to intercept them where they could not avoid battle.

Another question was where the German vessels were headed for, being intercepted between Greenland and Iceland, and nearer to Greenland. This was of especial interest to American naval men because of the fact that the United States had lately pledged itself to the protection of Greenland. There was no immediate answer.

Naval men in this country immediately, however, were quoted as saying that the loss of the Hood showed that it was improper to sacrifice strength of armor-plate to speed, the Hood carrying 12-inch armor where most vessels took 14-inch, in order to achieve a 32-knot speed.

American vessels were not so constructed, U. S. admirals reported, especially those now being planned.

But boiled down the news bore a disastrous note, a power note on the part of the German assault both in the battle of the Atlantic and that of the Mediterranean which gave American backers of aid-to-Britain a general moody outlook on the conduct of the war.

Greece, Jugoslavia had been disasters, so had Dunquerque, the North African campaign, the Iraq battle; the whole war, up to this point, had been a series of disasters, and the British reports on the invasion of Crete seemed to be setting up the public for an eventual addition to the series.

The battle of Crete was still the most exciting news event of the whole war because of the peculiarity of the conditions, paralleling, in a way, the expected invasion attempt against Britain.

The British were admittedly in good force, with Greek assistance, on the island, and while they had not had much time to prepare its defense, having only lately fled there from Peloponnesus, still the Germans had not had any more time to prepare their offense than the British.

The campaign resolved itself broadly into two phases—the air-borne and the sea-borne. In each there was offense and defense, and for once the British, though out-powered and out-numbered, found themselves on more even terms with the enemy.

SEN. BENNETT CLARK
In the Hood's sinking he saw truth in the statement that "convoys mean shooting and shooting means war."

The Germans were admittedly supreme in the air-borne fight, but once the Nazis landed they had no tanks nor artillery, and the British had both.

The British were admittedly superior on the sea-borne fight, but they had no aircraft protection, while the German-manned Greek fishing boats and small steamers had Stuka dive-bombers making direct hits on the British destroyers and cruisers.

Little could be told from the German claims, which, following their usual precedent, said that the Cretan campaign was a "complete success" with the British fleet decimated and the land forces getting the upper hand.

The only claim made by the British was that no vessels save a few "caiques" (Greek sailing boats) had reached the shore, and that a Nazi convoy carrying 6,000 troops had been sunk, and lurid tales were told of warships cutting through waters crowded with drowning men screaming for mercy, but how the ships were unable to pick them up for fear of "E-boats," Italian fast motor-craft carrying torpedoes.

The Germans claimed one British cruiser sunk by plane-bombings, and nine other vessels so injured that they were presumed to be out of action and admitted no such sea-borne losses as the British claimed.

The air-borne battle was admittedly, according to British sources, going better for the Germans than had been at first anticipated. Almost the first thing the Stukas did was to make the British-held airdromes untenable.

The Royal Air force, instead of allowing their fighters to be downed on their landing fields, or crashed by bomb-pits when landing, withdrew en masse from the island, turning it over to the Nazi air-vessels. After a time long-range ships came back to the fight, presumably from Alexandria and the island of Cyprus, each about 450-500 miles distant, but largely the island was undefended from the air.

Big Junkers 52s brought more than a score of soldiers on each trip and landed them on the Candia and Malemi airports, whence they took their machine guns and went into battle. Later the British reported that even 75-millimeter cannons and mortars were brought in on the largest transport planes.

QUOTES . . . On National Defense

¶ War Secretary Stimson told his press conference the Neutrality act is a "violation of our most sacred and important tradition of foreign policy, freedom of the seas. I always prophesied it would bring us into trouble." He said the act's repeal would enable U. S. ships to carry arms directly to Britain, but the question of repeal rests with "other officers of the government."

¶ Secretary of State Hull said that "control of the seas is a paramount objective of the Axis powers in their program of world domination . . . . Every consideration of our own safety and defense requires . . . that Great Britain receive adequate supplies for successful resistance." Mr. Hull advanced five points for post war co-operation in international trade without discrimination.

Civilian Defense

When President Roosevelt created the Office of Civilian Defense to co-ordinate civilian defense activities he appointed Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York to head the new set-up. LaGuardia has announced his agency will be organized in three divisions: (1) Public safety—to protect life and property; (2) engineering—for clearance of highways and maintenance of gas and water supplies; and (3) shelter and food supplies.

STRIKES:

Coal, Planes

While labor troubles appeared less frequent as the defense mediation board went into action more and more strongly, those which were vexing the defense chiefs were more vital and hit more directly against defense production.

Gone from the scene were jurisdictional disputes, and the Ford company, grim in the face of a C. I. O. victory at the NLRB polls, said it would "obey the law."

But the coal strike, with only 15 days' coal supply left above ground and the threatened strike against North American Aviation, not to mention the shipyard strike on the West coast, were the sort of thing that were giving mediators headaches.

Opponents of the C. I. O. called Lewis "dictator," while Lewis called the coal mine operators in the South some hard names. The plane workers were asking increases of minimums from 50 to 75 cents an hour, which observers said, if granted, might cause similar fights all over the industry, hitting at the very heart of the defense idea.

Planes were coming off the assembly lines slowly enough, and were carrying with them bottlenecks which were serious enough without labor difficulties to complicate things.

Knudsen, OPM chief, and Hillman, his aide, at the close of the first year of America's "all-out" defense effort, told the 1,625 new industrial facilities started, of $2,480,000,000 in new plants, of contracts of 15 billions, 200 millions of dollars, yet of growing dissatisfaction on the part of Messrs. Knudsen and Hillman with the progress made.

Said Knudsen:

"We need the help of every manufacturer, engineer and factory worker."

That was the gist of his message, and carried with it the connotation that whenever a strike occurred—some one of these three was "falling down on the job."

DIES:

Tries Again

The Dies committee, having failed to rouse a ripple of newspaper enthusiasm over his projected revealing of Communist infiltration into governmental circles, hit the front pages with a bang when it made public three documents purporting to reveal the secret rules of the Nazi Bund in this country.

Dies said that they were seized from the effects of Bund Fuehrer Kunze, now in prison. He said that they:

"Attest to the ruthless efficiency of the military setup which characterizes Hitler's machine in Germany; anticipate violence, and express fealty to the totalitarian form of government."

Having thus placed the stamp of subversiveness on the Bund, and also the stigma of "fifth columnists," the committee report said the Bund had 25,000 active members and 100,000 sympathizers outside its membership rolls.

Dies said the documents reveal a planned countrywide organization, with Fuehrer, Gauleiters (district leaders) down even to "block leaders" according to an exact imitation of the Nazi set-up.

A party message, according to the Bund organization, could theoretically be spread over the entire nation within five hours.

SHOTS:

At a King

Pistol shots rang out in Albania, directed against King Victor Emmanuel of Italy.

The shots, according to the Italian communique, went wild. The assassin was arrested. He proved, it was said, to be a Greek "his head filled with poetic dreams" of revenge for his country's defeat.

Police, the reports stated, saved the assassin from a lynching mob, in order to question him as to his associates.

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

"THAT tray of ice is just waitin' to be emptied; it's the easiest tip-over I ever saw." Joe's shifty eyes steadied for a moment with enthusiasm, as he drove this point home to the two girls on the back seat of his automobile.

"I was in that joint a while back stalling about buying old gold, and I got the layout. It's like this: The man that runs the jewelry store is old and slow. He doesn't do much business out there in the suburbs, and we can pick a time when there won't be customers to gum things up. I haven't figured out why, but he carries a good stock of diamonds. He keeps 'em in a big safe in the back room. He unlocks that safe in the morning and just keeps the door closed during the day.

"It'll take both you girls," he continued. "We'll all drive up to the front and park. Then Dot and me will go in and tell him we're just married and want to look at some silver. While we're givin' it the once-over, Ethel, you come in and tell me you think gas is leaking out of the car. I go out to see, understand, and you stay to help Dot make up her mind about the silver. It'll be a cinch for you two girls to keep him busy while I slip in the back, and dump that tray of diamonds."

"Listens good to me," Ethel agreed.

Joe reached into his pocket. "Here are the rings. Got 'em at the department store. Pretty good imitations, at that. The old fellow won't know the difference, unless you stick 'em under his nose."

There was a wistful expression in Dot's eyes, as she slowly slipped the circlets upon the proper finger of her left hand.

"Now, let's get our spiels down pat," the director of the little drama suggested.

• • •

The trio had parked in front of the jewelry store, and their plan was starting out nicely. The place was deserted, except for the squat proprietor who peered over his spectacles at the boy and Dot as they entered.

Dot made an excellent bride. There was a gentle, dreamy expression in her eyes. "We just got married," she explained in a sweet little voice, "and we want to look at some silver."

"That's fine," returned the jeweler, and all the glow of his kindly smile did not arise from the prospect of a sale. "What's your name, now?" he inquired mischievously.

Joe had thought of that, too, and, "Mrs. Samuel E. Henderson," slipped glibly off Dot's tongue.

The newly-weds did not notice it, but the old man suddenly appeared to be a trifle sleepy as he directed them to the cases of silverware.

"What are the prices of this pattern?" Dot inquired.

"I'll have to look them up," was the reply. The jeweler waddled to his desk nearby and began rummaging among papers there. He studied a list for a minute or two, and returned to quote prices.

Dot was trying to drive close bargains when Ethel entered with her message and joined Dot in badgering the proprietor for further discounts.

Then Joe was back with the suggestion, "Maybe we had better look somewhere else, Mrs. Henderson, before we buy." It all had been so easy and smooth that he could not resist an impulse to flash a sly wink at Ethel.

The first intimation that all was not well came when Joe was forced to modify his swaggering progress to the car in order to pass between two men lounging near the edge of the sidewalk. A firm hand dropped on his shoulder and a cold voice admonished, "Take it easy, kid." The next instant the three were herded back into the store.

"We got your buzz up at the station when you stepped on that button," the detective explained, after they had checked the diamonds from Joe's pocket. "We got here just in time to stand outside and watch him dump that tray. But how did you know he was going to do it?"

"I like weddings and babies," the old man said simply. "And I belong to an association which sends little presents—for advertising—to every couple in the city when they get married or have a new baby. Each member of our association gets a list of the marriage licenses of the day before from the courthouse. I guess, because I like weddings, maybe I study it a little more than the rest. There wasn't any Samuel E. Henderson on the list for yesterday."

The old man's eyes rested on Dot as he murmured, "And that's too bad."

Dot was stripping the two little rings from her finger, and biting her lower lip hard to keep her chin from quivering. "Yes, old man, that's too bad. I was going to take my share to get back home—back to Kansas."

The old jeweler appeared to be almost asleep. "Maybe, I can give you a present now," he said slowly. He turned to the officer. "Don't you think the boy will be enough?"

The plain clothes man rubbed his chin thoughtfully. "Yeah," he decided, "the boy'll be enough."

Was It but a Suggestion From Exhausted Clerk?

Frock after frock had been displayed to the lady with the supercilious air, until the salesperson in the exclusive dress shop was on the point of nervous exhaustion.

The customer would inspect each dress and then make biting remarks about most of them. At last she looked around the devastated place with an overbearing glance and complained:

"All your frocks are so skimpy. I believe I would look better in something flowing."

The tired clerk was quick to seize the opening.

"Madam might try the river," she said coldly.

Let us give to our unhappy memories a large dose of absent treatment.

The wise man enjoys what he has while the fool is envious for what he hasn't.

Greatness does not reside within our strength, but merely in the control of it.

They who stake their all upon a chance game stand little chance of winning in the greater game of life.

"The DRINK of MODERATION"

In a "Liberty Loving" country folks are going to gather in social groups and enjoy life. Enjoying life can be carried to extremes as it can follow the road of moderation. Beer fits into the "moderation" picture. Here is a beverage which Doctors hold is not intoxicating, yet it promotes good fellowship and sociability.

The undersigned Brewers are cooperating to the best of their ability to see that beer taverns are respectable, law-abiding and inviting. For it is their desire that beer be sold only under wholesome conditions, so you may continue to enjoy this beverage of moderation.

Incidentally, the Brewing Industry is contributing over a million dollars a day to our National Government in taxes in addition to the local city, county and state taxes.

Change Your Food Habits

Dr. W. H. Sebrell, a member of the United States Public Health Service, Washing, D. C. believes that the new enriched flour and bread on the market is one of the major accomplishments of our time to meet the serious dietary deficiencies which exist in this country. Other experts, like Dr. Sebrell, say that we can help prevent disease by making needed changes in our food habits.

A well informed homemaker in Pennington county has a tip for those who wish to serve an attractive, light, whole-wheat bread - in other words, a richer enriched bread.

She suggests using one-half whole wheat, one-half enriched flour, milk for the liquid, and molasses for the sweetening The bread will be richer in Vitamin B-1, nicotinic acid, iron and calcium than the enriched bread on the market, and almost as rich as 100 per cent whole-wheat bread.

It is this kind of food that helps to build strong active boys and girls and keeps adults in step with the younger generation.

Wheat Growers Favor Quotas

Marshall county wheat farmers voted 891 for to 95 against wheat marketing quotas during the national referendum held Saturday, Chas. W. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall County Agricultural Conservation committee, announced.

The Marshall county wheat growers followed growers throughout the nation with nearly complete returns on the refrendum giving 394,292 for and only 95,489 votes against, according to press reports.

Big Woods township with 73 votes for and 0 against was the banner township in the county while Donnelly split even with 11 votes for and 11 votes against. All other townships voted top heavy in favor of the marketing quota.

By approving quotas, wheat farmers were virtually assured a government wheat loan of 85 per cent of parity, or about 97 cents a bushel, compared with last years 56 percent of parity or 72 cents a bushel. The loans were contingent upon approval of quotas and the availability of funds. Legislation providing loan funds is now pending in Congress.

Under quotas, farmers will be limited to the sale of wheat produced on their 1941 AAA planting allotments, plus any wheat from previous crops. Grain produced on excess acreage would be subject to a penalty tax of about 48 cents a bushel unless it was stored under bond for future use or was delivered to the government for relief use.

Officials said no accurate figures were available yet on the quantity of wheat that might be subject to penalty if sold. There were unofficial estimates that it might run between 50,000,000 and 100,000,000 bushels.

Because the country has a prospective supply of old and new wheat sufficient to meet its needs for nearly two years, the department has reduced the 1942 planting allotment 7,000,000 acres to the 55,000,000-acre minimum set up in farm legislation.

Officials expect much of the surplus acreage to be devoted to production of milk, chickens, eggs, meat and other products needed by Great Britain.

Minnesota Has Many Parks

With 37 state parks, more than a score of state foress and two of the country's largest national forests, Minnesota has a strong allure for lovers of sylvan retreats in which to spend a summer vacation, according to Victor A. Johnston, director of the state tourist bureau.

He also stressed that never before have these recreational beauty spots been more inviting than they are this season. An earlier than usual spring breakup and much rainfall have clothed these parks and forests in a scintilating green of more than usual splendor for this time of the year. To the bird lover, added charm is afforded these arborial scenes by the joyous symphonies of the myriads of songbirds that summer there.

Camping in these enchanting regions affords the ultimate of the ardent outdoor man's dream of a blissful outing. Here he has an opportunity to exist under conditions practically unchanged since the first explorers saw them. Or, if that seems too strenuous, he can strike camp in one of the state parks, where ample camp facilities are provided by the state conservation department's division of parks.

For outdoor vacationist who crave the comforts and diversions afforded by modern tourist resorts, Minnesota has more than 2,500 such, some the best on the American continent, Johnston said. Current reports to the bureau indicate many of these are doing a record business for this time of the year and have more advance reservations than ever before so early in the season.

Who's Who In Minnesota

J. R. Furman, representative of the Minnesota Editorial association, will be in Marshall county this week compiling data and securing the services of local historians to assist in the recording of the lives and activities of the outstanding individuals and a history of the county itself. Material gathered will be used in the state-wide publication, "Who's Who in Minnesota" which is being published by the Minnesota Editorial Association.

This publication will be issued in book form. A complete chapter will be devoted to each of the counties. This chapter will be composed of a short record of the growth and development of the county, in addition to the biographical sketches of the outstanding individuals who have been selected for inclusion.

The Minnesota Editorial association is a state-wide service organization of the daily and weekly newspayers.

Mrs. J. Dahl, who has been visiting here the past week, left Monday for her home at Stewartville. Mrs. V. E. Oakey and Jackie accompanied her home for a visit with relatives.

Suicide Club At County Fair

Frank Winkley's Suicide Club, who, since their performance on the Red River Valley Circuit three years ago have traveled far and wide dissemminating their particularly thrilling brand of automobile and motorcycle, stunts, come back to Warren for one performance in the afternoon on Monday, June.

Booked at many of the leading fairs of the country during the 1940 season the Suicide Club, in 1941, has a route that includes such auspicious expositions as the South Dakota State Fair, Huron, the All-Iowa Fair of Cedar Rapids, and the Clay County Fair of Spencer, Iowa, which is considered the largest county fair in the world.

Sporting an array of equipment that equals or excels that displayed by the best thrill shows on the road the Suicide Club claims to have a vastly different appearance than when presented here last time. More than a dozen automobiles and trucks will be supported by a bevy of motorcycles which will all combine to offer a highly satisfactory program that includes leaping over six automobiles in a stock sedan, triple motorcycle barrier crashes and an aerial dive bomber crash in an automobile to mention only a few of the newer stunts.

Many of the old favorite performers of the Suicide Club will return with a few new faces in the organizntion. Most sensational of the younger performers will no doubt be "Buddy" Rapp of Waukon, Iowa. Considered one of the best thrill prospects of 1940 Buddy will duplicate any stunt ever devised in the thrill game.

Complete change of program will be evident every afternoon of the exposition with the National Auto Polo Championship on Tuesday, July 1st and Jimmie Lynch's World's Fair Death Dodgers in an all new and different show Wednesday afternoon, July 2.

May Was Disastrous Month

May was a disastrous month for Minnesota's traffic safety campaign with 52 people killed in traffic accidents.

This was 11 more persons than met violent death in traffic during the same month of 1940, and 17 more fatalities than were anticipated in the "budget of allowable deaths" fixed by the Minnesota Editorial association in its 'Save 100 Lives' campaign.

The May tragedies brought traffic fatilities since January 1 to 176, only three below the 179 deaths recorded during the same period of 1640.

Due, however, to drastic reductions in motor vehicle and pedestrian deaths during October, December, January and April the editor's 13 month safety campaign which was started on September 1, is only four short of its goal with four more months to go. This is true despite the fact that the volume of travel on Minnesota streets and highways during the first five months of the year, as indicated by the gauge of gasoline consumption, has increased more than approximately 50,000,000 motor vehicle miles.

Editors were urged by Basil L. Walters, Chairman of the "Save 100 Lives" committee, to redouble their local traffic safety efforts during June and the next three monthswhen traffic is at its heaviest and Minnesota is most prone to motor vehicle and pedestrian mishaps.

Two hundred thirty-three people, men, women and children, died in traffic during the months of June, July, August and September in 1940. This figure will have to be reduced by 35 if the Minnesota Editorial Association traffic safety campaign is to achieve its goal of saving 100 lives.

Joseph Nelson had to consult a doctor on Wednesday to have his eye treated, after he had gotten something in it.

The Holt Boy Scout Troop again had a stand at the Creamery picnic and done a gross business of $91.00 which netted them a profit of $25.00.

Sheep Demonstration Today

County sheep men who attend the sheep improvement demonstration will see demonstrated handy equipment for dipping the flock and discuss the proper solution to accomplish the job of tick and lice control.

No farm flock can be thrifty during the summer and put top lambs on the market off grass unless it is reasonably free from parasites, says County Agent R. A. Reierson. Tick infestation is especially hard on the lambs, he says, because the ticks transfer themselves from the old ewes to the lambs after shearing time. Ticks can become so bad as to cause death, but usually the losses are in the form of poor grains and damaged fleeces.

Dipping, which is sometimes regarded as a disagreeable task, can be much simplified by the use of proper equipment, says W. E. Morrie, who will supervice the sheep day demonstration. He will show how to prepare dipping solutions, how to run the animals thru, and he will discuss the effect of proper dipping in improving fleeces and getting better gains on pasture.

The dipping demonstration will be only a part of the program to be given. The most improved methods of worming, docking, and castrating will be shown, both with regard to methods that fit the small flock and the large flock.

Pasture management will also come in for attention.

All these demonstrations will be held at the Hiram Arends farm two miles east of Middle River on Friday the 13 at 9 a. m.

Full Culture

No man receives the full culture of a man in whom the sensibility to the beautiful is not cherished; and there is no condition of life from which it should be excluded. Of all luxuries this is the cheapest, and the most at hand, and most important to those conditions where coarse labor tends to give grossness to the mind.—Channing.

FAMOUS ALL-BRAN MUFFINS. EASY TO MAKE. DELICIOUS!

They really are the most delicious muffins that ever melted a pat of butter! Made with crisp, toasted shreds of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, they have a texture and flavor that have made them famous all over America.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN MUFFINS

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 tablespoons shortening | ¾ cup milk |
| ¼ cup sugar | 1 cup flour |
| 1 egg | ½ teaspoon salt |
| 1 cup All-Bran | 2½ teaspoons baking powder |

Cream shortening and sugar; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk; let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 6 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¼ inches in diameter.

Try these delicious muffins for dinner tonight or for tomorrow morning's breakfast. They're not only good to eat; they're mighty good for you as well. For several of these muffins will add materially to your daily supply of what physicians call "bulk" in the diet, and thus help combat the common kind of constipation that is due to lack of this dietary essential. Eat ALL-BRAN every day (either as a cereal or in muffins), drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation due to lack of "bulk." ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

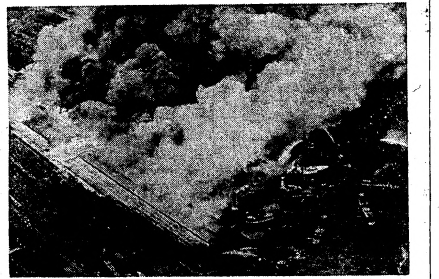
Great Britain's Loss of Crete to Nazis Endangers Mediterranean Position; President's Pledge to 'Help Britain' Spurs Study of Aid Being Extended

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



Billows of smoke rise from the Erie railroad terminal in Jersey City, to form a cloud that palled the entire city of New York. Frantically the tiny fireboats below play tiny streams of water on the gigantic fire which destroyed over five million dollars worth of defense and other materials. Although authorities had been warned of sabotage and were watching, the fire broke out following an explosion in a hay shed.

SUPREME COURT:
A Retirement

Seventy-nine-year-old Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes of the U. S. Supreme court is retiring from the bench, July 1 of this year. In a telegram in answer to the request on the part of Hughes to cease active duty at that time, President Roosevelt accepted the retirement and spoke of "the splendid service" rendered. The "grand old man" of the court has been eligible for retirement since 1934 but he continued to serve in a regular capacity up to the present time. It is known that Mrs. Hughes has been urging him for some time to retire and spend his time in rest and travel. He gave age and health as his reasons for wanting to retire. His career of public service has few parallels in U. S. history. He has served as governor of New York, secretary of state, presidential candidate, member of the world arbitration tribunal and was twice justice of the Supreme court.

CRETE:
Its Meaning

The Battle of Crete, another outstanding victory for Germany, won almost without Italian aid except in the closing stages, was not only a serious loss for Britain, but it was marking an epoch in warfare from several standpoints.

The German claim apparently was justified that it was the first airborne capture of an island where the attacker did not have control of the water lane separating it from the mainland.

In the case of the Norwegian invasion, which in some ways was similar to Crete, the Germans did control the water division between themselves and Norway.

But into Crete they had to send and supply an army into a country occupied by the enemy, presumably an enemy in position to send reinforcements and supplies by ship to their own forces.

The hand-to-hand fighting at the beginning of this campaign should have been more to the advantage of the British, yet the parachutists and gliders arrived in such force that the advantage rapidly wilted away and the British found themselves being pushed back by superior forces, sufficiently well armed and well supplied to hold out and await their air-borne reinforcements.

That the Germans themselves had little confidence in the experimental war was shown by the fact that both they and the Italians were ready with shiploads of expeditionary soldiers, and the Germans, at least, tried to land theirs and lost an announced 5,000 men.

But this very attempt proved another thing—that fleets are vulnerable to attack from swarms of airplanes. Reports showed that the Germans allotted hundreds of Stukas to this attack, and survivors of the plane-ship battle, British survivors, told stories of 20 Stukas at a time being assigned to each ship, and that when they went away their places were taken by 20 others.

Now, the dive-bomber is apparently able to hit or come close to its objective and it makes a poor target for anti-aircraft fire, so great is its speed and so narrow the appearance of its approach.

Hence the destroyers and cruisers were hit and badly hit, and many went to the bottom, the fleet had to withdraw to Alexandria to repair its wounds, and the coast was clear for the Italians to land their shipborne forces.

This was the last straw, but the battle had been won without that, and the German propagandists took full advantage of the fact to predict England would fall the same way.

The Australian premier decried the battle as a simple lack of machines on the part of the British defenders.

AID:
A Question

Congress and many newspapers were beginning to question how much lease-lend aid was reaching British points, and this question the President promised to answer "in round figures."

But one of Harry Hopkins' associates, in answer to a senatorial inquiry, wrote a letter which tended to the belief, expressed by Senator Byrd of Virginia, that the aid thus far sent had been "infinitesimal."

Burns, the Hopkins associate, explained the delays required to set stuff aboard ship for Britain, explained that much of the material being turned out was required by "our own forces," and suggested that the few weeks since the passage of the bill had been needed just to start things in motion.

Senator Byrd got the idea that not much had gone, in fact the Burns letter had attempted to explain why he couldn't give figures on how much had been sunk, which was what Byrd wanted to know. Burns said there couldn't have been much sunk because much hadn't gone.

Byrd pointed to figures of 400 to 600 combat planes a month being built, medium tanks just started; 90-mm. cannon for anti-aircraft fire just started, and heavy tanks not started yet. He voiced sharp criticisms of the President's production and lease-lend set-up, and it was following this criticism that the President promised a report.

But it was likely that this report would not come until the 90-day required period was up, 12 weeks and more after the passage of the bill.

At all events it was plain that the hiatus between congress voting seven billions of dollars to implement the lease-lend bill and the setting down in British hands of the seven billions of dollars' worth of war material was going to be considerable.

The consensus of opinions as to defense production was that the country had done "pretty well" in the first year, but that the country was going to have to do "much better" in the future.

SPEECH:
Aftermath

Some newspapers who had praised the President's fireside chat to the highest, in the days that followed began to write editorials criticizing the President for not carrying out his implied promises.

The President's press conference on the Wednesday following the Tuesday of his speech had been a shock, and it produced some pretty bitter editorial comment.

The President, who had demanded "freedom of the seas" and had promised any and all measures necessary to achieve this, turned around and said that he didn't mean that American ships had to go where they might be sunk, and he didn't think he would ask repeal of the neutrality act, which forbid just that.

The American press began to wonder whether the President's speech had been just words, and that his policy was going to be much weaker than what had been expected by the public from the speech. Even the anti-interventionists were frankly surprised by the turn events had taken, though their thunder did not lessen.

On the labor question, too, the President had indicated that he would not tolerate stoppage of work in defense plants, yet the Pacific coast machinists' walkout still continued.

In this strike, as well as others which were continuing, there seemed no immediate change in the government's active attitude, the mediation board going through the same procedures as it had before the President's speech, and the President himself taking no active hand, or making any personal moves.

RUN WIRE THROUGH HOLES IN A TIN BOX FILLED WITH SHOT OR PEBBLES THEN GLUE LID ON

RUBBER-COVERED wire such as is used around garages serves to make this smart lamp; which also requires a tin candy box for the base; three large and six small spools for the standard; a plug and chain socket and a brass nipple that screws into the bottom of the socket. The spools and box may be painted before they are put together according to the directions in the sketch. You will find complete directions for making this fabric-covered bristol board lamp shade on page 12 of your copy of Book 1.

And now, here is news for all of you who have enjoyed making things for your homes described in the first six of the series of little books that have been offered with these articles. Book 7 is ready. On every one of its 32 pages is a substantial money-saving idea, and not a useless dust catcher among them. That is true of all of the books of the series. They have been planned as a service to you and every day letters testify that they are solving your home-making problems.

THE GREATEST FAMILY* in the Northwest!

* Nearly 100,000 Northwest Dairy Farmers — 400,000 People — the Northwest's Largest Family celebrates an Anniversary today! During 20 Years of Progress Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc., owned and controlled by Northwest Dairy Farmers, has been making history. Land O'Lakes Dairy Farmers, marketing the products of the world's richest dairy region, have won a greater share of the consumer's dollar for the farmer. They have made the farmers' own brand — Land O'Lakes — the world's largest selling sweet cream butter!

Celebrates 20 YEARS OF PROGRESS

All men dream and hope, but America has free men who think and act—and make their dreams and hopes come true!

In a single mighty force men of America work togeth. Their co-operative effort is a Principle Inherent in Democracy.

Working for the Good of All America—defending America's security in its way of life—these are goals that challenge Manpower in America to get things done!

Twenty years ago this Dairy Month, Northwest Dairy Farmers dreamed and hoped and planned. They organized their own co-operative marketing association. They set a course. They toiled. They reached their goal and soared on to even undreamed heights.

Today, Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc.,—built by Manpower in America working in the spirit of true co-operation—may well celebrate its 20 Years of Progress.

Through their own co-operative effort — through public confidence earned — through their co-operative ownership of the farmers' own brand name—Land O'Lakes Dairy Farmers today face the world secure and unafraid!

Billions IN VOLUME—Millions OF EXTRA DOLLARS FOR NORTHWEST DAIRY FARMERS

● Twenty years ago on June 7, 1921, dairy farmers representing 350 Minnesota co-operative creameries met in the State Capitol in St. Paul and organized their own co-operative marketing association. This organization was first known as the Minnesota Co-operative Creameries Association. It became Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., when its benefits were extended to all dairy farmers in the Northwest.

● Today Land O'Lakes consists of hundreds of creameries, cheese factories, cream stations and milk plants throughout the Northwest. Ownership of these is vested in nearly 100,000 Northwest Dairy Farmers.

● Land O'Lakes Dairy Farmers have proved themselves able business men. They have earned a record of financial responsibility matched by few in business. Land O'Lakes has never asked for discounts on any of its obligations. In the handling and retirement of its certificates and capital obligations, it has always maintained the face value and par value even during all the years of one of the worst depressions in world history.

● The Land O'Lakes aim is to return the biggest possible share of the consumer's dollar to the farmer. In spite of increases in costs of materials, labor and taxes Land O'Lakes reduced its per unit operating cost in 1940 over the previous year.

● In 20 years Land O' Lakes sales of dairy products total 1,916,195,178 units.

● Each Land O'Lakes Dairy Farmer has marketed an average of $10,000 in dairy products through Land O'Lakes.

● As a result of co-operative marketing, the Land O'Lakes farmer nets today about 4 cents more per pound for his butter. This extra income has accrued to other Northwest dairy farmers, too. Today this means eleven million extra dollars yearly for dairy farmers in Minnesota alone.

● Quality improvement is one of the greatest achievements of this co-operative organization. It has meant higher returns to the farmer. It has established and maintained public demand for the Farmers' Own Brand. Land O' Lakes is the world's largest selling sweet cream butter.

See The Marshall Co. Fair

Final preparations are now nearing completion for the 35th Annual Marshall County Fair which will be held at Warren on June 30, July 1 and 2.

"Entertainment features for the 1941 Fair are destined to surpass anything that has ever been presented in Marshall county and from the opening on Monday through Wednesday night there will not be a dull moment on the grounds," said R. B. Taralseth, president. "The fair belongs to the people of Marshall county and is operated solely for their benefit and for the progress of Northwest agriculture," he said.

Because of increased interest in the 1941 Fair an the part of 4-H clubs throughout the county, fair officials have found it necessary to move the location of the Open Grain, Grasses and Vegetable show from the 4-H club building to the grandstand bldg. This change will provide additional space for all the 4-H club booths, culinary, garden and the sewing exhibits, while the grain show will also be given a more convenient place in which to exhibit, said O. M. Mattson, secretary.

Record exhibits are anticipated in all departments of the fair with hundreds of county residents making inquirie for Premium Lists.

Nohre-Peterson Vows Spoken

Miss Gertrude Nohre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Nohre and Glenn Peterson, son Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig Halvorson of Viking were united in marriage Sunday afternoon, June 15th at a four o'clock lawn wedding at the home of the bride's parents. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson performed the single ring ceremony.

The vows were spoken before an improvised white alter decorated with ferns and roses. As the wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Mrs. Alvin Dahlstrom of Thief River Falls the bride and groom marched to the alter followed by Eleanor Peterson, maid of honor and Glenn Halvorson of Viking as first best man, and Miss Agnes Nohre as bridesmaid and Earl Styrlund of Viking as second best man.

The bride was becomingly attired in an afternoon dress of Redwood tan of Duplan Alpaca Weave. Her accessories were beige. Her only jewelry was a gold cross necklace, a gift from the groom. She carried an arm bouquet of American roses, white Pompoms and Ferns.

The maid of honor wore a rose colored dress with beige accessories and the bridesmaid a blue dress with white accessories. Both carried a corsage similar to that of the bride. Both the bride and groom's mothers were attired in sea shell rose colored dresses.

Marvin Sandberg sang "O Perfect Love" and Mrs. Oliver Nohre sang "Crowned With Thy Benediction" both accompanied accompanied by Mrs. Dahlstrom.

Following the ceremony a two course luncheon was served. The bridal couple, immediate relatives and Rev. and Mrs. Hanson were seated at a table decorated in rose and white. Centering the table was a three layered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom. Also white tapers and large bouquets of flowers helped grace the table. The other relatives and friends were served buffet style. The waitresses at the bridal table were: Misses Harryet and Esther Lufkin of Thief River Falls and Miss Marilyn Wegge.

Approximately 100 people were present. After the serving, all the beautiful wedding gifts were opened.

Mr. and Mrs. Peterson will make their home with the brides parents for the time being as the groom is employed there.

LaCombe-Doran Wedding

Against a lovely background of spirea, irises, snowballs and other spring flowers, Miss Grace Margaret LaCombe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph LaCombe of Mentor, became the bride of Elmer James Doran, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Doran of Plummer, at 9 o'clock Thursday, June 5, Rev. Father Funk of Fosston officiated at the single ring ceremony which took place in St. Andrew's church at Mentor.

The bride entering on the arm of her, wore a floor lenght gown of white frosted organdy fashioned along princess lines. Her figertip length veil, which was of white net with heavily embroidered border, fell from a jeweled tiara. She carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Rosella Doran, sister of the groom, acting as bridesmaid wore a floor length gown of pink frosted organdy fashioned similar to that of the bride's. She wore a shoulder length veil of pink net caught with pink carnations and carried a bouquet of white carnations and lilies of the valley.

The flower girls, Miss Patricia Doran of Grygla a neice of the groom and Miss Marilyn LaComb the bride's youngest sister, wore floor length gowns of deep rose organdy and shoulder length veils of pink net caught with lilies of the valley and carried baskets of garden flowers.

Mr. Dailard LaCombe brother of the bride acted as bestman and Mr. Willard LaCombe of Milwaukee, Wisc., the bride's eldest brother, served as usher.

The mothers of the bride and groom wore afternoon dresses of Navy blue sheer and shoulder corsages of American Beauty roses and white carnation.

At noon a wedding dinner and reception was held for about forty relatives in Buhn's Hotel at Maple Lake. A decorated wedding cake graced the table where the bridal party was seated.

The young couple left the following day for Bemidji where the groom will attend summer school at the State Teachers College. After Sept. 1st they will be at home at Brooks where the groom is principal of Brooks school.

Rev. S. T. Palm of Brook Park Minnesota, spent the first part of the week at the parsonage and visiting old friends in the community. Rev. Palm served Nazareth congregation from 1905 to 1908. Despite his 83 years, Rev. Palm is still spry, robust, hale and hearty with the alertness and keeness of a young man. This is his first real visit since his departure, with the exception of a short trip made here many ago. He came with Rev. Hanson from Gatzke on Sunday evening. His greatest impression is how the country has been turned from a wilderness, full of sloughs and swamp, into the beautiful agricultural dairying country we have today.

A lot of people gathered at Ringbo on Saturday to celebrate Homecoming. The Holt Band helped out by playing several numbers on the program. The main speakers were Miss Thora Skomedal and Hon. Judge Nels M. Engen of Warren. It was reported that a teacher who taught that school 50 years ago was also present.

Two Pioneers Called Sunday

The people of this community were saddened on Monday morning to hear of the death late Sunday evening of two pioneers. Those who answered the call were Mrs. Wm. Wendt, who passed away at 7:45 and Mr. Paul T. Olson who also died at about the same hour.

Funeral services for Mrs. Wendt were conducted here yesterday and we will have a complete obituary next week.

Life Of Paul T. Olson

Funeral services for Mr. Olson were conducted from the Nazareth Lutheran church here on Wednesday and from the Bethlehem church in New Solum.

Paul Theodore Olson was born on October 16, 1885, in Stavanger, Norway, He emigrated to America in 1883, coming to Beloit, Wisconsin. Here he worked about a year and then moved to New Solum where he settled.

On January 30, 1885, he was united in marriage to Miss Christina Nelson. They made their home in New Solum until 1916 when they moved to Holt which was his home until he died.

On October 16, 1984, many neighbors and friends gathered for their golden wedding. This was held on Mr. Olson's birthday.

For over 56 years, the Lord through His grace permitted Mr. and Mrs. Olson to live a full and happy married life together. To this happy union were born the following children:

Arthur and Celia, (Mrs. Oluf Erickson) of New Solum.

Theodore of Spooner.

Dorothy and Amy (Mrs. K. O. Tideman) both of Fargo.

Racine preceded him in death in 1939.

There are also 9 grandchildren surviving him: Clarice, Leona and Alvin Olson of New Solum; Marcella Olson of Fargo, Raymond, Robert and James Olson of Thief River Falls; Norman Lucille of Spooner.

He also leaves one brother, Jonas, and 3 sisters, Dorothy, Sena and Maria, all of Norway.

He died at his home in Holt after a hard and painful illness on Sunday evening, June 15, 1941 at the age of 85 years, and 8 months.

Rev. T. C. L. Hanson and Rev Peterson of Viking officiated at the rites and interment was made in the Bethlehem church yard in New Solum.

Teachers.

The Weather

The weather the past week - - for a change - - has had more or less sunshine. Wednesday was a real hot day with about 90 in the shade.

---

Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and Dorothy, Marlan Augustine, Beatrice and Evelyn Larson and Glenn and Lillian Olson of Middle River were visitors at the Aspelin home Friday evening.

---

Mrs. K. Nyberg of Thief River Falls, a pioneer of this community celebrated her 80th birthday on Tuesday and she is still hale and hearty.

Land O'Lakes 20 Years Old

How Land O'Lakes Creameries Inc., gives dairy farmers of the Holt community an assured market for their products was explained by Walter Larsen, manager of the Farmers Cooperative Creamery.

Land O'Lakes Creameries, of which the Farmers Cooperative Creamery is a member, is celebrating 20 years of progress during National Dairy Month.

This cooperative dairy products marketing association, which is owned and controlled by nearly 100,000 Northwest dairy farmers was organized on June 7, 1921.

"Through cooperative marketing all dairy products produced by our patrons have an assured sale," Mr. Larson said. "Our membership in Land O'Lakes is a guarantee to our patrons that all their dairy products will be sold. This frees them of sales worries and permits them to concentrate on producing dairy products.

"Cooperative marketing has made Land O'Lakes Butter the world's largest selling sweet cream butter. It has given wide sale to Land O'Lakes Cheese, Land O'Lakes Evaporated Milk and many other Land O'Lakes products.

"In addition, because of cooperation, Land O'Lakes returns the biggest possible share of the consumers' dairy products dollar to the farm. And in Land O' Lakes the farmer has the extra security of public confidence in the farmer's own brand name.

"The same Land O'Lakes produdts that are sold by our local creamery in this community are nationally accepted and the favorite brand in many of the largest cities of the country."

The Farmers Cooperative Cooperative creamery is a leader in the Land O'Lakes Creameries affairs. Officers of the creamery are: E. O. Waagedahl, President; O. H. Nohre, Vice-president; J. P. Augustine, Secretary; H. D. Inman and C. O. Johnson are the Directors. Walter Larson is operator manager.

The local creamery was founded in 1907.

Bible Camp Next Week

The annual Lake of the Woods Bible Camp will be held at Baudette next week. The faculty this year will consist of Prof. G. L. Scheberg of Concordia College at Moorhead, Miss Ragna Stenerson and Rev. R. M. Fjelstad of Thief River Falls, Rev. H. O. Peterson of Viking, Rev. T. C. L. Hanson. All indications are that the attendance at Camp from the various parts of northwestern Minnesota will be the largest in history. The cost of Camp for entire week is $5.00. This includes board, lodging, tuition and all the other facilities at camp. The girls are quartered in cabins of 24 bunks each; the boys' dormitory consists of a large two story building. The forenoons are devoted entirely to Bible study and Christian instruction while the afternoons are set aside for conferences and recreation. The evening inspirationals will be conducted by pastors Peterson and Hanson alternating.

The local Luther League is sponsoring an Ice Cream Social on Sunday evening for the benefit of those who are going to Camp. Mr. Ernest Gjelten, a student of Luther Theological Seminary, St. Paul, will be the speaker. Mr. Gjelten is parish assistant for Rev. Hanson in the Gatzke congreation. Rev. Hanson will show his movies of the 1939 and 1940 Bible Camps.

There will be a large delegation from Holt and vicinity. On Monday of this week, there were 20 who were definately planning on going. The local school bus, with Mr. Geo. W. Karvonen as driver, has been chartered to take the campers from Thief River Falls and Holt to Camp.

On Sunday, June 29, is Rally Day at camp. Divine worship at 10:30 and special services in the afternoon. On that day, the camp grounds are crowded with visitors from the Crookston and Thief River Falls Circuits who spend the day there. All are invited to come and spend the day there. Meals are being served at the usual low camp rates.

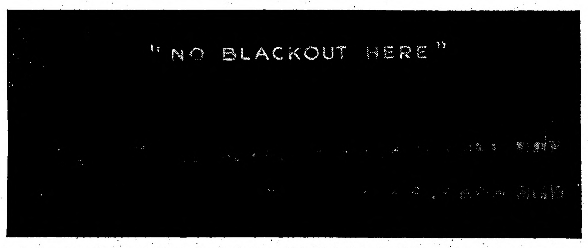
STATE SCHOOL OF SCIENCE AT WAHPETON WORKS TWO SHIFTS TRAINING MEN FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE WORK



There is no blackout in the trade school shops at the State School of Science where instruction goes on night and day preparing regular day students and defense trainees for employment in skilled crafts. Major departments located in this building include welding, machine shop, auto mechanics, air conditioning, electrical, printing, electrical refrigeration, and drafting and estimating for builders.

AVIATION WORK POPULAR FIELD

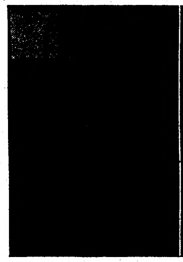
A former department head of the Glenn Martin airplane factory gives instruction in aircraft riveting and in aircraft assembly work. During this past year 150 men were in training in the aviation department of the school.

Defense Jobs Call For Experienced Welders



Welds made in the school shops are all tested before being passed by instructors.

The welding department has been in operation day and night throughout the school year. Only tradesmen who are expert in their field are employed as shop instructors.

Pay-roll Job Training For Defense Work

SHOP OPERATES NIGHT AND DAY

Scientific training in the operation of lathes, planers, shapers, drill presses and milling machines is given in the trade school. There is a heavy demand for skilled machine operators in defense industries in many sections of the United States.

Efficient Mechanics Scarce Says Knudsen

In the mechanical shops of the Science School increasing numbers are receiving instruction each year. The coming shortage of efficient automobile mechanics is stressed in a bulletin recently mailed to garages throughout the United States by William Knudsen of the U. S. Defense Commission.

Unsought Thoughts

The thoughts that come often unsought, and, as it were, drop into the mind, are commonly the most valuable of any we have, and therefore should be secured, because they seldom return again.—Locke.

Cruel Conqueror

The conqueror is not so much pleased by entering into open gates as by forcing his way. He desires not the fields to be cultivated by the patient husbandman; he would have them laid waste by sword and fire. It would be his shame to go by a way already opened.—Lucan.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

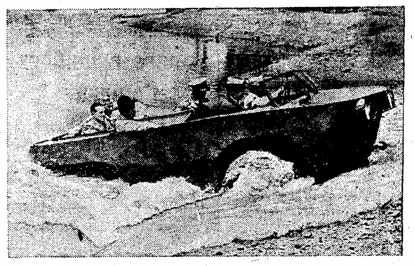
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Acts to End Defense Tie-Ups As Troops Take Over Plane Plant; Trouble in Syria and Middle East Due to End War's 'Breathing Spell'

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



FORT BELVOIR, VA.—Army officials are pictured here testing an amphibian reconnaissance car capable of 60 miles-per-hour on land and 8 to 12 miles-per-hour on water. Capt. Eugene Moseley, chief test officer, Quartermaster corps, is driving the "Aqua-Cheetah" and passengers are members of the army engineers board.

PRODUCTION:
At Home

As the conflict overseas went into a breathing spell, the nation moved forward to forge a wartime industrial plan which would succeed in producing the goods and getting them to Britain.

As Wendell Willkie toured the nation urging immediate convoys, and lashing back at his critics for so doing, step by step President Roosevelt was trying to carry out some of his "fireside chat" pledges.

The knottiest and most immediate problem was that of labor, which found more than 50,000 workers out on defense strikes, with the North American Aviation walkout the most serious, and the logging strike in the Northwest the bitterest—being the one which flaunted the powers of the National Defense Mediation board.

The President, after waiting until the board had patiently fallen down on the job, issued what he had never done before, a plain threat to the unions involved that if they did not submit to arbitration, the government would take over the plant.

Despite the pleas of the national union officials local strike leaders decided to continue the strike.

It was then that the President's threat became fact and U. S. army moved in to take charge of the plant. Troops advanced on the picket lines and were soon inside the plant. Notice was given that all workers desiring to go back to work were now able to do so.

Thus the government's patient policy with labor to help in the all-out defense effort turned from that of merely a request to a demand. It was clear that under the provisions of the unlimited emergency the government had the authority to act as it did.

Although the army was in direct charge of the plant and had assured all workers that they would be given adequate protection, mediation efforts still went forward. Washington official sources disclosed that every effort was being made to reach an agreement between the demands of the local union and the company.

Simultaneously it was learned that a few of the strikers, who had been classified 2-A in the draft, were called for their physical exams, and informed that if they went back to work they would probably be reclassified in the deferred group, but that if they did not, they might be expected to be sent to camp forthwith.

The presidential threat and the draft action were seen by observers as the first sign that the government was "cracking down" on the labor-capital problem with some of its total force.

The administration also gathered to itself the right to dictate priorities on the flow of raw materials and machine tools to defense industries, and also moved to meet a shortage of oil by presenting favorably a plan to build a huge pipeline system from the southern oil fields to the industrial East.

A recommendation for gasless Sundays and daylight time for the whole nation were other steps showing the trend of the day—toward a recognized, workable plan to mobilize American industrial men and factory power to a point where its functioning would be sufficient to turn out the needed engines and munitions of war.

SPELL:
For Breathing

Following the defeat of Britain in Crete fighting dropped almost to its lowest possible terms in the European war, but it became bitter enough in diplomatic circles, and there was ample evidence that actual warfare would break out soon in the Middle East on perhaps a fiercer scale than any thus far.

For Hitler was determined to conquer Suez, Malta, Alexandria and Gibraltar, drive the British out of the Mediterranean, all as a possible prelude to the long-deferred invasion of England itself.

Britain, on the other hand, having committed itself to defend Crete "to the death," and driven out of that stronghold, now announced that it would not only defend northern Africa and the Middle East, but that its forces now were so disposed that it had hopes of victory.

The diplomatic struggle, while not so blood-chilling as had been the swarms of parachutists descending on the mountain-tops of Crete, was sufficiently awe-inspiring for those with intelligence enough to understand what it was all about.

Britain was seeking to justify a move into Syria by stating that 15,000 Germans, many of them carrying suitcases marked with a large "J" to indicate that they were Jewish refugees, had "taken possession" of the country, making it "occupied territory."

This the Germans denied, and France cryptically said it would "defend its colony" against any aggression, the statement pointedly directed against Britain and the Free French under DeGaulle.

Paralleling this diplomatic struggle was Germany's effort toward Moscow, apparently to frighten Stalin into permitting Nazi passage through Russia to the Middle East, and the strengthened efforts of the Japanese to force the Dutch East Indies to supply the country with oil.

This latter effort was the nearest to getting the United States into war, and even Ambassador Grew, perhaps closest in the world to the "inside story" of Japan, frankly stated that he believed the United States might be forced to enter.

In the midst of all this Winant made a flying trip back to this country, and rumors immediately started that he was bearing a special peace proposal from Germany, via Hess.

This President Roosevelt promptly scotched, and capped his denial with the story that he had positive knowledge that a direct Nazi order had gone forward to American agents of Germany to spread such a rumor.

Winant, closeted with congressional leaders in executive session, never revealed all the purpose of his visit, but it was announced that:

1. American actual intervention in the war was not needed at this time—might not be needed.
2. Intensive efforts to produce and get war material to Britain should be increased and speeded up.
3. Britain had noted a fall-off in ship sinkings, and believed the American neutrality patrol was having an effect.
4. Britain believed itself close to, if not in actual possession of supremacy of the air over the channel.

Although the picture changed rapidly, this was as near to "spot news" of the British situation that anybody had been able to get.

WE are the GREATEST FAMILY*
in the Northwest!

* Nearly 100,000 Northwest Dairy Farmers—400,000 people—the Northwest's Largest Family celebrates an Anniversary. During 20 Years of Progress, Land O' Lakes Creameries, Inc., owned and controlled by Northwest Dairy Farmers, has been making history. Land O' Lakes Dairy Farmers, marketing the products of the world's richest dairy region, have won a greater share of the consumer's dollar for the farmer. They have made the farmers' own brand—Land O'Lakes—the world's largest selling sweet cream butter!

Celebrating 20 YEARS OF PROGRESS

This creamery and all its patrons are a part of the great Northwest cooperative family that is Land O'Lakes Creameries, Inc. We are proud of our membership. We are proud of our aims.

To produce better dairy products—to return the biggest possible share of the consumer's dairy product dollar to the dairy farmer—are challenging goals. They have been our aims since our founding just as they have been Land O'Lakes' aims since its founding on June 7, 1921.

Our patrons today through their membership in our cooperative creamery are reaping numerous benefits. They have the advantage of efficient, honest management. They have management which in turn is directed by a board of men who themselves are dairy farmers. The directors of this creamery have only one interest and one policy—the welfare of our patrons.

Today, as a special part in our observance of 20 Years of Progress, we invite additional patrons who believe in cooperative principles to join us in our efforts.

As a patron of this creamery you will benefit from fair and honest returns—the best possible returns consistent with sound business policy.

As a patron of this creamery you will help yourself and your neighbor by furthering the interests of the whole cooperative movement.

The guests included Vernon Nelson, Glenn Larson, LaRue Fricker, Ione Larson, Esther Haglund, Vivian Pederson, Gloria Johnson Sister Iverson, Marlene Holst, Culver Bottem, Norma Fae Horien, Mrs. Herman Peterson and Mrs. Jos. Nelson. After playing games a delicious lunch was served by Miss Larson.

Mrs. Fred Peterson and Mrs. Clarence Doran and daughter called at the W. E. Wegge home Monday evening.

Marilyn Wegge returned home Friday from Egeland, N. Dak., where she has spent some time visiting friends and relatives.

Mrs. W. E. Wegge and girls visited at the O. H. Nohre home Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Anderson of Butte, Montana, Mr. and Mrs. M. Timm of Egeland, N. D. spent Friday night at the Walter Wegge home.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wegge visit at the Edgar Wegge home Saturday evening.

Guy Anderson and daughter Inez and Carl Johnson made a trip to South Dakota where Mr. Anderson consulted a doctor.

The Life Of Mrs. Wendt

Theresa Bertha Jueck Wendt was born at Stuchow, Germany, Nov. 8, 1864 and passed away at her home Sunday, June 15, 1941 at the age of 76 years, 7 months and 7 days.

She was baptised on Nov: 29, 1864 and confirmed Sept, 29, 1878 at Zerwitz, Germany.

She came to America in 1882 and made her home near Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where on May 29, 1886 she was united in marriage to Wm. G. Wendt.

They resided at Menomonee Falls, Wis.. until the year of 1900 when they came to Holt and settled in Excel Township where she resided since.

They joined the Nazareth Lutheran Church in Holt on April 8, 1928.

To this union were born 8 children namely:

Mrs. C. J. Krueger, of West Bend, Wisc., Henry Wendt of Minneapolis, Mrs. Geo. Johnson of Lindstrom, Minn., Frank Wendt of West Bend, Wisc., Mrs Anton Scheuneman of West Bend, Wisc. and Waldemar J. Wendt of Holt. She also leaves 7 grand chileren and 3 brothers, Frank, Emil and Arthur Jueck of Milwaukee, Wisc. Her husband and two sons William and George preceeded her in death.

Burial was made at the Greenwood cemetery at Thief River Falls.

Four hundred seventy five Marshall County 4H club members will take time off next week to exhibit at the county fair. The exhibits this year are expected to be tops in both quality and quantity. The boys and girls carrying the various projects include cake baking-66, bread-33, canning-25, sewing-80, garden-63, poultry-94, baby-beef and beef heifer-45, Dairy-22, and sheep-77.

A bigger and better 4H booth exhibit is expected with nine clubs participating. Those planning booths are Viking, Alma Progressive, Middle River, Warrenton, Boxville, Bloomville, Bloomwood, West Praire, North Star, and McCrea. The booths will deal primarily with health and nutrition aud the efforts being made by the 4H clubs to make this a healthier nation.

Carlson's 4H club of Middle River plan to show their purebred Hampshire at the fair. This is the first year for this club and the ten boys will camp on the fair grounds during the fair. The entire Randeen Ridge club of Gatzke also plan to attend the fair this year.

If you must drink, don't drive, on the 4th. You can't do both and be safe.

Miss Helen Erickson arrived from Minneapolis on Friday for a visit with friends here. She left on Monday with the Bible Campers where she will be Girls' Recreational Director.

Mr. and Mrs. P. L. Anderson of Crookston visited at the G. Sanoden home Monday evening. They were returning home from a trip to Lake of the Woods Bible Camp where their son stayed for the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sandberg visited at the K. T. Knutson home Sunday.

Tom Larson of St. Hilaire visited his sister Mrs. C. L. Sandberg Sunday.

Card fo Thanks

Mrs. Paul Olson and family wishes to thank their many friends and relatives for their kind expressions, sympathy, beautiful flowers and memory wreaths offerings.

Special thanks to Rev. Hansen and Rev Peterson for their consoling words. Mr. Lund for his beautiful songs, Mrs. Marvin Sandberg, Mrs. Arne Roseland and the ladies of the church, during the illness and death of our beloved husband and father.

God Bless you all.

Opal Sanoden visited relatives at Mentor the past week.

Many At Bible Camp

Several young people left Mondaf for the Lake of the Woods Bible Camp near Baudette. The following went in the Holt School bus of which Mr. Karvonen was the driver:

Marian Larson, Eileen Larson, Duane Larson, Marvin Larson, Geraldine Larson, Lowell Larson Orville Larson, Delores Larson, Donald Larson, Sylvia Sandberg, Dorothy Hanson, Dale Lorentson, Betty Lou Lorentson, Harley Engen, Marilyn Movick, Clifford Stienhauer, Marian Backlund, Oliver Backlund.

Rev. Hanson also drove up there and took all the luggage.

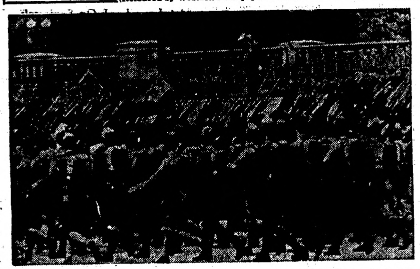
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Closing of German Consulates in U. S., And 'Freezing' of Axis Financial Assets Strain American-Nazi Diplomatic Ties; Hitler Offers New Problems to Russia

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



While the world watches the military and naval battles of Europe and the Middle East attention is diverted from the possible battleground in the Pacific. But Japanese military training goes on nonetheless. In the above photo, Emperor Hirohito of Japan is shown reviewing his troops during an imperial inspection which featured an anniversary celebration of the nation's youth training schools.

FDR:
Cracks Down

The President of the United States, frankly hostile to the Axis, "cracked down" following the sinking of the Robin Moor by a German submarine in the South Atlantic, and announced the "freezing" of all Axis funds in this country.

It was considered a matter of course that the Italian and German governments would do likewise, and while any sort of guess as to the amount was impossible, some sources estimated that the freezing, if carried out on both sides, would be about "even Stephen" financially, with perhaps $400,000,000 involved on each side.

More important, it meant that all business dealings between Italy and Germany and the United States were instantly at an end.

The reason the estimated sum was so small, state department officials revealed, was that during the past two years most Americans have liquidated their interests in Axis countries, and vice versa.

Financial experts said that the order does not necessarily mean that foreign countries cannot get their money out of this country, but that in order to do so, they must get a license for the withdrawal from the treasury.

If it is admitted that the Germans are paying out funds for sabotage in the United States, they will have a hard time getting such money, for the treasury can keep a check on the funds, and see that it is spent for the purposes intended, such as paying the upkeep of the German embassy, etc.

The fact that all 46 persons on board the Robin Moor were eventually reported rescued somewhat tempered public opinion on this "incident."

Further action on the part of this country was conjectural, but public opinion polls found the nation strongly favoring convoys for American shipping, and a general strengthening of our naval patrols.

NAZIS AND U. S.:
Consulates Out

Following the U. S. "freezing" of all Axis financial assets in the United States came another move by the federal government which strained American-German relationships to the breaking point.

This was the order from the state department closing all Nazi consulates in the United States. German propaganda offices—the German Library of Information, the German railway and tourist agencies and Transocean News Service — were also ordered closed in the same order.

All German nationals connected with the consular offices and these propaganda agencies were ordered to leave the country. Embassy officials and employees of DNB, the official German news agency, were not affected by the order.

While these first moves did not actually constitute a complete rupture of relationships between the two countries it pointed toward a policy of "action—not words" with respect to the U. S. attitude toward the Nazis. Reasons given by the state department for the action were general in nature but they mentioned "improper" and "unwarranted" activities "inimical to the welfare of this country."

RUSSIA:
Heavy Strain

The stress of German demands on Russia was such that it appeared Stalin's hold on his country was cracking, if not actually broken, and his policy of appeasement of the Nazi demands found the army forces strongly opposed to the dictator.

Whether this would end in the long-expected military break between Germany and Russia, a feeling that was heightened by the announcement that 120 German divisions were massed on the Russian frontier, or whether it would simply result as in the past, in a terrific Russian blood-letting from within, was hard to foresee.

The analyst, seeking to ferret out the genesis of this troop-massing, perforce had to go back to Churchill's warning, when he was trying to interest Russia and Turkey in active assistance just before the start of hostilities in Greece. Churchill put Russia and Turkey on notice that "they would be next" when the Nazis got through with Greece.

Nobody else, thus far, at least, had been next. Then, too, there was the broad hint dropped by Goebbels, German ace propagandist, that Germany would need the Ukrainian wheat for a long war against Britain. Churchill also had warned Russia that the Ukrainian wheat-fields would be the next objective.

Another possible objective of the massing against Russia was the need of a sure and well-fortified line through Russia down into Syria, also the possibility that a sufficient threat against Russia might break up the Russian-Turkish alliance and allow the Nazis to press upon Turkey their demand for free passage of troops.

With a hostile Turkey and Russia to the north, Hitler's generals would be naturally hesitant in trying an air-borne invasion of Syria to help the French there, and to create a land base for attack against Suez. The typical strong groundwork necessary for a major German offensive would demand dealing with Russia and Turkey first.

There was just one more important angle, which might precipitate fighting, however brief, with Russia. Rumania wanted Bessarabia back, and the position of the German legions was such that this might be the primary objective, to force Russian abandonment of Bessarabian territory.

BILLION:
For Bombers

Belief amounting almost to a certainty by U. S. war tacticians that a huge air armada, assuring Britain or this country mastery of the air was the surest method of winning the war for the democracies was evidenced when the RFC announced a plan to provide a billion dollars to produce 500 big bombers a month.

The RFC was given additional powers in a new law signed by the President also permitting it to have augmented borrowing capacity with no strings attached, provided it was for defense purposes.

This organization had already spent $1,500,000,000 for defense, half a billion for factories, more than that for tin and copper and other defense materials, $200,000,000 for rubber and $200,000,000 for miscellaneous purchases of material.

Camp Robinson, Ark. — Connie Kaster, daughter of Lieut. Col. John F. Her father had nine bands, 275 pieces, playing when the train pulled in. Thus at least one ambition to be "met by a band" was realized.

WE SHALL BECOME WORLD'S FINANCIERS

ENGLAND WAS the greatest of the creditor nations for generations, in fact, for centuries. To maintain that plan, England was forced to finance debtor nations. She did it by supplying the funds for development of those nations. She developed their resources, she built railroads, she provided shipping facilities. Large quantities of English money were invested in many countries of the world. Such funds were provided not so much by the English government, as by the English people as individuals, with the government back of them to minimize their chance of loss.

That will be America's job when the present world conflict is over. It was our job after the close of World War No. 1, but we did not do it effectively. We did not know how. It is a problem our financial leaders must study now if America is to achieve that world dominance which is her destiny.

SOUND ADVICE

The AMERICAN BANKERS magazine says every man or corporation or institution that in any way depends upon public patronage for support should never permit any issue of its hometown newspaper to go to press without containing a mention of his or its name and business. To that it adds:

"The man who does not advertise his business does an injustice to himself and his town.

"The man who insists on sharing the business that comes to town, but refuses to advertise his own, is not a valuable addition to any town.

"The life and snap of a town depend upon wide-awake, liberal advertising men."

The wise business man will follow the advice of the Bankers magazine.

DIVIDE—AND GET FIFTY CENTS A YEAR

A WOMAN CLERK in one of the retail stores rides the same suburban train I take each morning. She is married and every day tells me of the small wages, $25 a week, her husband receives, all because others are paid such unwarranted salaries, from $25,000 to as much as $200,000 a year. I became rather "fed up" on her daily complaint and looked up a few figures.

"How much do you think your husband should be paid?" I asked.

"He could have at least $100 a week if they would divide up the unwarranted salaries paid in this country," she said.

"Would you place the limit at say $10,000 a year?" I inquired.

"That would be too low," she replied. "Many people are worth more than that."

Then I pulled out my figures.

"Do you know," I asked, "that if all salaries of more than $10,000 a year were divided between people of the United States it would mean less than 50 cents for each one of us each year?"

She refused to believe it, though it is true, but I have heard nothing more about the salary her husband is entitled to.

IS THIS DEMOCRACY

A CONTRACT the C. I. O. was demanding one of the big aviation plants must sign, or else—, provides that the company cannot discharge any member of the union because he is a communist; it must pay a maximum wage scale of $1.15 an hour; compel all employees to join the union; collect all initiation fees, dues and fines for the union; pay for time off for sickness; grant two-week vacations with full pay; pay any member of the union the difference between his earnings as an employee and his pay as a soldier during his period of conscription.

That plant is working exclusively on defense orders and NLRB supports the union's demands. Is America still a democracy?

SACRIFICES

UP TO THE present time, the only Americans who have made any real sacrifice in the cause of preparedness are those who have given up good jobs or lives of ease to go into the armed forces of the nation for a wage of $21 a month, and the families of those men.

BLESSINGS HERE

WE AMERICANS represent one-sixteenth of the people of all the world. We consume and enjoy just about 50 per cent of such luxuries and conveniences as automobiles, telephones, radios, bathtubs and many other things. We represent, under normal world conditions, just about 50 per cent of all the purchasing power of the world. In the face of such facts there are people who would change our democracy, our way of life, to some one of the totalitarianisms of Europe.

GOOD NEIGHBOR CO-OPERATION

The United States is getting much better co-operation from some of our South American neighbors than has leaked out to the public.

When Portugal protested to the United States against Roosevelt's fireside chat hinting the seizure of the Azores, the Brazilian government immediately got in touch with the U. S. state department. The Portuguese had sent the Brazilians a copy of their protest, and Brazil asked us what reply we were going to make.

Ambassador Caffrey in Rio de Janeiro immediately showed Foreign Minister Aranha a summary of our proposed reply, and Aranha volunteered to send Portugal exactly the same answer—telling them it was vital to the safety of the Western hemisphere that the Azores be in friendly hands, and that Brazil could not afford to see the islands taken by the Axis.

This message was sent: which means that Brazil will co-operate with the United States if and when the time comes to occupy the Azores.

Argentina also has been more co-operative than ever despite the die-hard efforts of our Rocky Mountain congressmen to prevent the importation of Argentine canned beef. Argentine sentiment is overwhelmingly anti-Hitler and pro-Roosevelt. The Argentines are much stronger for Roosevelt than for the United States, and have their fingers crossed as to what may happen after Roosevelt leaves office.

Dakar and Robin Moor.

For approximately one month, however, all White House advisers have agreed that the Azores were far less important than Dakar and the coast of West Africa. That is what makes the sinking of the Robin Moor by a Nazi submarine so doubly significant.

Despite the menace of Dakar, presidential advisers have been worried as to what we should do about it. To take Dakar from the French and to hold it against all comers would require more men than the 50,000 in the U. S. marine corps. It would require an expeditionary force from the regular army.

And while such troops are available, the bottoms to transport them are something else again. Once before, the British urged us not to get mixed up in the South Atlantic because it would divert our navy from the all-important North Atlantic.

The sinking of the Robin Moor, however, has played directly into the hands of those who have been urging the President to adopt the strongest policy in the South Atlantic and, if necessary, land troops on the bulge of Africa.

CATHEDRAL OF AGRICULTURE

Paul H. Appleby, diminutive, didactic undersecretary of agriculture, made a flying trip to Nebraska the other day which had some interesting inside background.

Purpose of the trip was to set up what some agricultural hands call a "Cathedral of Agriculture" in Lincoln, Neb. What Appleby was working on was a plan to pool all of the different federal agricultural agencies under one roof and under one director at Lincoln.

These were to include the AAA, Rural Electrification administration, soil conservation, farm security, extension service, farm debt adjustment, and so on. The plan was to make the state of Nebraska a guinea pig to test the idea. All of these different farm representatives would then report to one director in Lincoln rather than to Washington.

However, the proposed Nebraska director was Cal Ward, regional supervisor of farm security. And although working for a Democratic administration, he is branded as a staunch Republican. His selection therefore caused opposition from various federal farm representatives in Nebraska who didn't want to join any "Cathedral of Agriculture" under Cal Ward.

Chief objector was Fred Wallace, chairman of the Nebraska AAA, and it was to bring him into line that Appleby flew out to Nebraska.

Appleby had first ordered Wallace to Washington. But Wallace refused. Even after Appleby flew out to see him, he could not make Wallace budge. "I'm interested in an agricultural program, not a lot of bureaucracy," Wallace said.

Appleby stayed an extra day, finally flew back to Washington. His "Cathedral of Agriculture" for Nebraska definitely side-tracked.

Note — Secretary of Agriculture Wickard has been looking around to find a new berth for his undersecretary—outside of the agriculture department.

Army Movies.

Movies are the top amusement of the boys in camp and the army gives them all they want—at bargain prices.

For this purpose the war department has organized the Army Motion Picture service, which in a few months has become one of the largest theater chains in the country, with about 300 theaters in operation. There is at least one movie theater in every army camp, with shows seven nights a week, plus Saturday and Sunday matinees.

by GRANTLAND RICE

IN AN age of prodigious hitting, no matter what the game, there is still a wide sweep of argument in regard to record distances. There is a wide divergence of opinion as to how far the mightiest of the hitters can drive a baseball, golf ball or polo ball, to take up three examples.

Grantland Rice

Few have ever smacked a baseball beyond 500 feet. I mean on the carry. A good many years ago one of Babe Ruth's Florida wallops that dropped into a plowed field was measured around 520 feet. Anything over 430 feet is no part of soft hitting.

Ruth remains the long-distance champion, both as a record hitter and as the most consistent one. The Babe not only had bulk and power back of his punches, but he also had one of the finest swings that baseball has ever known in the way of timing and smoothness.

But the Babe rarely reached a full range of 500 feet. There is no way to make any exact measurement when the ball sails out of the park or crashes into the upper stands.

Babe Ruth

There is a centerfield fence in the St. Petersburg park around 500 feet away, and no one has ever hit this palisade on the fly yet, according to the best knowledge I have.

Golf Sluggers

In golf Jimmy Thomson remains the long-distance ruler with something to spare.

As I recall the figures Thomson has won the last six driving contests arranged by the PGA.

It must be remembered that the only true measure in golf is from a flat surface, with no helping wind. Roll doesn't count. You can drive a golf ball a mile on the ice. And a few of the long hitters can stand on an elevated tee and pass 300 yards on the carry with a helping gale.

One earnest seeker for records once drove a golf ball well over a mile—standing at the top of the Grand Canyon.

Driving from a level surface, unhelped by a wind, Thomson's best blows usually range from 270 to 275 yards. This is big blasting. A carry of 250 yards under these conditions is big hitting. I doubt that any golfer ever carried 300 yards on flat ground, minus a keen breeze.

I know that few good hitters care to risk a carry beyond 225 yards when there is trouble to face.

A helping or a headwind makes a much greater difference than many know. A headwind is also a mental handicap since it usually brings on pressing and overeffort, which is always a mistake.

How Far a Polo Ball?

In his prime, Tommy Hitchcock could hit a polo ball as far as anyone I ever saw. Dev Milburn and Wilburn Guest were also on the longer side.

Hitchcock figures that 150 yards, half the distance of the field, is about all one can get from a full polo smash. Any wallop beyond 100 yards is good, hard hitting.

"The longest drive I've seen," an eyewitness writes, "came from a combination of golf and polo. Winston Guest teed up a golf ball at Meadowbrook one day, mounted his polo pony and was then handed a polo mallet. With a good, galloping start and a double windup Guest drove the golf ball the full length of the polo field—a matter of 300 yards. It was all carry."

Golf machines can reach 500 yards, which shows how far the human machine lags behind the metal contrivance.

Getting Distance

Distance isn't a mere matter of bulk and physical power by many yards.

Ben Hogan, weighing less than 135 pounds, is longer by yards than most of the 180 or 200-pound swingers.

I once saw Cyril Walker, then weighing 110 pounds, outdrive Walter Hagen, at 185, consistently in a big tournament.

Distance comes largely from clubhead speed—more so than from any other single factor.

Bobby Jones one day, with his own clubs missing, used his wife's set. Mrs. Jones' driver weighed only 12 ounces, much lighter than Bob's.

"I was astonished to find that I was hitting the ball that day longer than usual," Bob said. "I found out that I could get much greater speed from the lighter clubhead. Naturally it called for less effort in swinging."

The Once Over

by H. I. Phillips

WNU Service

WHAT! NO NEW AUTO MODELS?

There is talk of discontinuing any changes in automobile models during this year, but the decision should not be made except as a last resort. Few things will break down the morale of the people more than a sudden suspension of their ancient right to trek down to the annual auto show and see how many gadgets have been shifted.

• • •

There is a limit to sacrifice. And it may be reached when you ask Americans to go through a whole year in which even the windows in automobiles open the same way they did before.

• • •

You can get Gus Q. Citizen to give up many things in a crisis without a squawk. He will give up meat, cut down on fuel, and if necessary climb into a uniform to defend his country, but when you ask him to take calmly the news that Detroit will turn out sedans with the humps and bulges unchanged, you're taking a chance on insurrection.

• • •

Elmer Twitchell is among those horrified by the prospect and he has written the following appeal to the President:

"Dear Franklin:

"If you want the morale of America kept intact, do something at once to stop this idea of no changes in auto models during the emergency. Year after year, through floods, fires, dust storms, quakes, strikes, erosions and depressions, no matter what happened to the country, automobile models came out every season full of changes. The more trouble, the more changes. And the people of America are not going to feel that everything is all right if cars come out next fall with the starting button right where it is today, and with the gear shift not lowered, raised, hidden or camouflaged in any way.

• • •

"I think I could stand news of an American reverse in battle better than I could endure the sudden realization that the ash trays in our limousines were to be left as in the 1941 models, and that nobody had decided on a new type of bumper.

• • •

"Franklin, if we are to come through this great crisis okay, don't prevent those auto makers from monkeying with the gadgets, color schemes and front ends. It's little things like that that undermine confidence, kill causes and lose wars.

• • •

"Of course I want the auto industry to concentrate on defense, but it must make a few changes in the limousine and roadster models if we are to remain a happy people. See that the least they do is to keep shifting the doorknobs.

"Yours for unity and a harder search for the starting button every season,

—"Elmer Twitchell."

• • •

And we think Elmer is right. If the President doesn't do something, congress should.

By J. L. EDMONDS

(Chief, Horse Husbandry at University of Illinois, College of Agriculture.)

"Be kind to and as considerate of your horses as you would want to be treated yourself," is a safe rule to follow in handling work stock during hot weather.

Essentially the same rules which apply to the human being in hot weather also apply to the farm horse. Plenty of water and the proper feed, careful driving, sufficient rest and the prevention of overheating are the principal precautions to observe in caring for the hard-working horse in summer.

When horses are doing hard field work during hot weather, a barrel of water and a pail should be taken to the field so the horses can be watered once an hour.

Since the freely perspiring work horse has a high salt requirement, he will stand the heat better when liberally supplied with salt.

In extremely hot weather it may be necessary to reduce working hours and lighten the load. The noon rest period may be lengthened or work begun very early and stopped before noon. Some farmers have successfully worked their horses at night.

Like human beings, horses that are "off feed" should not be expected to do a hard day's work in summer, since it is too risky. Instead, such horses should be kept in the barn or on pasture where there is shade.

When the sweat "dries in," and the horse starts to pant and gets "wobbly" in his gait, he has been overworked. The careful horseman will stop and rest his team before this stage is reached. An overheated horse should be put into the shade, and cold water or ice bags applied to his head, spine and legs.

Serious cases of overheating are even difficult for experienced veterinarians to handle. Prevention is therefore especially important. Once the horse is overheated, even though he recovers, he is seldom able to do hard work during high temperatures.

Veterinarians Urge 'War' Against Swine Diseases

The government's recent appeal for increased swine production as an aid to national defense has had one quick result in most rural communities—farmers are exerting new vigilance to guard against prevalent swine diseases which annually take a toll of nearly 30 per cent of the nation's hog population.

Hog cholera is being looked upon as "public enemy No. 1" in the current drive to reduce swine losses, because cholera kills more hogs than any other single disease.

Veterinarians and livestock officials are urging utmost possible vigilance against fresh epizootics this season, and prompt control measures wherever cholera may make its appearance. Symptoms of the disease include sluggishness, a tendency to pile up, partial or total prostration, fever, and scours. At the first signs of such symptoms a veterinarian should be called.

"The best insurance against this No. 1 swine killer is to have pigs vacccinated against cholera around weaning time," says the American Foundation for Animal Health report. "When pigs are young they require less serum and virus, and the immunization generally lasts until they are ready for market. Cholera generally strikes so swiftly and kills so quickly that there is little that a farmer can do, once his hogs are down with the disease. That is why immunization is the best insurance against cholera losses."

Farm Notes

A silage crop can be grown, harvested and put in the silo for about $2 a ton.

• • •

A cow must eat 100 pounds or more of grass daily to produce 20 to 25 pounds of milk.

• • •

Since the beginning of 4-H club work on a nation-wide basis, it has reached over 8,000,000 rural young people.

• • •

Hens lay about as many eggs during March, April, May and June as they do all the other eight months of the year.

• • •

Cows graze only 8 hours a day, no matter how luxuriant the pasturage, and spend 12 hours lying down, and 4 hours standing or walking around.

• • •

Bulls should be confined in pens as a safety measure, but to insure their value as herd sires, they should be fed hay and silage of as good quality as is available on the farm. The weight of the bull should be controlled by regulating the quantity of grain and roughage not by supplying feed of poor quality.

NEW IDEAS for Home-makers

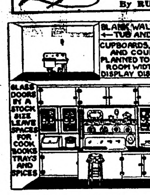
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



BLANK WALL, SINK, TUB AND LIGHT
CUPBOARDS, SHELVES AND COUNTERS PLANNED TO ACCENT ROOM WIDTH AND DISPLAY DISHES
GLASS DOORS IN A STOCK SIZE LEAVE SPACES FOR COOK BOOKS TRAYS AND SPICES

SOLID doors for the cupboards at the sides of this sink would have placed the accent on vertical lines and made the room seem narrower. But most important of all, this combination of glass doors and plywood doors gives an opportunity to display dishes and other things that lend color, and at the same time makes a place to hide away less decorative utensils.

The lower cupboards and sink enclosure were built first. The vertical supports for the glass cupboards are 1 by 12-inch boards. These rest on the lower cupboards and are placed far enough apart to accommodate the glass doors. The 1 by 12-inch board across the room makes the top of the glass cupboards and the bottom of the upper cupboards. The ruffle trimmed shelf between the glass cupboards is 6 inches wide and the plate rail below it is made of two moulding strips.

Self-Defense Program

*In these days when the doctrine that "might is right" seems to be enjoying a boom, individuals as well as nations seem to need a self-defense program. The ideal technique of defense for the average man or woman is jiu-jitsu. 1. As a first step in her self-defense program, Miss Marlow blocks the blow of Lou's cudgel with her forearm.

2. She presses the arm back, grips his biceps with her right hand and shifts her right foot behind his right foot.

3. Then it is just a matter of applying pressure quickly. One smart jerk and Lou is thrown off his feet.

4. And down he goes, flat on his back. An opponent thrown with such force usually has the fight knocked out of him.

Above: Lou grabs Miss Marlow about the neck. She gets her arm inside his and then (upper right) snaps her hands to his biceps, throws her weight backwards, and brings her right foot to his midriff.

Continuing the backward motion, Miss Marlow's body rolls to the ground from a sitting position to a reclining one. Simultaneously the right leg stiffens and the "attacker" takes a beautiful nose-dive.

STORY OF THE WEEK

Devoted Husband

By BARBARA ANN BENEDICT

(Associated Newspapers—WNU Service.)

"NOW take my Bert," said the dominating Mrs. Harvey. She sighed wearily. "He's such a darling husband, comparatively speaking, of course. But so helpless. I've often wondered how a man would really get along without a woman to take care of him."

The ladies of the Tuesday club nodded and murmured their assent. That is, with the exception of Linda Swain. Linda was the newest member, and also the youngest. She had been married less than a year.

She said, "Men seem pretty capable to me."

"My dear," Mrs. Harvey squeezed lemon into her iced tea and smiled indulgently, "my dear, no one blames you for your attitude—now. When you've been married as long as I, you'll have a change of heart. Oh, I know how you feel, darling. We were all that way once. So very much in love, so very sure our husbands were all we thought them to be—loyal and devoted and interested only in their wives. But there, I've said enough. Don't let me disillusion you, Linda darling. Be happy—and innocent—while you may."

"I am happy and not the least bit disillusioned," said Linda. "So don't feel that you have to pity me, Mrs. Harvey. I don't want Jay to be interested in me and no one else. And—I want him to know other women, if that's what you mean."

Tonight it was different. She followed him with her eyes.

Mrs. Harvey smiled blandly and glanced around at the circle of faces. "That isn't all I mean, Linda, darling. Oh, there's no need of feeling hurt about it, or believing that your married life is going to be different from the rest. Take my Bert, for example. There was a time—when, had I been a less broadminded person, we might have ended in separation. And the truth of the matter is I'm glad it happened. For from that day to this I have used the incident to shame him into doing anything I ask. Oh, yes, that little wayward act of Bert's has its uses. There is, for example, no need to worry now for fear that he will ever stray again. I'm just as sure that Bert's only interest at this moment is with his family as I am that I'm sitting in this chair."

Linda bit her lip. She wanted to say she thought Bert was a martyr for even living with such a person. While she tried to conjure up a less direct dig, Mrs. Harvey turned toward Anne Clayton, who was one of the few unmarried members of the club. Anne was young, extremely pretty and had been admitted only because her career on the legitimate stage was beginning to attract attention and her membership might reflect some glory on the organization.

"And you, my dear Miss Clayton, I'm sure this conversation must be extremely boring to an unmarried lady. And yet I'm equally sure your opinion would be a valuable one, especially—" Mrs. Harvey looked coy—"especially since you are so well acquainted with Linda's handsome young husband."

Linda was furious. She might have forgiven most anything—but this! Such unadulterated, direct insinuation.

Anne Clayton laughed nervously. She had long since discovered that a woman's attitude toward life and love and things changed with matrimony. The talk of these older married women sickened her. Yet it was as much to her advantage to be a member of the club as it was for these ladies to have her.

She laughed resignedly, without looking at Linda. "Please! After all, a single lady would hardly be qualified to express a worthwhile opinion about such a weighty subject."

It was the fact that Anne Clayton evaded the issue that set Linda to thinking. That and the insinuation in Mrs. Harvey's voice. Then, too, there was Anne's nervous little laugh, her direct refusal to meet Linda's eyes.

The thing at first seemed silly, absurd. She even smiled a little at thoughts of Jay being false. Yet the inevitable questions kept popping into her mind, pounding against her brain. Had she been a little fool? Did these women know things that she had been blind to? Were they laughing at her, pitying her? Was Jay actually interested in Anne Clayton? It wasn't an impossibility. Such things had happened before. She shuddered as thoughts leaped into her mind of other women who had gone blindly ahead, loving, adoring, not even suspecting their husbands of falsity. Only in the end to have the hurt more poignant, more lasting.

There was a dance that night at the country club. Linda had always been a little proud to think that the women who attended the country club dances were infatuated with her handsome husband. She liked to think that he was hers forever and ever and that she was envied.

Tonight it was different. She followed him with her eyes. She tried to stifle the hurt when she saw him dancing with other women, smiling into their faces. She tried not to notice that he seemed to enjoy being with Anne Clayton. She fought against sudden knowledge that his attentions to her, his wife, were dutiful.

And when toward the end of the evening she saw Bert step through the French doors on to the veranda, saw Anne Clayton follow a moment later, she could not resist the impulse to satisfy the burning curiosity that was eating her soul.

It was a beautiful summer's night. The great expanse of golf course that fell away at the base of the veranda was flooded with soft, silvery moonlight. A section of the veranda, the end near which Linda stood, was in shadow.

She saw dim figures leaning against the railing—a man and a woman. The girl was Anne Clayton!

There was no mistaking that baby-like profile, etched as it was against the bright moonlight beyond. Linda clutched at her throat, felt suddenly weak and sick. Then it was true!

Seized by a sudden, uncontrollable fury, Linda suddenly sped across the veranda. There was no definite purpose in her act, no recognizable emotion, no desire other than to satisfy a primitive instinct by clawing at the face of this brazen hussy who had robbed her of faith.

At the sound of her step the couple near the railing turned. Linda came upon them abruptly, reached out and felt her hands entwined in the golden blonde hair of Anne Clayton, and knew a great feeling of satisfaction.

Then and only then did she look toward the man. And in that single instant a great weakness and nausea claimed her. She wavered, gripping Anne's hair more securely for support; felt sudden relief and shame and guilt. For the face of the man who stared back at her was that of henpecked Bert Harvey!

Light Rays Perform All Sorts of Optical Tricks

The science of lighting is one more branch of knowledge which has developed to a point of specialization in which the gulf between what the expert and the layman know about it is widening every day.

The array of new and unfamiliar lighting fixtures and the design of new fixtures show that lighting men, by taking advantage of the laws of optics astronomers have employed for years and also by taking advantage of special plastics, are able to bend, reflect and blend light rays in any manner that is desired.

Every manner of optical trick is being applied in the new fixtures to make light obey every command. It is spread out and put together again with the aid of prisms. It is made to run around corners with the aid of plastics. A new opal glass will blend and diffuse both light that is refracted, or bent, and light that is reflected. Rippled mirrors soon will be available that spread out smoothly the light that strikes them.

An example of one of the many revolutionary fixtures is an "educated" student desk lamp. Inside its shade is a mathematically curved silver reflector.

The light produced shines through a transparent sheet of plastic material that is stretched all the way across the bottom of the shade. By cutting out all horizontal vibrations, it is asserted that the light can cause no glare or shimmering even on the whitest paper.

American Husbands Okeh

American men take their wives for granted. American men don't understand women. American men are a thorn in the side of female progress; an obstacle to happy home life; a blight and a frost upon the full flowering of the American woman's personality. That is the attitude of American wives toward their husbands, according to a prominent woman writer. She then takes her pen in hand to hand the wives a verbal lashing for their attitude. She declares that women have had freedom and power for centuries but it was crushed down by men because they (the women) could not take such power as they had, gracefully. Women complain, she says, that their husbands don't understand them. How can he, when she doesn't understand herself?

> Promises of marriage made by a high school girl are recalled to her years later by the man she had forgotten. His efforts to renew their affections and to hold her to her promise threaten to break up her engagement to another man she truly loves. Miss Norris advises the girl what she should do to not only end this affair peacefully, but to assure her happiness in the years to come.

THERE is one sin for which women pay a doubly, trebly, ten-times-multiplied price. Perhaps this isn't fair or reasonable, perhaps some day things will be more honestly adjusted, but the fact remains that when a girl makes a misstep in a certain direction there are seventy ways in which she can be punished.

Very often this punishment is merely a secret thing in her own soul; a little stain of shame and regret, a constant, sharp sting of humiliation in the knowledge that there is a man somewhere alive in the world, a man other than her husband, who has an intimate knowledge of her sweetness, her kisses, her warm young body, her first young passion. She writhes at the thought that this man may be telling his wife of the early affair, may be hinting it to others. It shakes her pride in herself, her confidence in her own integrity or sense, it takes the bloom from her honeymoon and puts just a tinge of suspicion into any slight or fancied slight she ever meets from other women.

If she gets off with only this much discomfort, she is lucky. Other women have to pay higher. Naomi is one. This is part of Naomi's letter:

High School Lovers.

"When I was 18 I fell in love with a handsome boy whose character my mother even then analyzed as weak, but who seemed to me the sweetest, dearest fellow in the world. We were lovers in last year High, Donny after graduation taking a two years' course in business school and I going away to college in the West. At first I felt very uneasy as to the wisdom of assuming this relationship, but Donny was earnestly in love, as I was, and we talked continually of marriage.

"When I came home for my first Christmas holidays we were as passionately devoted as before, but before midsummer there was a change. My father went into bankruptcy and I got a job in the library, and Donny's mother, who disliked me, managed to send him away to college. From that moment I heard in his voice and read in his letters that he was trying to end the affair. He no longer spoke of marriage, and even showed some anxiety to get back one of the few letters in which he had first promised it. What I suffered, nobody but a girl who has experienced this terrible time knows, I hate to think of it even now. Under the circumstances I could not hold him, and for three years we did not see each other.

Donny Reappears on Scene.

"That was eight years ago. Last year I became engaged to one of the finest men—in fact, the very finest man I ever have known. He has a great political future before him and a fine legal practice and we have already selected a home of our own. Our wedding day was set, when Donny turned up last month. Immediately he renewed his attentions to me, protesting that he has always loved me and always planned for our marriage. His mother is dead now and he has a small income and a small salary so that he really is in a position to marry. His attitude was so unreasonable and Clark was so puzzled by it that I had finally to explain everything. Clark took it very nicely, said that of course it made no difference as far as he was concerned, but that I must be the one to choose between them, and make my own decision.

"This has thrown me into such a state of agitation and despair that I have been close to an actual nervous breakdown. I am not a nervous woman, and had thought for several years that while a good many men liked me, I was cured of liking them. But I am really in love now, and if I lose Clark I feel that I will never again know happiness in life.

Senses Change in Fiance.

"The point is, would Clark have been willing to turn me over to Donny, as it were, if he really loved me? Wouldn't he have said then that nothing that had happened in my very young girlhood could part us now? Is a man quite so reasonable when he loves a woman?

"Do you feel that there is any ethical consideration here? Because she once loved a man not wisely but too well should a woman feel herself morally bound to marry him years after their parting if the opportunity occurs? I don't want to marry Donny—in fact, I could not. What I feel for him now is not quite so definite as dislike, but I don't want to see him or bother with him at all. The thought of marrying him is actually horrible to me.

"On the other hand, I know that in spite of what he says all this has shocked and chilled Clark. At first I really believe he did not resent it, or thought he didn't. But since I told him I have noticed a change, a sort of quiet in his manner very unlike his old wild happiness and eagerness. Were Donny to disappear all this would come back, but Donny hangs around, reminding me of old times, of notes I wrote him and places we met, always acting and speaking as if out of deep love for me but knowing, of course, that he is driving me wild. Can you give me any suggestions as to the solution of a problem that frankly has grown too complicated for me?"

Say Good-by to Both.

The only advice I can give Naomi is to say a definite good-by to both these men for a time. She must dismiss Donny absolutely, refusing to see him under any consideration whatsoever. Then she must break her engagement with Clark, telling him that if, after a period of perhaps six or eight months, he wants to come back for her, she will make him a true and devoted wife.

No other course will bring her peace of mind. Only when she is freed from Donny's attentions, and from the false position in which her engagement to Clark places her, will she feel herself honest again. Then if Clark comes back she can accept him with a clear mind; in the long years of marriage he never can accuse her of deceiving him, because she will have freed him of her own will.

It's a very uncomfortable tangle all around; a tangle that a wilful little girl named Naomi might have spared the woman Naomi if she had been more self-controlled eight years ago. But the probability is that Clark will return after the stipulated period, or much sooner, that he will not let her youthful weakness rob him of his wife.

Only, Naomi will have to take a certain amount of humiliation and shame with the reconciliation. Not very serious, probably not all unsalutary, but so unnecessary! I wish all 18-year-old girls who read this today would take a look at that country to which they are so steadily moving, the unknown country called Womanhood, and Wifehood.

Historical Highlights

Famous in Triplicate

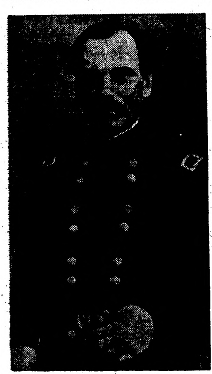
DURING the recent celebration of "I Am an American" Day, a group of church dignitaries and members of the American Legion gathered at a monument in the little city of Carrollton, Mo., to pay tribute to a man who has been called the "most honored American." His name was James E. Shields and he is described on the monument as a "soldier, jurist and statesman."

But those three words are only a slight indication of the factors which made his career so remarkable. A quotation from a recent book, James Gray's "The Illinois," a volume in the "Rivers of America" series, published by Farrar and Rinehart, sums it up more adequately. It says: "With a thoroughness characteristic of his executive temperament, James E. Shields seems to have done everything in triplicate. He fought in three wars and represented three different states as United States senator." No other American, it might be added, holds such a record.

Born in Dungannon, County Tyrone, Ireland, in 1810, Shields came to this country at the age of 16. He enlisted in the army, served in the Seminole Indian war, then went to Illinois, where he was elected to the legislature in 1836, made state auditor in 1839 and appointed a judge of the State Supreme court in 1843. Two years later he was appointed commissioner of the general land office, but gave up civil life at the outbreak of the Mexican war to accept a commission as brigadier general of Illinois volunteers in 1846.



BRIG. GEN. JAMES E. SHIELDS

Shot through the lung at the Battle of Cerro Gordo and brevetted major general, after his recovery he served in the Valley of Mexico as commander of a brigade, only to be wounded severely again at the storming of Chapultepec.

Mustered out of the service on July 20, 1848, he was immediately appointed territorial governor of Oregon, but resigned this office when he was elected senator from Illinois. He served in the senate from 1849, to 1855, then moved to Minnesota.

When the state government was organized there he was again sent to the United States senate where he remained until 1859. He next moved to California, and at the outbreak of the Civil war he was commissioned a brigadier general of volunteers in August, 1861. At the Battle of Kernstown, Shields was wounded, receiving a broken arm from a fragment of shell.

On March 28, 1863, weakened by the wounds which he had suffered in two wars, Shields resigned from the army. Going to California he found that the lands granted to him for his military services had been lost by his trusted agent and he bought a farm near Carrollton, Mo.

Although he had decided to retire from public life, he was soon back into politics. In 1868 he was Democratic candidate for congress, and although his friends declared that he had been elected, he was not seated. Six years later they elected him to the legislature, and upon the expiration of his term, the general, aged, weakened and impoverished, sought the humble position of door-keeper of the United States senate.

But this was denied him and he returned to Missouri. That state promptly honored him by electing him to the senate. He held this position until his death, which took place on June 1, 1879, at Ottumwa, Iowa.

* * *

One of the most famous incidents in Shields' career was his "duel" with Abraham Lincoln while he was state auditor. Lincoln wrote an anonymous letter to the Illinois State Journal, ridiculing the financial policies of Shields who challenged him to a duel. Lincoln accepted but chose as weapons cavalry broadswords and specified that the fighting be done over a plank set in the ground with the duellists standing on opposite sides "at the distance of the whole length of the sword and three feet additional." They didn't fight!

Dangerous Men

By GRIFF CRAWFORD

(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

DANNY ROGERS had feared Bliss Taggart for more than a year—ever since they had met, in fact. Physically, Danny felt equal if not superior to the rival that had, almost from the beginning, usurped his place at the side of Tess Ambers, the sophisticated cashier at Nelson's Night View.

"I could bust him in the face," Danny admitted, "but there's the gat!" And Danny had a holy horror of gats. Somehow, the thought of a gun—and bullets—had always germinated a sickening feeling at the pit of his stomach. And it was broadly hinted that Bliss Taggart was a master with the weapon he always carried. Some declared he was entitled to four notches on the butt of it and the bearing of the man carried out the declaration. If any one depicted positive badness by mere looks and atmosphere it was Bliss Taggart.

"He's got the grim smile of a killer," Danny had heard one of the guests declare as the object of his words stood nonchalantly leaning against the cashier's desk breathing words into the shell-like ear of Miss Ambers.

"Damn him!" Danny muttered, "if it wasn't for that gat I'd go up against him. I'm as dangerous as he is—if you don't count the gun. Tess falls for him because she thinks he's a hero. I could—" he stopped his rumination suddenly. Bliss Taggart had stepped aside and was removing something from his pocket. Danny's heart gave an extra thump as he saw what it was—the gat!

Shielded as he was by the contour of the recessed spot probably none but Tess and Danny saw him reach over and slip the weapon in the overcoat pocket which was conveniently near. At that moment one of the house girls relieved Tess and the trim, little vision stepped out to be taken in the arms of her waiting Romeo.

"They're going to dance," Danny reflected and an instant later they whirled away. It was then that an inspiration struck Danny like a ton of bricks.

"Gosh, maybe it's a break!" he muttered as he arose and sauntered over toward the cage. Already the new incumbent was holding hands slyly with her boy friend and watching, with others, the newest addition to Nelson's Night View who danced as he sang the latest hit from Tin Pan Alley.

It was but the work of a second to reach over, remove the gun, extract the cartridge clip and replace the weapon in the overcoat pocket. With the deadly shells in his own possession Danny walked back and sat down.

When the number was finished Bliss Taggart seated Bess at a table and excused himself. He went to his overcoat and secured the gat once more, slipped it into the hip pocket of his dress suit and returned to the waiting girl. "I don't like to wear it when I dance but I feel better when I've got it," he explained. "What'll you have, Bright Eyes?" He glanced up as a shadow fell across the cloth. Danny Rogers was seating himself directly across from him. Instantly the grim smile, the one the man had described as that of a killer, came to Bliss Taggart's lips.

"Scram!" he hissed, "this is a private session!"

"Sez who?" Danny's tone was insolent. Bliss looked his surprise and Tess hooked a hand to her ear to determine whether she was hearing aright. Then she screamed. Danny had reached over and slapped Bliss Taggart squarely on the cheek. The hubbub of the place subsided as if it had been shut off by a valve. Only the scraping of Bliss Taggart's chair sounded as he leaped to his feet and produced the gat.

"I'll blow your blankety-blank heart out," he yelled; "get down on your knees and apologize. Quick!"

"Oh, yeah? Listen, you big false-alarm," Danny was grinning into his rival's face. "Listen. You ain't got the nerve, you hunk o' cheese! I'm going to show these folks how yellow you are. I'm going to wallop you to a frazzle right here—and NOW!" He kicked the table from between them as he finished speaking and reached for the agitated Mr. Taggart. But his hands found empty air. The killer's legs were bearing him valiantly down the hall and out of the door. They had not even paused to let their owner get his overcoat. And the gat lay where it had fallen on the night club floor. Some one picked it up. Danny watched amusedly.

"Darling!" Tess threw her arms about him and laid her peroxide fluff close against his own dark brown hair. "And I always thought you were—were yellow. My brave Tarzan! My . . ."

"Steel jackets." The man who had picked the gat up was examining the cartridge clip. "They kill cleaner than the soft-nosed ones—"

"Wh-a-at?" Danny removed the encircling arms and pushed the peroxide fluff aside.

".45's; shoot a hole through—"

"He—he musta had two—" Danny was gulping.

"Darling! My brave . . . Hey! Somebody bring some water, QUICK! Danny's fainted!"

Attics Surrender to the British

Materials of All Sorts Are Donated by Americans To Help in War.

LONDON.—A look at the list of gifts to Britain's evacuees, bomb victims and members of the army, navy and Royal Air force reveals that a lot of American attics have been cleared during the last year—all to the benefit of men and women who are fighting Britain's war.

Leaders of the English-Speaking Union, which has been co-operating with the American branch of the organization as well as with other United States charitable organizations in collecting clothing and materials of every description to aid the war effort, said that only very rarely have they been sent gifts which could not be used by someone somewhere.

What might have been Uncle Ned's old cornet which looked like it had been kicked around in an attic for many years, now is doing duty in an army band which lost all its instruments in the evacuation of Dunkirk. Junior's football, which he left in the basement when he went to college, might now be doing service on a field near a Canadian encampment where American volunteers are teaching their British mates the rudiments of the game.

Many Garments Sent.

More than 65,000 garments and thousands of other gifts have been received from the United States.

Gifts have been received from Colorado mountain towns, from Chicago, Milwaukee, Roanoke, Va., New England, Cleveland, Cincinnati and California. Some of these are marked "To the men serving on the 50 United States destroyers" which were granted in the air base exchange. Others are designated for the men of the coastal patrol life saving service or the Royal Air force. But most of them are just sent to be distributed where they are most needed.

Besides the gifts of garments, Americans have sent more than $5,000 in cash to the union as well as 14 American ambulances, money for first-aid mobile posts, one complete surgical unit, a mobile feeding post and mountains of Red Cross and hospital supplies.

Not the least important has been the offers of hundreds of homes in the United States to care for British children for the duration of the war.

"The American gifts have been more wonderful than it is possible to imagine," one organization official said. "The clothing is always freshly cleaned and the people in the United States seem to have a second sight when it comes to giving things.

"Whenever we need little girls' dresses, or sturdy trousers for boys, or shoes for bombed firemen or layettes for babies—in fact, about anything possible to imagine, we know we usually can count on them being in the next shipment. They usually are."

These gifts served immeasurably in brightening the lives of the fighting forces as well as the evacuees and persons who have lost their homes. Dolls, toys, magazines, books, ping pong sets, dart boards, tennis racquets, cricket bats all have been distributed from the American donations. Cigarettes, tobacco, candy, cookies and even fruitcakes and cookies which could be safely shipped without spoiling have been sent.

Offers Army 'Defense Pack Dogs'

Father Bernard Hubbard, Alaskan explorer, has offered the army his specially bred pack dogs and new lightweight equipment for defense use on the far northern frontier. Developed on his last expedition, the pack is slung across the dog's back and will take a divided load, equivalent to a soldier's full pack of 65 pounds.

BEDTIME STORY by Thornton W. Burgess

A GLAD TIME MADE A SAD TIME

A time that Mother Nature meant should be most glad
Has proved, alas! for many folk to be most sad.

AND it isn't Old Mother Nature's fault at all that this is so. It is the fault of man. You know, man is forever blundering in and upsetting Old Mother Nature's plans, sometimes heedlessly, sometimes because he knows no better, and sometimes just because he wants to. It is just that way every autumn in the Green Forest, on the Green Meadows, in the Old Pasture, and around the Smiling Pool. Peter Rabbit knows all about it. Yes, indeed, Peter knows all about it. So does Bobby Coon, Uncle Billy Possum, Happy Jack Squirrel, Mrs. Grouse, and a lot more.

Old Mother Nature meant that the autumn should be one of the gladdest times in all the year. Yes, sir, that is the way she planned it. Then all the little people who wear feathers or fur are through with family cares. The nuts and the fruits and the seeds are ripe and ready for the storehouses of those who are wise enough to gather and store them away. Everybody is fat. That is, everybody who can get fat is so. Everybody has plenty to eat, and, after the storehouses are full, nothing in particular to do but eat and have a good time. It should be a glad time, a merry time, and it isn't. No, sir, it isn't. It is a time which most of the little people dread, and they dread it with a very great dread.

Do you know why this is? If you could have been in Peter Rabbit's place you would understand why. He was sitting in the dear Old Brier Patch thinking all over again of the things for which he had to be thankful when suddenly he heard something which made him sit up very straight and prick up his long ears to listen better. There it was again—"Bow-ow-ow-ow-ow, bow-ow-ow!" It was not the voice of Bowser the Hound, but of some other dog, and the sound came from the Old Pasture. Peter knew just what that sound meant. It meant that that dog was following the tracks of some one. He was hunting, and that meant that some one was running for his life. Peter rather hoped that it was Reddy or old Granny Fox, but after he had listened a minute he knew that it wasn't. He could tell by the sound that the dog was following one of his own relatives. He was hunting a rabbit. Perhaps it was Old Jed Thumper, the big gray rabbit who had treated Peter so badly when he went up to the Old Pasture to live for a little while. Peter grinned at the thought. Then he frowned. He did not want any real harm to come to even this old enemy.

"We're safe enough in here," said Peter.

Bang! Peter knew what that sound was. It was from a gun, a dreadful gun, and he knew that it had been pointed at the one who was running from that dog. Peter held his breath as he strained his ears to listen. Very abruptly the dog stopped barking. It must be that the dreadful gun had killed the rabbit and the dog had stopped barking because there were no more tracks to follow. Peter gulped hard once or twice. He couldn't bear to think of what had happened up there. Then—"Hurrah" shouted Peter, and kicked his heels for joy. That dog had begun barking again, and that meant that the dreadful gun hadn't killed the rabbit after all. By and by he no longer heard the voice of the dog, nor had there been another dreadful bang, so Peter knew that Old Jed Thumper, or whoever it was who was being hunted, had fooled the dog and was safe.

Later, as he sat on the edge of the Old Brier Patch looking toward the Old Pasture, he saw a man with a gun on his shoulder and a dog at his heels coming toward the dear Old Brier Patch. He watched them for a few minutes, then he turned and warned little Mrs. Peter to keep out of sight.

"We're safe enough in here," said Peter, "but we won't be safe now anywhere outside of the dear old Brier Patch."

"I—I'm almost glad of it," said little Mrs. Peter, "for now I guess you'll stay at home instead of wandering about the way you have been doing."

Peter said nothing, but it suddenly popped into his head that men didn't hunt rabbits at night, and he could safely go abroad then.

Sugar Industry in South Was Born in Old Kettle

BATON ROUGE, LA.—An old iron kettle, blackened by the many fires over which it has hung in the past 200 years, rests on the campus of Louisiana State university as a memorial to the man who made Louisiana's sugar industry possible.

Indigo was the money crop when the French planter aristocracy owned plantations that stretched for miles along the bayous and lakes of southern Louisiana at the end of the Eighteenth century. Jean Etienne de Bore was no exception.

De Bore was born in the Illinois section of the Louisiana Purchase territory. At the age of four he was taken to France by his parents where he received his education and later married into large colonial holdings.

He returned to New Orleans with his wife about the time of the French revolution and established his plantation on what now is a part of Audubon park near the city limits.

There he engaged in the planting of indigo. When a blight, however, wiped out the indigo crops, De Bore and the other planters were faced with bankruptcy.

Many planters already had tried to granulate sugar from cane juice, but their experiments failed time after time. De Bore, overriding the protests of his wife, decided to have a fling at the sugar business.

Chester the Pup

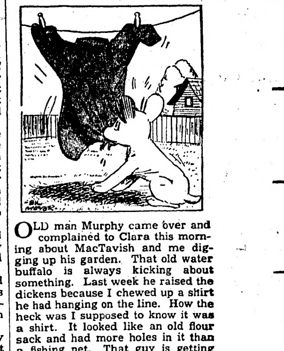
By GEORGE O'HALLORAN



OLD man Murphy came over and complained to Clara this morning about MacTavish and me digging up his garden. That old water buffalo is always kicking about something. Last week he raised the dickens because I chewed up a shirt he had hanging on the line. How the heck was I supposed to know it was a shirt. It looked like an old flour sack and had more holes in it than a fishing net. That guy is getting crankier every day and more near sighted too. I remember this spring he saw a bloke in his garden and when he tried to chase him out, the fellow wouldn't budge. So Murphy called the squad car and when the cops arrived they discovered the big fumble wit had been arguing with the scarecrow.

10,000 YOUNG YANKEES ARE FIGHTING IN ALLIED RANKS

LONDON.—Ten thousand Americans, most of them under 25, are fighting with Britain and her allies, Robert Hutchinson, chairman of the American Eagle club, said.

The Eagle club is a sort of super-canteen for Americans on this side of the Atlantic and for other forces. It is maintained by private contributions, plus profits from low prices charged the troops.

Hutchinson and Mrs. Hutchinson, known as the father and mother of the Eagle club, say they knew hundreds of the volunteers from the United States by name and thousands by their faces.

"The largest number is with the Canadians," said Hutchinson. "But you find American boys everywhere."

A number of those in England were caught in German invasions of European countries and finally made their way to London.

"We meet them in the 'Free French' and even in the 'Free Rumanian' forces," said Hutchinson.

"We particularly need a dormitory for these boys," Hutchinson said. "We close early and have to turn them out into the blackout."

Hutchinson said many persons had the idea the life of a soldier in this war was comparatively easy.

"I know better," he said. "I have seen them come in here after being bombed out, after operating anti-aircraft guns and after working with bomb damage until they are tired, dog tired."

The Eagle club is the one place in wartime London where an American can buy a hamburger for less than 10 cents and coffee that tastes American. These are two of the most popular items.

Nation's Nutrition Problem Is Subject of Wide Study

Experts Seek Methods of Restoring 'Pep' to America's Diet; Chaplain Has Vital Role in United States Army.

By BAUKHAGE
National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H Street, N. W., Washington, D. C.

Starving in the midst of plenty!

That is what is wrong with a much larger segment of the American people than we ever guessed. And a lot of the hungry have plenty of money in the bank and a lot of others have plenty of potential food in their garden plots. Sounds ridiculous, doesn't it?

But it is true. And in a week or two you will probably see one of the 2,000,000 pamphlets which were printed by the government printing office in Washington and distributed by the office of the co-ordinator of health, welfare and related defense activities.

This pamphlet asks and answers 20 questions about "enriched bread." Because modern bread is not what it used to be when it was the strong "staff of life" that helped our healthier ancestors, a hundred years ago, battle their way over life's highroad.

Of course it's the vitamins we lack.

What are we going to do for the thousands of Americans who are only "half alive," as the famous nutrition specialist, Dr. Russell M. Wilder of the Mayo clinic, puts it? We are going to try to make them "all alive"—and alive longer, too.

This month, organizations have been meeting all over the nation to talk about this problem that has come upon America since we began refining the "pep" out of our foods, our bread and our fats and our sugar. The American Medical association is taking a hand. So is the National Society of Home Economists with 17,000 teachers in it—just to mention two of the many groups which have joined Uncle Sam in this job of building better bodies, brighter minds and a more stalwart nation.

I sat today in the office of M. L. Wilson, head of the extension service of the department of agriculture. I hated to leave, so fascinating were his stories, true stories from the laboratory and the home and the canning factory, the garden and the field, the hospital and the kitchen. How the missing vitamins and minerals through the co-operation of food-processors will be restored chemically to products. How a great educational campaign will teach people how to choose from the foods they have; how to provide food elements for those without means; how the house-wife, the doctor, the dietician and the restaurant keeper will be shown ways to help nourish the nation's sinews.

"Only about one-fourth of the families of the United States with diets that could be rated good" were found in a recent survey by the department of agriculture.

And so a national nutrition conference was called which mapped the job conquering hunger, "the oldest enemy of man."

Why America Doesn't Want War

In the hours when Washington was awaiting the details of the sinking of the American ship Robin Moor, reportedly by an "unidentified submarine" there was, for these days, an indescribable calm in the capital.

After the White House press conference I walked down the winding path under the elms which seemed to cast a shadow of peaceful security across the whole nation. I reviewed in my mind conversations of the week with certain earnest men in high places in the government. They had given me reasons to hope that the United States would not be drawn into Europe's frightful struggle.

When I reached my office I jotted these reasons down. Here they are:

1. The people do not want war.
2. The United States is not prepared—the navy, yes; but not the army or the air corps.
3. If we went in there would be a demand for supplies at home which Britain needs.
4. If we took an aggressive step against the Axis powers, Japan would be bound to join Germany and Italy against us.
5. If Germany struck first, Japan would not have to go in, therefore, Germany would avoid "incidents."

These were the reasons, I believe, why Washington awaited the "details" of the sinking of the Robin Moor with such calm.

Chaplain Is Important In Army Life

"In all my years of service I have never known a boy who was led astray by anything in the army."

There was a bouquet of red roses on the desk of the sandy-haired colonel who made that remark to me.

It was his birthday but the 28 roses were for his 28 years as chaplain in the army.

He was William Arnold, chief of chaplains of the United States army, whose job right now is being head-shepherd for flock of a million new lambs, the boys in the regular army, the navy, the marines and the new selectees.

"Chaplain," I said, "if you could write a letter to the families of these boys who read the weekly newspapers, what would you say to them?"

The genial features above the clerical collar lit up with interest.

"The one thing I'd like to tell them," he said, "is this: as far as religion goes—a boy is just as safe in the army as at home."

"From 5 a. m.," as Colonel Arnold put it, "until the stars come out."

And then a twinkle came into his eyes that I wish every mother's son might have seen.

"You know, they say the devil finds things for idle hands to do," he smiled, "Well the devil is out of luck in an army camp, hands and feet and head are pretty busy from reveille to taps."

"Even old soldiers," he went on, "when the day is over are ready to read a little and maybe sing a little, and then go to bed."

And at this point, if I may interject a personal word, I can come out for confirmation of that statement. I know. I was there.

But as far as the soldier's spiritual life goes things are different from when I was in the army and when Chaplain Arnold began his service.

Today there is religious service every day in an army camp.

But let's get down to brass tacks, as the chief of chaplains and I did in our talk. I call it a talk. It was not an interview, just an ex-soldier talking to another in a room with the scent of red roses and a calendar open showing Jesus before the tomb with the stone rolled away.

Is the boy in trouble, is he heavy laden, is he sick?

It's the chaplain to whom he goes or the chaplain who comes to him. Suppose the boy is just laid up with a cold. The chaplain is there, every day in the camp hospital or the sick-bay, to say, "Howzit, buddy?"

Suppose he is too sick to write home. Down sits the padre and takes the letter. Suppose he is real sick. The chaplain talks to the doctor, and then writes to the folks. Suppose it is critical. Then the chaplain, if he doesn't happen to be of the same faith as the boy, gets the lad's own pastor or rabbi if he has to send to the nearest town for him.

But suppose the boy is heavy laden with some of the troubles he does not like to write home about. Nine chances out of ten the chaplain has guessed it. If he has not he will listen and give advice out of his wide experience, out of the devotion and charity that are in his soul (or he would not have the job).

We talked of these things and others in the quiet office and then Chaplain Arnold leaned across the desk and said:

"Here's one thing I wish you'd tell these people you write for, tell them to write a letter about their boy and address it, 'Chaplain' and the same address they write to the boy. And if they know anybody—any relatives in the town nearby the camp, write to them and suggest that they invite the boy to come to see them over the week-end, and write to the priest, or minister or rabbi of their own denomination. He'll be glad to co-operate."

At that point he leaned back and smiled. "You know," he said, "Our chaplains in the army represent 27 denominations of the 261 in this country and they give a fine example of co-operation that the churches outside the army might well copy."

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

This anecdote arrives from Trondheim district, Norway:

A Nazi "missionary" arrived at a local public hall to deliver his routine address on the joys of living under Hitler and Quisling. As he entered the hall, two old fellows—Norwegian farmers—were standing just outside the doorway, debating whether to go in or not. In a moment the Nazi speaker reappeared, red-faced and furious. The hall was particularly empty.

"Donnerwettes! . . . It must be that Norwegian broadcast from London that everyone is listening to!"

At this one, one of the old men pulled out an ancient silver watch, verified the time and exclaimed: "By Gad! He's right. Come on, Niles, we have just time to get home and hear the news!"

Child Genius Popular Only With Parents

Talented Children Escape Discipline, Develop Individualism.

By ROGER SHAW
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CHICAGO.—Gifted children are a pain in the neck. They are the pride and joy of their parents. And the special pride of the psychologists. They are also the special pet-hate of the psychologists. They are this and they are that, and nobody ever seems to know quite how to handle them, or get along with them.

They used to crush gifted children under the Old Testament and the strict Victorian hearth-and-fireside technique. They made them do the goose-step. There was a German movie called "Maedchen in Uniform" that told the tale. English schools, too, are mostly run that way—the so-called traditional method.

There was a revolt against that method. It was nicknamed the "express-yourself" method. Under the express-yourselfists, anything went. Anything was all right. If the gifted child wanted to stand on its head, instead of doing its arithmetic, it was all for the best. It was developing its little personality in its own sweet little way. If the child wanted to stay up all night and read the Encyclopedia Britannica, so much the better. Loss of sleep might make it peevish, but in the long run the child would be the gainer. It had cashed in on its moment of excited curiosity, and a good thing, too.

Unconcerned Children.

By and large, gifted children are not pleasant children. That goes without saying. They themselves know this, generally speaking, but don't care. They are a bit unbridled. They rationalize all around the parental discipline, and tie it up in knots. They tend to be arrogant, and even condescending. Generally speaking, they know they are gifted children, and that's a headache from the word "go." They love long words. They are blase. They know how to make their elders uncomfortable, and how the elders hate them for it! There's a perfectly good psychological reason for this. Child-appeal is very much like dog-appeal. What makes it appealing is trustful, dumb devotion which makes the adult feel flattered and superior. The adult naturally loves this, so he loves children and dogs as well. But wolves and gifted children do not share this engaging trait with dogs and normal children. Hence, wolves and gifted children are not so popular. Never look a gift-child in the mouth. He's liable to bite you. Beware!

When Thomas Babington Macaulay was a very wee gifted child, they asked him how his finger felt. He had hurt the rosy little digit, somehow. The gifted little Macaulay replied: "Thank you, madam. The pain has somewhat abated." Macaulay's contemporary, John Stuart Mill, could read two foreign languages with considerable fluency when he was four. In the modern era, Braintruster Berle and Bob Hutchins have quite lived up to the Nineteenth-century English standard. So have London Punch and the New York New Yorker. A high percentage of their humor is based on the precocious chatterings of gifted children, and the gift-child spoofery of humiliated adults.

Discipline Returning.

There has, however, been a considerable reaction against letting the little supermen and supergals express themselves with all the initial post-war freedom. Discipline is again asserting itself, in its most draconian forms. There is now a school of thought which one might call the neo-Victorian. It believes that children should be seen and not heard, and that—like Mussolini's trains, and troops—they should be made to run on time. One "reactionary" spokesman for this group of counter-reformers is Dr. Henry Link, the eminent psychologist. Dr. Link is convincing, and he is highly articulate. He thinks that group games and individual self-abnegation are far more valuable character-forming factors than the rugged childish individualism that flourished in America in the twenties and the thirties.

Dr. Link—and he is typical of his school of thought—dislikes intraverts. He believes that pampered gift-kids should not be encouraged to do what they want when they want it. He prefers the age-old virtues, and the allegedly eternal verities. He thinks that the gift-bairn should be compelled to play extravert tennis, willing or no, even when the gift-bairn would much prefer to go on the licentious spree of studying prehistoric natural history, or submarine conchology. He believes that the little gifties should be shoved into bridge, systematically and without stint, even though the Wunderkinder think bridge is pretty lowbrow and intellectually sterile. Spare the rod, spoil the child, according to the neo-Victorians. Their opponents, of course, label them "intellectual fascists." The intellectual fascists, so-called, come back by mud-slinging the express-yourselfists as "cultural bolsheviks." Get your gift-child and take your choice.

Physical Growth Also.

Gift-children, the bright little things, are not undersized, pale, and anemic. They are generally bigger and more active than the average, and hearty, too — sometimes too hearty, say the observers. They sometimes do seem to be smaller than the others. That's merely an optical delusion. The answer is simple. They have been pushed ahead into classes of older children, who are bigger merely because they are older. In their own age-class, which they have out-stripped, the gifted children are big and bouncing. In other words, gift-children may be ascetic, but they don't look it. They may be greasy grinds and little book worms, but grinding and worming have built them up, somehow, physically as well as mentally.

There is another startling discovery about the gift-bairns. It is this: Their genius is not closely linked with dark insanity. Most of us have always thought otherwise. We have been led to believe, and even to swear to it, that genius and nuttiness are close pals—almost Siamese twins, to be exact. If genius oversteps, or over-reaches itself, it's just too bad for the genius. All this, apparently, science now tends to disprove. Insane asylums are not actually filled with what used to be gifted children. As a matter of fact, say the statisticians, gift-kids are more stable in their emotional reactions than the plodding little hewers of wood and drawers of water. This latest datum, frankly, does not make sense to your correspondent, but there it is, in black and white.

Quizzers Quiz Quints' Dr. Dafoe

When Dr. Allen Roy Dafoe brought the Dionne quintuplets into the world, he had to think fast if the five famous children were to survive. Now another set of five famous children, the Quiz Kids, again make him think fast. This time it is the good doctor who is in danger—of losing his reputation, as a scholar, as they fire a barrage of questions at him. He is holding Richard Williams (L.) and Gerard Darrow. In the rear are (L. to R.) Cynthia Cline, Van Tyke Tiers, and John Bishop.

'Cross-Currents' in Farm Picture

Cross currents are running now in the agricultural situation, the U. S. department of agriculture reports. Higher prices, income and costs are in prospect this year, coupled with anxiety over drouth. Early crops and livestock were in good condition, but the long dry spell has seriously damaged pastures and fields.

WASHINGTON.—Anxiety is felt over the possible effects of continued dry weather on the food-for-defense program, but drouth would need to be serious in view of the reservoir of feed in the ever-normal granary. Winter wheat will soon be in harvest. The crop is practically made, a crop estimated at 653,000,000 bushels, the largest in 25 of the last 30 years. Total supply of wheat during the coming year should be of near-record proportions.

Higher government commodity loans have aided farm markets. Prices of agricultural staples rose to new marks in more than a year. The food-for-defense program has raised the prices of livestock, poultry, and dairy products. Prospects for farm income in 1941 are above earlier estimates. Total agricultural production may be larger this year than last, notwithstanding the smaller 1941 pig crop—unless drouth prevent. Reports of a serious farm labor shortage have been received by the department of agriculture.

Local Division Offices Handle U. S. Purchasing

WASHINGTON.—How can a business man sell to the government?

Approximately 2,500 government purchasing agencies purchase some 300,000 different articles. Indeed, the government buys some quantities of almost everything produced in this country.

The magnitude of the government purchasing set-up, especially in this grave emergency when first emphasis is necessarily placed upon defense equipment for the expanding army and navy and for Great Britain, tends to confuse many manufacturers who desire to co-operate 100 per cent.

Actually, government purchases are made on a very simple formula. The specifications are not complicated. In fact, the biggest buyer in the world—Uncle Sam—has the simplest system of purchasing supplies, equipment and services. The system functions something like a large mail order house, except that where the latter sells to thousands, the government buys from thousands.

The initial venture of selling to the government will, of course, present some new problems. None of these problems, however, are necessarily complicated. In order to help manufacturers solve them, Jesse Jones, secretary of commerce, early in his administration set up a service and information office, staffed with men who have had years of service in government and have recently completed months of intensive study of the purchase systems of each governmental office.

Write for Information.

Consequently, the service and information office is equipped to inform manufacturers whom they should contact and exactly how to do so. A manufacturer who desires to co-operate with the government in the present emergency, and lacks specific information as to how to proceed, is invited to apply to this unit, room 1060, department of commerce, Washington, D. C. The effectiveness of the assistance rendered by the office is demonstrated by the large number of telegrams and letters of appreciation which it has received.

Many manufacturers apparently have felt that if they desire to transact business with the government they must either come to Washington in person or employ somebody familiar with government purchasing methods.

The service and information office strongly urges manufacturers not to come to Washington, at least until they have carried on preliminary negotiations by mail with the purchasing agency that handles their particular products. They are advised not to employ outsiders on a commission or other basis.

What Your Dreams Reveal

"LUCKY that was just a dream," he thinks, "or I'd lose my job."

But he's wrong. No dream is "just a dream." Often it reveals something in yourself that you never knew—and perhaps should. Dreams can really help when you take them to heart.

* * *

Instead of lightly dismissing these dreams, use them to help solve your problems. Our 32-page booklet gives the scientific explanations for several dreams—flying, falling off a cliff, running from wild animals and other typical dream situations. Tells why some dreams are "prophetic." For your copy send your order to:

RAILWAY LABOR UNION DEMANDS WOULD COST

900 Million Dollars A YEAR

THE labor unions have made their demands upon the railways of the United States—and through the railways upon the PUBLIC. These demands are vastly larger in proportion than any they have ever made. The economical and efficient operation of the railways is vital to the nation's defense effort. Therefore, the Western Railways present to the public the following facts:

The labor unions representing engineers, firemen, conductors, brakemen and switchmen are demanding a 30 per cent increase in wages, amounting to 190 million dollars a year—although their present rates of pay are the highest in history.

Other unions representing a greater number of railway employees are demanding wage increases ranging as high as 95 per cent—averaging 47 per cent—and amounting to 580 million dollars a year—although their present rates of pay also are the highest in history.

Thus the wage increases being demanded by the labor unions amount to 770 million dollars a year, an average increase in excess of 41 per cent.

In addition, certain of these labor unions have demanded advances in their pay not included in the above figures, and more rules for the creation of unnecessary jobs.

The situation, then, is this: The total cost of complying with all the demands made would be approximately 900 million dollars a year!

The average weekly earnings of railway employees are now 15 per cent higher than in the peak year 1929, while the cost of living is 12 per cent less.

The demands of the railway labor unions are being made when the entire nation has just been asked to make a supreme effort for National Defense.

The railways cannot meet these demands without a great increase in the cost of transportation. They exceed by more than 700 million dollars the income that the railways had left after paying their annual expenses, taxes and charges in 1940.

The railways have a vitally important job before them. They need all their resources to continue adequately to serve you and contribute effectively toward the National Defense Program.

Help Save A Life This Year

I saw a man die and it was not a pleasant sight.

Death came to him on a Minnesota highway under a hot summer sun.

He was a motorist who forgot to signal a left turn on a well-traveled highway. Just as his car started to turn, another motorist behind him swung out to pass. The two cars colided.

There were five in one car, two in the other. The man who died at the side of the road suffered a broken neck. His deathbed was the gravel shoulder on the tarvia highway.

Nearby lay his brother-in-law, unconcious and with one ear torn off. His sister had suffered deep cuts on the head and face but though her brother was dying, she was more concerned with the injuries to her 7 year old daughter and a younger son.

A lot of other motorists soon stopped at the accident scene. There were many expressions of regret. And there were tears later when the youth's father knelt beside the body.

Multiply that same death scene with 37,000 others that took place on the nation's highways last year and you will then be able to better understand the tragedies traffic accidents bring to American homes annually.

Remember that tradgedy and the 37,000 other ones when you drive today, tomorrow and every day and maybe YOU can help Minnesotans save 100 lives this year.

(Editorial by Geo. Masters, Editor, Wadena Pioneer Journal, member of "Save 100 Lives campaign committee of M. E. A.)

Ludvig F. Larson returned home last week from the Veterans hospital at Minneapolis where he had been a patient for several weeks.

State Collected Huge Tax

The payment by the Oliver Iron Mining Company last week of $3,696,761 occupational tax together with the decision of the state supreme court to the effect that earnings from a holding company derived in part from dividents of national banks are subject to the state income tax sustain G. Howard Spaeth, State Commissioner of Taxation, and his administration assistants, in their earlier decisions concerning two highly important phases of taxation in Minnesota.

The Oliver Iron Mining Company maintained their tax should have been computed on a base price of $4.05 per ton instead of $4.45, and applied for an adjustment on that basis. Spaeth rejected the company's application following a hearing held before him. Other iron ore mining companies joined the Oliver concern in its protest and had they been sustained, the state would have lost approximately $1,800,000 in occupational tax this year.

The decision by the state's high court subjecting earnings holding companies to state income tax regardless of the fact that they had in part been derived from dividends of national banks, followed an action to recover on an alleged overpayment of income tax, the appellant holding that such income was not subject to the state income tax. The court, however, approved the contention of Spaeth that funds received from this source must be included in income against which state income tax accrnes.

Card of Thanks

I hereby wish to express sincere thanks for the farewell parties given me at the Holt hall and also at my home.

Life Of Hans A. Fosholm

Hans A. Fosholm, Holt Township Pioneer, passed away at his home last Thursday after a lingering illness.

Funeral services were conducted on Monday afternoon at the Nazareth Lutheran church with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiating. He was a respected and faithful member of the church since pioneer days.

Hans Andreas Fosholm, born in Aadalen, Norway, June 1, 1862, passed away at his home, June 26, 1941 at the age of 79 years, 25 days. He came to America in 1888 and settled at Park River, N. Dak. where he was married to Karoline Helseth, on Dec. 18, 1892.

The family moved to Holt in 1894 and settled on a homestead in Holt township where he has since made his home.

He is survived by three sons and six daughters.

Ingvold, Henry, Amanda and Oscar of Holt.

Mrs. Ed Heieran, Mrs O. L. Monson and Mrs. Herman Christoferson of Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Theo. Ness of Red Lake Falls.

Mrs. Paul Anderson of Wylie.

Also two brother and one sister, Helge and Iver Fosholm, and Mrs. Anna Overvolden in Norway and ten grandchilsren.

His parents, his wife and one sister have preceded him in death.

Pall bearers at the funeral were: Carsten Sagstuen, Ludvig Sagstuen, Olaf Ness, Rudolph Smith, Lars Ring, Nels Johnson.

Alvin Saxberg and Billy Faiman were given a farewell party at the hall here last Wednesday evening. These two young men left on Friday for Fort Snelling from where they will enter the Selective Service Training.

Government Checking Survey

Working up toward Thief River Falls from Clearwater and East Polk Counties is a crew of 37 men affinated with the Coast and Geodetic Survey of U. S. deparment of commerce. The men, divided into three groups, are making a survey to establish the exact latitude and longitude at given points, and have progressed as far north as the city of Thief River Falls.

The work will continue as far north as the Canadian boundary. When the project is completed, there will be no place in the United States that is more than 25 miles from a point whose exact geographic location is known.

One group builds towers, which are really one tower within another. The outer tower holds the men taking the readings and the inner one holds the instruments. This is done because of the extreme accuracy which has to be observed in making the survey. Any additional weight on the tower holding the instruments would throw the computations off.

The method used is known as trianculation and makes use of a trigonometric system by which the third of a triangle can be measured if two sides and the included angle are known. Thus, they can measure the distance from a known point to another without actually using a tape measure to do so.

The men work in a tower 87 feet high. In some districts where the land is more hilly they have used towers as high as 136 feet.

Those towers are placed about ten miles apart and the men signal from one to another at night by the use of battery-generated lights. They use the Morse code to communicate with one another and for extreme accuracy they take 16 readings in every case.

After the surveyors have finished their readings, another crew comes along and tears down the towers while the third crew is setting up another set of towers at the next point.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon at the Nazareth Lutheran Church for Iver Engebretson, former long time resident of Holt, who passed away at Warren on Sunday evening. Complete obituary will be published next week.

Rochester, Minn. — Canadian Honkers are nesting in Minnesota--and it's sourthern Minnesota at that.

On the Mayo Estate within the 30,000 acre Olmstead County game refuge, 50 adult birds and 50 young have been observed by the local game warden. The geese are year-round residents.

Located near the south Branch of the Zumbro River, the nesting colony is smaller than the huge flocks that annually winter in the area. Last winter several thousand honkers tarried for the season.

Fourth of July Picnic

Circle 4 of the Nazareth Lutheran church of Holt will celebrate a fourth of July picnic at the C. O. Larson's home. Refreshments and lunch will be sold. Everybody welcome.

Clash Between Russia and Germany Speeds Up Pace of War in Europe, Changing Aspect of Entire Conflict; British Register New Gains in Syria

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

ADOLF HITLER — JOSEF STALIN

The 'Best of Friends' (?) Did Part

FLAME:
Hits Russia

Anxious eyes watched the beginning of actual war between those erstwhile partners of opposite political faiths, Nazi Germany and Communist Russia, and once more the world war was making strange bedfellows.

Americans who wanted Britain to win the war cheered loudly for the Soviet, which they had been condemning just a short time before, by claiming that Russia was responsible for defense strikes because Russia wanted Germany to win.

Americans who had gone into their pockets to aid Finland, the victim of rotten Russian aggression, suddenly awoke to find Finland, according to Hitler's word, "marching bravely hand in hand with the Nazi soldiers against Russia."

And some Americans figured that in the battle between the world's two leading dictatorships, the democracies, now practically boiled down to the United States, England and China, had everything to win and nothing to lose.

Their memories were able to hark back to the day when Britain, in order to avoid war, had endeavored to encircle Germany by lining up France, Italy, the Balkans, Turkey and Russia as allies.

It had been on August 24, 1939, that Russia had thrown this into the pot by the dramatic and sensational formation of an alliance with Germany, thus breaking the encirclement at a vital point and encouraging the Nazis to move into Poland.

But it was undeniable that when Germany's march brought her to the Balkans and down into Greece that Russia had made unfriendly diplomatic statements and overtures, particularly in the case of Jugoslavia and Bulgaria.

Observers did not forget that Churchill had told Russia, following the loss of the battle of Greece, "you will be next!" The event bore out the prediction of the British premier, and the event was not long coming.

In the German statements accompanying the declaration of war on Russia, it was stated that "we gave Russia half of Poland." Most observers thought then and now that there was considerable surprise and not a little chagrin in Nazi Germany that Russia had leaped in and captured half of the booty.

It was regarded as one of the "signposts" of discord that lined the almost two years of pathway that Russia had traveled apparently hand in hand with Germany.

There also was no question but that the visit of Sir Stafford Cripps as envoy to Russia was a recognition on the part of England that the regret over the alliance between the Reds and the Nazis was mutual.

The feeling was general that Russia, having observed, having been inside the Nazi military machine, having learned lessons in the Finnish campaign, was beginning to feel herself strong enough to refuse German demands that it place its supplies and railway facilities under German control.

Most certain it was that Russia was not completely ready, or it would have been her turn to declare the war and make the first move, for there was no feeling that Russia would have any scruples about treaty breaking.

In the demands that Molotov was supposed to have made of Germany, with regard to Finland, Bulgaria, and the bases on the Dardanelles and Bosporus, provided they were truly reported by Von Ribbentrop, one could see that Russia had self-confidence needed for a fight.

Also there was the angle that Germany was being stymied in her effort to get aid to the Near-East, that Germany was stalemated in North Africa, that Germany feared, with the Russian situation being what it was, to start an invasion attempt against Britain until her eastern door was safely shut.

DISASTER:
In Air, on Sea

While the war swept into its net new millions of combatants, there were two disasters which, while they involved only small numbers, caused considerable comment and hit the front pages with a crash.

One was the dramatic sinking of the submarine O-9 off Portsmouth, N. H., with some 30-odd navy lads aboard.

The other was the crash of a Martin bomber at Baltimore after what eyewitnesses called an "explosion in mid-air." Two died in this disaster.

Relatives of victims of the O-9 disaster fired verbal guns at the navy department for sending to sea for deep diving tests in 400 feet of water a submarine, the oldest in the navy, which had been shown to be in leaky and poor condition when she was given her first undersea tests after being recommissioned.

While salvage crews worked, apparently vainly, to bring the ship to the surface as the Squalus was brought up not so long ago, once more the public wondered if perhaps sabotage might not have had a hand in the sinking.

It was the same with the huge bomber, of the latest type. It had been test-flown for two hours one day, for half an hour the next, and then the army pilots, both qualified experts, who had flown several of the same ships before, took off.

The speedy bomber sailed into the air in a normal climb, both engines working perfectly. Suddenly there was a series of backfires, a huge cloud of black smoke poured from the ship, and she nose-dived into a woods, killing both men, one an army officer-test-pilot, the other a civilian army inspector-test-pilot.

DAMASCUS:
Oft-Conquered

The fall of Damascus, believed the world's oldest city, opened the British road to Aleppo, and thus forecast the near end of Vichy troops' resistance in Syria.

Whether the British occupation, timed happily for them with Germany's severe occupation with the Russians, would be in such force that Syria could be held and organized for capable defense in case the Soviet gave up was a question.

Many believed, however, that if Russia put up a good defense, and held the Germans at bay somewhat after the Chinese fashion of dealing with the Japanese, that the British move to a union with Turkey's southern frontier, might enable Britain to give Russia some aerial support in the Ukrainian district.

The Syrian campaign, plus the holding situation in Northern Africa, was giving the British a slightly more favorable outlook on the progress of the war—provided Russia was able to do anything more than France did in the way of defending herself against the Nazis.

The fall of Damascus saw a city of 4,000 years' history, a city about which wars had raged for centuries, once more conquered by an invader.

The city was rich with Biblical tradition, for it was on the road from Jerusalem to Damascus that St. Paul had his vision and was converted to Christianity.

In those days the city belonged to Egypt, to Israel, to Rome, in succession. In 635 it was captured by the Moslems, and the Crusaders tried in vain to wrest it from them.

Alexander the Great conquered it. The Mongolians got it in 1260 A. D. The Egyptians captured it back again.

The Turks had their turn at it in 1516, and there it remained until the World war No. 1, when Lord Allenby captured it for Britain.

The League of Nations gave it and all of Syria to France under mandate.

BREAK:
Thought Near

A complete break between the United States and the Axis powers was believed to be close following several steps in aftermath to the sinking of the Robin Moor.

First, all assets of Germany and Italy were frozen—and these countries responded in kind.

Then, all consulate employees were ordered out of the country. Germany and Italy responded with the same move.

President Roosevelt went to congress with a surprise special message in which ugly names for the Germans and the sinking of the Moor were dotted throughout his statement.

The state department followed this up with a strongly worded note. And so nothing remained by the thin thread of restricted diplomatic representation between the United States and the Nazis and the Fascists, only this, nothing more.

R.A.F.:
Smashing Away

Though submarine losses continued heavy, and German planes were still taking a toll of British shipping, for once, with Germany occupied heavily on her eastern frontier, Britain's airplanes found themselves able to make attacks at will on the invasion coast and on western Germany as well.

Day after day Britain suffered only the most desultory of bombings from the Nazi planes, while RAF squadrons reputedly numbering hundreds of planes, many of them built in the United States, went across the channel in waves, dropping tens of thousands of pounds of bombs.

German dispatches admitted little damage, but British observers claimed that the same sort of attacks were being made on Germany as Germany had made on England previously, and that the huge casualty and damage list in England must be repeating itself now in Germany and the occupied bases.

With the situation on the Russian border what it was, the RAF looked with complacence across the channel, and smashed away to its heart's content at Nazi objectives.

The raids on the invasion coast were the simplest of all, in fact, RAF members, pilots and gunners, referred to raids on these ports as "nursery raids"—in other words, raids taken part in by the less experienced pilots as a part of their final training for bombing and combat.

The explosives were described as falling so thick along the coast that the British coast could feel the shattering of the explosions.

GUARD: ### To Stay "In"

Most news commentators and analysts felt, when the National Guard was inducted into the federal service, that they would never get out after a year's training.

This was predicated on the double assumption that they would not be sufficiently trained in a year to permit them to return to civil life, and that, second, if the world crisis continued, they would be needed to aid in the training of selectees.

Both of these assumptions turned out to be correct when the war department asked that America's 289,800 guardmen have their period of training extended. The department sent the recommendation to the President, and it seemed certain to be carried into effect.

The only immediate question was whether the President himself had power to order it, or whether it must be submitted to congress. But either way, it seemed a certainty.

The move to keep the Guard in training did not come as a surprise to the Guardsmen themselves, for from time to time since they were first inducted, it was a general topic of conversation, and most of the men themselves felt that they were in for longer than a year, perhaps for "the duration."

The first reason given by the army was that the Guard units now contained thousands of selectees, and that if the Guardsmen were returned to civil life it would disrupt the entire organization of the army.

The Guards were inducted from last September to February, and the war department revealed that from being just a question of conversation, now that the Guardsmen were in mid-year of their training, the question was being daily put to the department from thousands of men: "Are we in for a year or longer?"

The war department said the questions were right and proper, for the citizen-soldiers, if they are going to be held in for much longer, will have to make adjustments in their civilian affairs.

The tip-off on how the prospects were came from Representative Wadsworth of New York, who introduced the draft bill, who said that congress would surely authorize another year's training if the President requested it.

OUTCOME:

The betting on the probable outcome of the Russian-German hostilities was so variable that one could almost write one's own ticket.

The views ranged all the way from a swift campaign and a swift surrender on the part of Russia to the theory that Britain and the United States would hurl themselves into the fray, and that Russia, using the China technique of a "rubbery" retreat, would lure the Nazis into their vast country until they would suffer the fate of overextended Japan.

IN BRIEF:

WASHINGTON: Senator Andrew Jackson Houston of Texas reached his eighty-seventh birthday, making him one of the oldest men ever to serve in the senate.

NEW YORK: School janitors from 15 states were here to attend a five-day course in Columbia university in rat-catching, insect control and plumbing repair and sweeping technique.

Early Use of Fire

Fire has been used so long by mankind that its discovery is veiled in antiquity. Even the most primitive tribes in the world seem to have been familiar with its use, and nearly all know how to kindle a fire. Fire ritual was a part of the religious ceremony of ancient Egypt, China, Greece, Rome, Persia, and of the Natchez, Aztec, Maya and the Peruvian Indians.

History tells us that the first extensive use of fire in wartime was probably that used by the Assyrians in the siege of Syracuse in 413 B. C., and the siege of Rhodes in 304 B. C., when the invaders threw containers of burning material over the walls of the besieged city.

As early as 429 B. C., the Greeks protected the wooden walls of Plataea from the fire arrows of the Persian enemies by stretching hides in front of them.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

WEARING the simplest frocks you can find these hot days? Here is a style you can easily make for yourself, and you can wear it in cool comfort on the most sizzling days. It is a simple one-piece dress, cut to a low point in front, sleeveless and backless except for shoulder straps. Of course you wear the bolero with it on the street. Pattern No. 1359-B is a tried and true design for the ideal warm weather dress. It has everything; youthful lines, back opening which makes it easy to get into, no fussy details which take time to iron.

Make this dress in any of the washable sports fabrics; cottons, linens, rayon. Percale, dimity, chambray, broadcloth are particularly recommended. Bolero can match the frock. The frock in a print and the bolero in a solid color is also a smart effect.

Storage is the crux of the problem confronting farmers as country elevators experience difficulty finding outlets for grain carried over from the last harvest.

The Crop Storage Problem

Under normal conditions, wheat and other grain crops flow from the fields of the Northwest to distant markets in so orderly a manner that the producer rarely gives any thought to it.

Availability of adequate storage and transportation, he takes for granted.

The familiar elevators form a huge reservoir into which the flood of grain pours as the harvest begins. Long trains begin scurrying back and forth between these country elevators and the big terminal elevators. Thus the level of grain in the country elevators is kept sufficiently below capacity to accommodate the crops of all producers.

Even in normal times this throws a tremendous peak burden on the railroad. It must have the men to handle the many additional trains, engines to haul them, and cars into which to load the grain. It must have the full co-operation of the grain trade so that cars can be loaded and unloaded promptly, and hurried back for more loads. All of this involves a great deal more than appears on the surface—even in normal times.

But this is not a normal year. Great quantities of grain have been carried over in the country elevators. How much of this can be moved before the harvest begins is problematical. For the terminal elevators too are filled to near capacity. The prospect of their being able to reduce this storage materially before the harvest is none too bright.

★ So far as the Great Northern is concerned, it expects to be able to furnish transportation for all of the grain produced in its territory that has some place to go.

★ It expects, at the same time, to be able to discharge its full obligation to the Nation in furnishing the transportation required by national defense.

★ It expects also to be able to provide transportation for the normal business of its territory.

But it cannot perform these important services unless it has the full co-operation of its patrons. It is essential that cars be loaded promptly and, insofar as possible, to their full capacity, and unloaded promptly at destinations.

Despite the fact that the Great Northern has put 4,000 new 50-ton box cars in service in little more than a year, and will begin getting more cars early this fall on an additional order for 2,000, all cars must be used for transportation purposes, and not tied up for temporary storage.

The Great Northern is placing these facts before the producers of its territory because it believes that it is to the best interest of the individual farmer to look into the local storage situation, and if unable to obtain assurance for the handling of his crop, to make other provisions for caring for it until it can be absorbed in normal trade channels.

Life Of Iver Engebretson

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday afternoon last week at Naz. Luth. Church for Iver Engebretson, former long time resident of Holt, who passed away at Warren on June 29.

Iver Engebretson, son of Engebret Iverson and Inger Jensdatur, was born in Elverum Norway, December 26, 1869.

He immigrated to this country in 1896. He came direct to Marshall County were he homesteaded in the town of Whiteford and has resided in this vicinity ever since. At his death he was 71 years, 6 months and 3 days.

He was married to Ingeborg Sagstuen of Holt in the year of 1905. To this union was born 8 sons and 3 daughters.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife, 2 sons and 4 daughters namely: Mrs. Emma McTavish and Mrs. Ann Peterson of Duluth Earl of Gilman, Wisconsin, Clara Lorraine and Orris at home at Thief River Falls, one sister, Mrs. Christ [illegible] of Thief River Falls, two sisters and one brother in Norway and 9 grandchildren. Two children, three sisters and one brother have preceded him in death.

Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated assisted by Rev. Myhrer. Mrs. Oscar Fosholm sang a solo.

Pall bearers were Ludvig Sagstuen, Carsten Sagstuen, Ole Moberg, John Anderson, Lars Ring, Anton Sagstuen.

Government Checking Survey

The big government survey crew that are working thru here to the Canadian boundary are now setting up towers between Holt and Middle River. They have one tower near the Ole C. Brenna farm.

Must Accept Private Jobs

While the W. P. A. program in Marshall county has not yet been closed, all men on the W. P. A. rolls are required to accept private employment where offered and remuneration is equal to the W. P. A. monthly scale, Harold Anderson, Baudette, area supervisor, told a representative of the Sheaf.

"Any one employed on the W. P. A. program who refuses private employment will be automatically suspended from the roll," said Mr. Anderson. "The W. P. A. is a program developed for the purpose of taking up the slack in employment and is not for the purpose of giving anyone a permanent job," said Anderson. We want and encourage the men on the rolls to accept private employment and they will be given an opportunity to return to the rolls when the private jobs have been completed, he said.

The Stephen project was closed last Saturday, while the Middle River State Park project will be completed on July 18, which will release 15 men. The Newfolden school, Thief Lake and county poison bait mixing projects are being continued while the labor is available.

Mr. Anderson urged farmers in need of haying and harvest help to call on men on the W. P. A. rolls and if they refuse the private employment the farmer should notify the W. P. A. office and these men will be terminated at once from the W. P. A. pay roll.

Mrs. Nels Lysne, pioneer woman of Holt Township passed away at her farm home here on Monday after a lingering illness. Funeral services are being conducted today from the Nazareth Lutheran church with Rev. Hanson officiating. A complete obituary will be published next week.

Wheat Marketing Cards

In an effort to place wheat marketing cards in the hands of all wheat producers before harvest, the Marshall County AAA committee is taking steps to set up machinery to handle this new phase of the farm program, Mr. Kranz, county AAA chairman announced today.

Marketing quotas will be in effect on all farms on which wheat is raised, Mr. Kranz stated, adding that as soon as wheat acreage on a farm is measured, marketing cards can be issued.

If seeded acreage is not larger than the wheat acreage allotment or 15 acres a marketing card will be issued permitting all wheat produced on the farm to be marketed without penalty. In order to market wheat on farms on which are seeded 15 acres or less of wheat in 1941 or those on which the normal production of acreage planted is less than 200 bushels, it is necessary to have a marketing card, which will be issued only upon request.

If measured acreage of wheat seeded is in excess of 15 acres and the acreage allotment, excess acres must be taken care of before a marketing card can be issued.

Mr. Kranz points out the following ways the excess wheat may be disposed of:

1 Payment in cash of 49 cents a bushel for the excess to the county AAA treasurer and receive a marketing card permitting sale of all wheat.

2. Deposit with the county treasurer 49 cents a bushel on the excess to be held in escrow to the growers credit. The excess wheat under this plan must be stored on the farm and if it cannot be shown on demand, the money reverts to the United States treasury.

3. Deliver the excess wheat to a bonded warehouse and secure warehouse receipts for the surplus. The grower under this rule assumes all responsibility for storage charges. Receipts under this plan must be deposited with the county AAA treasurer.

4. Posting a bond equal to 49 cents a bushel for the excess wheat with the county treasurer. The wheat may then be stored on a farm or in a warehouse.

5. Turn the excess wheat over to the Department of Agriculture and receive a marketing card for alloted wheat. This wheat will be dissributed by the department to the Red Cross and like agencies.

6. Haul the excess wheat to the elevator and sell it with a 49 cent penalty. The county committe will then give the grower a marketing card to sell the remainder of his wheat.

Mr. Kranz explains excess wheat stored under bond or under loan to the Commodity Credit Corporation may be disposed of in the following year by seeding under the acreage allotment.

Rev. and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson and son Harold, expect to leave Monday morning on their annual vacation. They will spend one week at Ottertail Lake near Perham. From there they expect to go to Milan and Madison. They expect to be gone about three weeks. In case of emergency Rev. Hanson can be contacted by means of telegraph. or by letter through the Postmaster. There will be practically no telephone connections to where they are staying.

Holt Cafe Changed Hands

The Holt Cafe has changed management. Mr and Mrs. V. E. Oakey, who have operated the place for the past two years have retired from the business and Mr. Theo. Ness, owner of the place has now rented the building to Haaken Evenstad of Moorhead. Mr. Evanstad is taking over this week. Mr. and Mrs Ness have spent a few days here helping him get started in his new line of business. We welcome the new propreiters to Holt.

The Weather

The weather the past week has kept the farmers on the jump trying to get up their crop of hay. There were showers over the week end with a real heavy rain late Sunday afternoon. Another deluge came down late Tuesday night but since then we have had sunshine and a good breeze yesterday.

Mr. Adolph Herseth of Bertha spent Saturday and Sunday here. Mrs. Herseth who has spent the past week at the home of her daughter and son-in-law Mr. and Mrs. Alton Carlson, returned home with him.

We're Serving Uncle Sam and YOU TOO in Peace and in Defense

With the speeding up of defense production many industries find it impossible to meet the demands of their regular customers and are forced to limit supplies. However, your electric company, which is privately owned and operated, is ready for emergencies and there will be no shortage of kilowatts.

We are prepared and are serving Uncle Sam with electric power without peril of our service to you. This is the result of many years of progress in expanding and improving our system in advance of your ever-increasing demands for electric service.

Our many sources of electricity are so linked together that if one source fails another source of power is available. The highly skilled and trained staff of people who are serving you with electricity from day to day are eager for any new task . . . in peace and in defense.

It is through these employees and our system of inter-connected power and distribution lines that we are ready and are doing our part for Uncle Sam and serving you, too.

PATTERNS
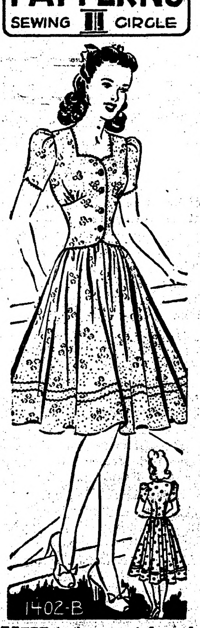
SEWING CIRCLE



HERE is the peasant flavored Basque silhouette which junior girls have taken to so widely in the past few months. Barbara Bell interprets the popular new fashion in a one-piece frock. Typically basque, with the long top fitted through the waistline and gathered at a bustline to emphasize feminine curves. The full skirt is attached at the hipline. Order Pattern No. 1402-B for yourself today and be the first in your community to wear the new, youthful basque fashion. Shows off the best features of the young girl's figure and has a fresh appeal of complete femininity.

The pattern can be made up in the new flower printed cottons—chintz, percale or broadcloth. And in soft batiste, lawn, voile or dimity. It's cute, too, in gingham, seersucker or calico. It's a real summer frock, adaptable to any summer materials.

• • •

Pattern No. 1402-B is designed for sizes 11, 13, 15, 17 and 19. Corresponding bust measurements 29, 31, 33, 35 and 37. Size 13 (31) requires 4⅞ yards 35-inch fabric without nap. 10 yards of ric-rac braid are needed for trim. Send your order to:

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Nazis Employ Giant 'Pincer' Maneuver In Drive to Cut Russian Supply Line; Federal Agents Arrest 29 Persons In Largest U. S. Roundup of Spies

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

The figure in the lower left corner of the picture is an R.A.F. pilot, who floats on a rubber dinghy, dropped by the land plane overhead. The aviator, after being shot down by Nazis, was spotted by the English air sea rescue service, who radioed the high speed launch, shown just as it reached the scene. The plane hovered above, until rescue was completed, then sped away upon another mercy mission. These dramatic events are almost a daily occurrence in the battle of the Atlantic.

REDS:
Fighting Hard

In spite of empty communiques from both Russian and German sources on the progress of the war on a 2,000-mile front between the two former allies, one thing was evident, that the Russians were fighting with all their might and main, but that they were being relentlessly pushed back before the fury of the German mechanized onslaught.

Bit by bit and piece by piece the picture began to be seen, despite the fact that both sides were barring war correspondents from the scene.

The huge front was divided into four general parts, the far northern, the northern, central and southern.

On the far north there was no discernible activity. This was the part which Germany hoped to invade by means of her occupation of Norway.

The northern front really began with the Finnish-Russian border, that part of it which lies to the southeast and separates old Finland from the road to Leningrad. Here the fighting was severe, but apparently was mostly in the air. Another portion of this front lay somewhat to the southward, and included the states of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, and the Germans moving from East Prussia, were invading these territories only recently taken over by Russia, and were slowly forcing the Russians back into their own territory.

Here the fighting was extremely severe and the Russians were forcing the Nazis to advance slowly, where at all.

The greatest Nazi advance was on the central front, with the rail center of Minsk, reputedly a "life-line" of Russian supply between south and north armies, as the prime apparent objective. Here the Germans were claiming their greatest successes, and on the basis of meager dispatches, they had indeed covered the most mileage in this district.

Yet most observers believed the Ukraine, the southern front, was the one the Germans coveted most. Yet it was on this front that almost no advance had been made, the Russians claiming to hold the Prut river, which was still a considerable distance from old Russian territory.

Thus the old Nazi "pincers technique" was evident, as it was obvious the Germans were trying to divide the Russian defending armies into two parts, and drive southward to surround and encircle the Ukraine defenders, and to do the same via the Baltic states with the northern defenders.

MORALE:
The Mental Side

As to the propaganda releases, which contained much more space and information than did the official news, there was every indication that both sides in the Russo-German war believed strongly that the other's inner morale was weak.

There were dozens of stories from Russian sources telling of Nazi soldiers and aviators laying down their arms, saying, "we don't want to fight against the Communists."

The Germans, on the other hand, did not make such claims, but took the line of telling the world what brave and foolhardy fighters the Russians were, and by telling stories of "stands to the death" to paint the picture of an army suffering defeat after defeat, and letting its soldiers fight even inside of burning buildings until all were killed.

The purpose of each of these types of stories was to impair morale.

This caused many observers to feel that the outcome of the war might well hinge on a breach in the morale of either side.

SPY:
Roundup

In swift, secret moves, agents of the Federal Bureau of Investigation completed the greatest spy hunt in the nation's history and arrested 29 persons on espionage charges. Twenty-two of the group are natives of Germany.

For two years the FBI had been closing in on the spy ring which is specifically charged with conspiring "to engage in espionage activities" in the United States.

Warrants issued for the arrests charged the spies with giving information to foreign nations concerning cargoes of British-bound ships and with revealing new developments in U. S. naval, army and aircraft products.

BOMBER:
U. S.' Biggest

The taking to the air of the B-19, a $3,000,000 airplane, and believed the biggest bomber in the world today, also the fastest and most powerful, was an event.

Yet it disclosed that bigger and faster ships are the rule of the future, and the not-far-distant-future at that.

Not so very long ago 400 miles an hour was a dream, and many experts declared that at 600 miles an hour, or 880 feet per second, the air resistance would burn up a plane.

This was exploded when the U. S. army announced that at Wright field a civilian test pilot dived a plane at the rate of 661 miles an hour, or 968 feet a second, which is losing altitude almost at the speed of sound, which travels only 1,120 feet a second.

The speed of the pilot, Bob Fausel, tester for the Wright company, was a mile every 5.44 seconds. Last year Andy McDonough, an air-line pilot and an air corps reservist, flew a Bell Airacobra in a dive at 620 miles an hour.

And Capt. Ben Kelsey had piloted a Lockheed from March field, Calif., to Mitchel field, L. I., in seven hours, at an average of 420 miles per hour.

The tip-off as to the future came from Washington, for Langley field, already with a wind tunnel which will test ships designed for 300 miles an hour, is going to be revamped to test 500-mile-an-hour ships.

POWER:
For F.D.R.?

There were two distinct schools of thought about the problem of granting President Roosevelt further additional personal powers in the emergency.

The war department, according to authorized sources in Washington, was putting pressure on congress to declare a state of unlimited national emergency, a step already taken by the President, but which would free his hands for considerable action now barred to him by the fact that congress has not given him the reins.

The isolationist press attacked this move instantly, and so did some congressional leaders who had generally been regarded as administration stalwarts.

DOOMED:
Are Big Guns

The accuracy of American bombing from the air and the size of bombers and bombs has caused the army chiefs to doom to oblivion the big railway guns, not to mention the huge weapons fixed in coast guard positions.

Say the army chiefs:

"These big guns cannot fire with nearly the accuracy nor the effect of the big air bombers. The war department might as well abandon this weapon."

Great Career Ends

Sad news to the world of music was the death of Ignace Jan Paderewski, world famous musician and Polish patriot, who died in New York of pneumonia at the age of 80. The great pianist was ill only a few days. His long career was one of continued brilliance. At 9 he was a child prodigy and at 18 a professor of music. An accomplished concert pianist at 27, he later became a world recognized statesman and first prime minister of a free Poland.

PLANES:
In Syria

Enthusiastic reports were beginning to come from Australians in the R. A. F. in Syria and northern Africa concerning the performance and maneuverability of American-built planes.

These reports constituted an oddity, however, with regard to the bombers and fighters. From northern Africa came glowing accounts of the performance of Martin-built bombers on the ever-growing strength of Britain there.

The bombers were fast, the sights were unusually good, and they were wreaking havoc with Nazi and Fascist planes in the air and on the ground.

The Curtiss-built Tomahawk fighter planes also came in for unstinted praise, not only on the North African front but in Syria as well.

But the Vichy French had the same Martin bombers that the Free French and British had in Syria, so it was Tomahawk against the U. S. heavier planes there.

The reports of victory were still optimistic in Syria, however, the airmen reporting that the Tomahawks shot down the U. S. Martins quite as well as they did the Junkers, Heinkels and Capronis in Africa.

"The fire power of these fighters is terrific and they have all the speed you want," said the pilots.

NOBODY:
Satisfied

The passage by the house military affairs committee of a report condemning a long list of persons and agencies as having bungled the national defense showed a puzzled public that apparently nobody was satisfied with the way our preparations were being managed.

The house committee attacked the administration, the defense advisory commission, the army, the navy, OPM, the maritime commission and the state department and Secretary Ickes.

The President, it said, had been too prone, when new problems arose, just to name another board, with the result that endless complications and confusion had arisen to slow progress.

And harking back to the President himself, it was recalled that he, too, had declared himself far from pleased with the way things were going, just a day or two before the house committee reported.

William Knudsen, head of OPM, reported defense production lagging; Leon Henderson, price control man, was pegging the prices of tires and tubes and threatening in other directions; the maritime commission was displeased with the ship owners and Secretary Ickes was having a hard time with the nation's oil men.

Defense plant heads, seeking places for their workers to live near their work, were falling out with the federal housing men, and it was hard to find anybody that was pleased with anything in the defense set-up—giving the press and speakers who were opposed to the New Deal handling of the whole show plenty of material for their attacks on its policies.

FIELD DAY:
For Britain

As the Germans, led by Hitler in person, turned their backs on England, the British were having an aerial field day, running day and night air raids with minimal losses in men and ships and dealing out terrific blows to Nazi and occupied territory.

But the Britisher in the street was not satisfied. There was a growing demand for invasion of the Nazi-held lands. This spread far beyond the "man in the street" angle when one general suggested that the time had come for "hit and run" attacks on coastal points as a sure method of wrecking the Nazis' entire build-up for an attack on the British isles.

The general, J. F. C. Fuller, said he understood the British had amphibian tanks, and that if they did have them, now was the time to use them in cross-channel invasion attempts.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

TESTING'S under way at Paramount for "For Whom the Bell Tolls"; Charles Laughton, Akim Tamiroff and Oscar Homolka have been considered for the role of "Pablo," but the burning question is—who'll play "Maria"? It calls for beauty, but even more for the ability to act.

We hear that Paulette Goddard heads the list of the girls to be tested; seems as if it would be a superb piece of miscasting if she got the part. Ingrid Berman's our choice—and the author's.

Ginger Rogers has signed for three years more with RKO; she's been there for eight years. She did "Flying Down to Rio" then, and her dancing with Fred Astaire in that little number made them our leading dance team in pictures. She wisely insisted, at last, on acting as well, and worked up to "Kitty Foyle," which she didn't want to do, we hear, but which proved to be her greatest success. She's just finishing "Tom, Dick and Harry" now, and they say around the lot that it's a worthy successor to "Kitty Foyle."

Orson Welles isn't making any announcements about his second picture for RKO Radio—he kept mum about "Citizen Kane" too, remember, and executives were pretty startled when they found out, too late, what it was all about and it looked as if they might have trouble if they released it. Instead of a trouble-maker, they had one of the best pictures of all time on their hands! Welles has admitted that he will write, produce and direct this new picture, and will star in it.

Joseph Pasternack, who guided Deanna Durbin through her successful screen career, has signed a contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; it looks as if he might do for Kathryn Grayson what he did for Deanna.

Hollywood just didn't give a whoop about Victor Mature until he made a highly press-agented appearance in the New York stage success, "Lady in the Dark." He doesn't act much in the play, just looks tall, dark and handsome. Now it's announced that two motion picture companies want him; one, Twentieth Century-Fox, has bought half his contract from Hal Roach and will feature him in two pictures a year. The first will be "Bowery Nightingale," co-starring with Alice Faye.

Victor Mature

Old timers among the movie fans will remember Raymond Hatton; probably they'll also declare that "The Whispering Chorus," in which he starred for De Mille, was one of the best pictures ever made. Well, Hatton is working for his old boss again in "Reap the Wild Wind."

W. S. Van Dyke, the ace director, has been on active duty with the marine corps for the past year. Now he's returned to the Metro lot. And what do you suppose his first assignment will be? "The Female of the Species"—a long cry from the Marines!

Did you happen to hear "Man on the Street" on the "Manhattan at Midnight" radio show about a month ago? Within 24 hours after the sketch was presented five motion picture studios were after it. Paramount won out; Bing Crosby and Mary Martin will co-star. They've just completed "Birth of the Blues," with Carolyn Lee and Brian Donlevy.

People who've heard Bob Hope rave on the radio about Madeleine Carroll have decided that he must know her well enough to get autographed pictures of the blonde star for them. She's on location in the West Indies, so they've been pestering him for the photographs. He doesn't mind; he just got a lot of her pictures, autographed them with his own name, and had them mailed.

ODDS AND ENDS—Wayne Morris got leave from the Navy Department to finish "The Smiling Ghost" for Warner Bros. before he became an ensign . . . NBC is preparing a new series, "Boy Meets Band," for its singer-bandleader, Ted Steele, who used to be an NBC page boy . . . Though Bing Crosby can't read a note of music, the boys in John Scott Trotter's band say he's a swell conductor . . . Metro will push Marsha Hunt up the ladder as a result of her work in "Blossoms in the Dust" . . . Service men who want to and can see Hollywood stars broadcasting should apply to Charles Posner of the United Service Organizations.

Storage is the crux of the problem confronting farmers as country elevators experience difficulty finding outlets for grain carried over from the last harvest.

The Crop Storage Problem

Under normal conditions, wheat and other grain crops flow from the fields of the Northwest to distant markets in so orderly a manner that the producer rarely gives any thought to it.

Availability of adequate storage and transportation, he takes for granted.

The familiar elevators form a huge reservoir into which the flood of grain pours as the harvest begins. Long trains begin scurrying back and forth between these country elevators and the big terminal elevators. Thus the level of grain in the country elevators is kept sufficiently below capacity to accommodate the crops of all producers.

Even in normal times this throws a tremendous peak burden on the railroad. It must have the men to handle the many additional trains, engines to haul them, and cars into which to load the grain. It must have the full co-operation of the grain trade so that cars can be loaded and unloaded promptly, and hurried back for more loads. All of this involves a great deal more than appears on the surface—even in normal times.

But this is not a normal year. Great quantities of grain have been carried over in the country elevators. How much of this can be moved before the harvest begins is problematical. For the terminal elevators too are filled to near capacity. The prospect of their being able to reduce this storage materially before the harvest is none too bright.

★ So far as the Great Northern is concerned, it expects to be able to furnish transportation for all of the grain produced in its territory that has some place to go.

★ It expects, at the same time, to be able to discharge its full obligation to the Nation in furnishing the transportation required by national defense.

★ It expects also to be able to provide transportation for the normal business of its territory.

But it cannot perform these important services unless it has the full co-operation of its patrons. It is essential that cars be loaded promptly and, insofar as possible, to their full capacity, and unloaded promptly at destinations.

Despite the fact that the Great Northern has put 4,000 new 50-ton box cars in service in little more than a year, and will begin getting more cars early this fall on an additional order for 2,000, all cars must be used for transportation purposes, and not tied up for temporary storage.

The Great Northern is placing these facts before the producers of its territory because it believes that it is to the best interest of the individual farmer to look into the local storage situation, and if unable to obtain assurance for the handling of his crop, to make other provisions for caring for it until it can be absorbed in normal trade channels.

All Farmers Must Cooperate

In a last-minute drive to aleviate the acute grain storage problem facing Marshall county farmers, Mr. Kranz, Triple-A county chairman today urged co-operation of all farmers in a statewide program to ease the situation.

Mr. Kranz asked all farmers to "take inventory of storage facilities on their farms and to arrange for additional storage space if present space is inadequate or if it does not meet loan requirements."

"The situation," he continued "is becoming more acute daily, and farmers can do more than any other individual group to aid the situation."

The government has already moved a large portion of stored grain to the eastern seaboard from Minnesota terminal points to ease the situation, but the full cooperation of every Marshall county farmer is needed in order that the local situation does not get out of control, he added.

Although defense priorities have cut availability of steel bins lumber is still plentiful. Farmers can still repair existing buildings suitable for storage or construct new storage facilities, sturdy, stout, but without frills, Mr. Kranz stated.

Pointing out that AAA payments are assignable to construct new granaries or repair old ones, Mr. Kranz explained that the government will advance farmers seven cents per bushel on their 1941 wheat crop under this plan.

"That would pay for about one-half of construction or repair of such space and farmers would have storage facilities which would last over a number of years."

Although the government is doing everything possible to ease the situation, storage is primarily the farmers problem, Mr. Kranz stated, adding that "When elevator and terminal points are filled to capacity and farm storage space is inadequate, farmers may find themselves piling the wheat outside without protection from weather and unable to take advantage of the loan program because they lack proper storage facilities.

"Complete information on storage requirements and suggestions for construction of additional storage space are availabe at the county AAA office, Kranz concluded.

Bergen & McCarthy At Fair

Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy, comedy team of radio and motion pictures whose antics have tickled the funnybone of all America, will appear in person at the Minnesota State Fair the opening Saturday night, August 23, Raymond A. Lee, secretary, announced today.

Arrangement to bring the pair to the Fair for this single appearance were completed after extended negotiations when Mr. Bergen agreed to curtail a badly needed vacation to accept the engagement. It will be the only public appearance of the two this year under stipulations of their radio and motion picture contracts.

Bergan and Charlie McCarthy, whose impish rascality has captured the imagination of the nation, will be supported by a stellar cast of stars from Hollywood and the radio.

Mrs. Gust Peterson, Mrs. G. Sandberg, Mrs. O. B. Johnson, Mrs. Walter Larson, Mrs. Walter Peterson and Mrs. Jim Petersen were entertained at a coffee party at the H. O. Hansen home Monday afternoon.

New Type Highway

Bids for one of Minnesota's first soil-cement stabilized base highways which will be constructed on Highway No. 1 between Alvarado and Oslo in Marshall county, will be received by the Minnesota Highway department id St. Paul on July 25, according to M. J. Hoffman, commissioner.

Grading of the Alvarado-Oslo section of Highway No. 1 was completed last summer after which a light coat of gravel was placed on the road. During the intervening time, the road has sufficiently settled to permit stabilizing the road and getting it in shape for a wearing surface.

The 6.2 miles of stabilizing will call for 12,282 barrels of cement and 87,968 square yards of soil cement base, according to the specifications. This project is one of the first in Minnesota is possibly experimental in nature in an effort to determine its practicability for general use in future years.

Holt Cafe Changed Hands

Mr. and Mrs. Emmanuel Andeen, and daughter Mary Ann, Edmund Andeen and daughter Joyce of Argyle Mrs. Peter Hanson of Portland, Oregon, and Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden and daughter Opal were Sunday dinner guests at the H. O. Hansen home.

Collect Scrap Aluminum

Arrangements for a local campaign to obtain needed material for national defense are being completed by the new Defense Council.

Arrangements for the collection of all possible scrap aluminum from homes and business places here and in other communities throughout the county are being completed under direction of Nels M. Engen of Warren who has been appointed chairman of the Civilian Defense Council for this county by Governor Stassen.

The collection of scrap aluminum is the first of many important activities to be undertaken by the local civilian defense councils now being set up throughout the state. Dates set for the campaign are from July 21 to July 29.

Instructions and suggestions for the campaign, just received from Ernest L. Olrich, state defense coordinator, stress the urgent need of the government for aluminum and ask for the cooperation of all citizens in assembling as much of this vital defense material as possible.

"The nation needs aluminum for airplanes and other items in its defense program more rapidly than existing facilities can produce it", Mr. Olrich pointed out. "The people can help very much in this emergency by donating all the aluminum ware they can spare from their homes or business places without being replaced. If a housewife has other types of utensils she can use in place of her aluminum ware, she should not give away anything that would require her to purchase new utensils".

House to house campaigns are being organized in most counties, with volunteer workers and various civic groups participating and state defense officials are looking for a large return.

Collections here will be made by the local Boy Scout Troop.

Mr. and Mrs. Hilmer Moberg, Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Johnson and Gloria, Mrs. Geo. Moberg, Mrs. Melvin Leiran, Mrs. Lars Ring, Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig, Sagstuen, Mrs. Oscar Bottem and Mrs. Hartley Peterson made a trip to Warroad on Sunday to look for blueberries.

Mrs. Paul Saurdiff and daughter spent a few days this week at the Dalos home at Grygla.

Special Achievement Day

A special achievement day for clubs in the eastern part of Marshall County will be held on Friday afternoon, July 25, at Middle River. The exhibits are due at one p. m. The following clubs are planning to exhibit their stock and home economics projects at this event: Viking, Carlsen's 4H, Woodside, Lincoln, and Randeen Ridge. This achievement day is being backed by the Middle River Commercial Club who are awarding the premiums at the event. The winners at this achievement day will be helped with their transportation to the achievement day at Argyle on Thursday, July 31. It is expected to have clothing and canning exhibits, dairy calves, gilts, ewe lambs, and poultry shown at this event. There will also opportunities offered in all the demonstration fields.

This special achievement day at Middle River gives the Club members in that territory a much better chance of showing their projects at achievement day.

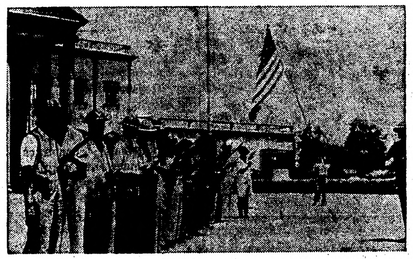
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Landing of U. S. Forces in Iceland Is New Move in Hemisphere Defense; Germany's Campaign Against Russia Gives British Chance for Air Attacks

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



During the Iraq rebellion and war, Americans stationed at the Iraq capital city of Baghdad prepared to defend themselves. As Old Glory is raised in the background men of the American legation staff start training drill with weapons furnished by British military mission commander. But the British won this war before the Americans were called upon to defend themselves.

ICELAND:
Occupied by U. S.

American naval forces have occupied Iceland to supplement and eventually to replace British forces there. This information was given congress by President Roosevelt, who explained that the move was taken "to forestall any pincers movement undertaken by Germany against the Western hemisphere."

The occupation was accomplished with the full permission of the new Iceland republic which had declared its independence from Denmark in May.

ON RUN:
Or Defending?

Crucial questions of the Russo-German war were these:

Did the Nazis actually have the Russians in a wild-disorganized retreat?

Were the Russians, instead, falling back to the Stalin line in good order considering the magnitude of their army?

Was the finish to be another defeat for the defenders as soon as the large cities were taken, as had happened in Norway, Belgium, Holland, France?

Or were the Russians willing, like the Chinese, to move back across vast territory and let space and winter hardships swallow up the Nazi effort?

None of these questions could be answered accurately through the muddle of rival claims, yet there were hints here and there that tended to show trends in attack and defense that might furnish a partial answer.

The onslaught was terrific and news pictures released by the Germans showed the advance across battlefields filled with backgrounds of smoke, flame and destruction. The speed could be counted at about 350 miles in two weeks—the very distance not only pointing to the terrific power of the attack, but also to the difficulty of maintaining a service of supply and "mopping up" over so many thousands of square miles.

So much tended to show the Nazis swift and easy victors. Yet there were other indications, entirely aside from the official and biased communiques which bore on the eventual result and the theory of the Red defense.

There were reports from Nazi-friendly Vichy and Rome. The former reported half the troops of occupation withdrawn to the eastern front; the latter warned against expecting a swift and easy victory.

The reports from Scandinavian sources of the evacuation of civilians from Leningrad and Moscow and Kiev; the speech of Stalin in which he urged the "scorched earth" defense; the plans of Hitler to put Louis Ferdinand on the Russian throne — all indicated that there might be a chance that the Russians were willing to drop back as slowly as might be, cede what cities and territory must be given up, and let the Russian wastes and the impending Russian fall and winter eat up the strength of the attacker.

Few believed that the "Stalin line" would be anything but a stormy way-station for the German advance. But many believed that the "Chinese plan" would not only stem the Hitlerian attack—but eventually defeat it.

ARMY:
Dive Bombing

The army, which has relied on lofty bombers with an efficient bomb-sight, and low-flying attack planes to machine-gun infantry positions, finally decided it was unwise to let the navy do all the dive-bombing and was reported about to get some dive-bombers of its own and start practicing the art.

The navy developed dive-bombing to hit fast-moving ships which were difficult targets for high flying bombers.

BRITAIN:
Her Chance

The British were apparently keenly aware that the preoccupation of the Nazis with the Reds on the East furnished them with their great chance of the war.

Hardly had the attack against Russia been on for a week than the R.A.F. leaders announced mastery of the daytime air over the occupied regions and western Germany.

Hardly did a day pass without large-scale daytime bombing raids, and the British plane losses did not appear great if, as the claim was made, they were using several squadrons of upward of 100 bombers each every day.

There was a silence from German sources about the accomplishments of the raids, but the British, judging from their own losses from German air attacks, figured that their chosen objectives must soon be reduced to hopeless ruins.

They felt that the Coventries on Europe's soil must be numerous. Heavy night attacks followed those by day, with only occasional and very light German reprisals—and all of these under cover of darkness.

On the sea, also, the British seemed to be making some headway against the U-boat menace, and the probability was felt that many submarines must have been diverted to the Baltic, to serve against Russian vessels.

MARSHALL:
And Draftees

Two vital questions on the home front were brought to the fore by General Marshall, chief of staff of the U. S. army:

The keeping of selective service men past their 12-month training period.

The question of sending them beyond the United States and her possessions as "task troops."

The chief of staff made his case plain. The army, he said, was composed of three elements—regulars, national guardsmen, and draftees. These, instead of having been kept separate, were all melted into one military whole, and to remove a part of these, the draftees, at the end of 12 months, would be to create utter confusion in the whole organization, he said.

He asked that the part of the selective service law which limited the time and place of the soldier's service be taken away.

Otherwise, he pointed out, the power of the commander-in-chief would become a meaningless thing, and detachments needed at certain points would be forced to lose their manpower.

But the chief of staffs request, couched in such a way that it seemed an official request of congress by the war department, found considerable opposition, Senator McNary of Oregon, Republican leader, stating that he was not only in opposition to the removal of the geographical restrictions in the draft act, but also was against the removal of the 12-month restriction as well.

It was evident that Marshall's hope for an army of 2,500,000 trained men, able to move wherever the congress and the commander-in-chief deemed expedient, was not going to be won without overcoming serious opposition.

MISCELLANY:

Ottawa: There was evidence of a new political outcry in Canada for some form of draft or selective service to take the place of voluntary enlistment, still in force in the Dominion.

Washington: The White House confirmed the fact that Colonel Donovan, after two unofficial tours of inspection of Europe's war centers, would be given a post of importance in the defense set-up.

Russian Throne?

Above photo is of Prince Louis Ferdinand, grandson of the late Ex-Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, and his wife, Grand Duchess Kyra, daughter of Grand Duke Kyril of Russia. Prince Louis is reported to be Hitler's choice for Czardom over Russia, if and when the Nazi legions complete the conquest of that vast land.

SYRIA:
And Ethiopia

Britain also seemed on the threshold of success in Syria and Ethiopia, and resolved to do something about North Africa, because General Sir Archibald Wavell was relieved, a new commander, General Auchinleck sent out from England, and the whole African and Middle Eastern campaign seemed on the upgrade.

The final crumb of Italian resistance in Ethiopia melted away before the rains and the relentless British follow-up of victory after victory, and another menace to Britain's Red sea and Suez position was removed.

In Africa the situation was no worse than it had been, still apparently a stalemate on the Egyptian border, with the Tobruk defenders still holding out. There were some indications that the British forces, strengthened by U. S. tanks and lend-lease airplanes, were beginning to lay the groundwork of a new advance against Cyrenaica—not only to relieve the Tobruk garrison, but to attempt to win a major victory against the Italo-Nazi forces.

As to Syria, there were reports of an imminent Franco - British peace there, following in the wake of a continuous series of English victories and the steady fall-back of the Vichy defenders around the vital Beirut sector.

All in all, the British seemed to be making what use they could of the Russo-German battle on all their various fronts, and with varying success.

There was a strong demand in London for an invasion attempt on the continent, but the apparent verdict of the powers that seemed to be "thumbs down."

Britain was unwilling to risk further shipments of me nand armaments to the continent until a far more drastic preparatory air bombardment had been carried out.

Britain wanted no more Dunquerques.

LOST:
U. S. Nurses

Added to the Zamzam and the Robin Moor incidents was the torpedoing of the Dutch steamer Maasden, the survivors including a number of U. S. marines, bound for London to do guard duty at the American Embassy, and American nurses, 15 of whom were saved, but two feared lost at sea.

The young women were a group of Red Cross nurses who volunteered to cross the dangerous Atlantic to "man" a Red Cross hospital in London.

The vessel was torpedoed on a Sunday, and nearly a week later a rescue vessel brought all but two of the nurses safely to London.

The Dutch freighter was part of a large convoy bound for Britain, and what the fate of the rest of the convoy was could not be learned, but one of the nurses said:

"The captain of the ship that rescued us looked scared to death when he saw his vessel boarded by a bunch of women.

"The marines were wonderful."

AMERICA:
A Round Trip

The luxury liner America was designated by the state department to make a round trip on the Atlantic from New York to Lisbon and return, carrying deported diplomats both ways.

At Lisbon will be gathered the American consular officials from Italy and Germany, and they will be brought back to New York.

The German and Italian consuls, under a July 15 deadline to quit the country, were to be taken to Lisbon aboard the America with members of their families.

There are 86 of the Americans, and with their families will swell the America's passenger list to a somewhat respectable amount.

Prior to the eastward sailing there were at least two suicides among members of the German consular staff. One was ascribed to ill health, the other to despair at leaving this country after 20 years' residence.

Brown Was Starting Early To Get Along With the Cook

The bus was starting in the midst of a torrent of rain, when the conductor put his head inside and inquired: "Will any gentleman get out and oblige a lady?"

"She can come inside and sit on my knee, if she likes," said a passenger, jocularly, and, to his great surprise, in bounced a buxom woman, who forthwith appropriated the offered knee.

After a time the man, Brown, by name, got into conversation with his burden, and asked her where she was going. On hearing her destination, he exclaimed, "Why, that's my house!"

"Well, then," replied the woman, blushing, "I'm your new cook."

Record Pour

A 100-ton glass furnace in a Detroit plant recently set a world's record by pouring, without interruption, a melt that weighed 58,486 tons, reports Collier's. This single operation, which requires two years and a day, produced a 51-inch-wide sheet of glass which, if uncut, would be 2,400 miles long.

MAN BEHIND PLOW IN MINNESOTA VITAL TO U. S. DEFENSE

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Minnesota farmers realize that soil fertility is as vital to the defense of America as fighter planes, anti-aircraft batteries and naval strength, an agricultural bulletin points out.

"The man behind the plow is as important as the man behind the gun," the bulletin declares. "The farmer's importance lies just as much in defending his soil against the forces of depletion and exploitation as it does in producing foods.

Good Wheat a Defense Bulwark.

"Minnesota soils have been tilled continuously for more than a century. The reserve of virgin fertility stored in them by nature during the thousands of years before the advent of farming is being rapidly exhausted. Only by replacing these plant foods with commercial fertilizers can the soil's supply of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash be restored."

Storage is the crux of the problem confronting farmers as country elevators experience difficulty finding outlets for grain carried over from the last harvest.

The Crop Storage Problem

Under normal conditions, wheat and other grain crops flow from the fields of the Northwest to distant markets in so orderly a manner that the producer rarely gives any thought to it.

Availability of adequate storage and transportation, he takes for granted.

The familiar elevators form a huge reservoir into which the flood of grain pours as the harvest begins. Long trains begin scurrying back and forth between these country elevators and the big terminal elevators. Thus the level of grain in the country elevators is kept sufficiently below capacity to accommodate the crops of all producers.

Even in normal times this throws a tremendous peak burden on the railroad. It must have the men to handle the many additional trains, engines to haul them, and cars into which to load the grain. It must have the full co-operation of the grain trade so that cars can be loaded and unloaded promptly, and hurried back for more loads. All of this involves a great deal more than appears on the surface—even in normal times.

But this is not a normal year. Great quantities of grain have been carried over in the country elevators. How much of this can be moved before the harvest begins is problematical. For the terminal elevators too are filled to near capacity. The prospect of their being able to reduce this storage materially before the harvest is none too bright.

★ So far as the Great Northern is concerned, it expects to be able to furnish transportation for all of the grain produced in its territory that has some place to go.

★ It expects, at the same time, to be able to discharge its full obligation to the Nation in furnishing the transportation required by national defense.

★ It expects also to be able to provide transportation for the normal business of its territory.

But it cannot perform these important services unless it has the full co-operation of its patrons. It is essential that cars be loaded promptly and, insofar as possible, to their full capacity, and unloaded promptly at destinations.

Despite the fact that the Great Northern has put 4,000 new 50-ton box cars in service in little more than a year, and will begin getting more cars early this fall on an additional order for 2,000, all cars must be used for transportation purposes, and not tied up for temporary storage.

The Great Northern is placing these facts before the producers of its territory because it believes that it is to the best interest of the individual farmer to look into the local storage situation, and if unable to obtain assurance for the handling of his crop, to make other provisions for caring for it until it can be absorbed in normal trade channels.

Orbin Sime Coming Here

From a Wisconsin farm boy, who at the age of twelve, built and played a most unusual instrument without any musical training whatsoever, has emerged a fine musician, the Missionary of Music and Song, Mr. Orbin Sime.

Having traveled 20 years, he has presented over 6,000 concerts in 48 states in Lutheran Churches, in schools and on the radio. In private he has appeared for personalities such as Madam Schumann Heinck, Kirsten Flagstad, and William Dieterle, winner of Academy award in 1937 as director of "The Life of Emile Zola".

This, together with outstanding offers has not swerved him from his purpose of praising God on several unusual instruments through music and song.

Featuring the Theremin, an instrument played without touch, but by waving hands over it, beautiful music pours forth to thrill you. There are no strings, no keys, but it is controlled entirely by the static from his body

The Fork-cello is a one-stringed instrument originated by Mr. Sime and perfected by the late Knute Reindall, famed violin maker and wood carver.

The sixty minute concert will feature the hymns and chorales delightful to all lovers of good music and unique instruments and vocal solos.

Mr. Sime has attained the distinction of being America's Foremost Hymn Thereminst. His programs have always featured many instruments of an unusual nature, and he presents a program full of variety and color.

The entertainment of grand chorales and hymns will linger in your memory for years to come. The presentation will be in both music and song. The singing will be in three different languages, including English, Scandinavian and German.

His concert in the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Monday evening, August 4, is open to everyone. No admission will be charged, but a free will offering will be taken to defray the expense of bringing the artist here.

Advisory Councils Meet

Members of the newly-organized Farm Security Administration Advisory Councils from 12 counties attended a school of instruction at Thief River Falls, last Thursday, July 17.

The members, appointed by Milo G. Flaten, State FSA Director, will advise and assist in the operation of the Farm Security program in Minnesota.

"Councils consist," Flaten said, "of a three-member Rural Rehabilitation Committee, a three member Farm Debt Adjustment Committee, a three-member Tenant Purchase Committee, and three members at large."

At last Thursday's meeting, they discussed problems of tenure, health, credit, soil improvment and other problems in their relation to the low-income farm families.

Speaking at the afternoon session, Milo G. Flaten, State Director, told committeemen, "Nothing is important except as it relates to people and people tied down to land."

Members of the committees were chosen, according to Flaten because of their concern for the welfare of small operators and their interest in the efforts of FSA to help disadvantaged farm families overcome the difficulties which stand in the way of their achieving security on the land and a better standard of living.

FSA makes loans to farmers unable to obtain credit elsewhere for the purpose of chattel goods. Loans are made for five years at five percent interest and are baned on supervised farm plans. In selected counties, the FSA also makes real estate loans to eligible tenants. These loans can be made for periods up to 40 years at three percent interest. Services of the Farm Debt Adjustment Committemen are available to all farmers involved in debt obligations beyond their capacity to pay. Committeemen will aid farm debtors and their creditors in reaching agreements based on ability of the farmer to satisfy his debts.

The councils, which include bankers, farmers, ministers, doctors and others on their membership, will meet frequently.

In additions to FSA committeemen from the twelve counties, county agricultural agents, representatives of the college of agriculture, welfare workers, and the FSA county supervisors attended the school.

Counties represented were Beltrami, Clearwater, Kittson, Koochiehing, Lake of the Woods, Mahnomen, Marhall, Norman, Pennington, Polk, Red Lake and Roseau.

The home of Tom Severson was completely destroyed on Friday when fire of an undetermined origin broke out in the house about noon. Mr. Severson was in Thief River Falls at the time of the fire. He lost all his personal belongings, clothes and furniture.

A Silver Wedding party was given to Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Carlson at their home in Argyle. Those who attended from here were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carlson, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lorentson. Mr. and Mrs. Carlson were Holt residents for several years.

Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden and Opal, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson and Eleanor Peterson spent Sunday at Lake of the Woods at Warroad.

Old Settlers Picnic Sunday

Alvarado will be the point of interest for Marshall county residents Sunday afternoon when the annual joint picnic of the Marshall County Historical Society and Old Settlers association will take place at the Ray Fering farm adjoining the village on the northwest.

The Marshall County Historical Society has adopted a plan for staging the picnic each year in a different community as a method of adding interest in the historical background of the county, said Judge Nels M. Engen, president of the society. This year's picnic is being staged at Alvarado with residents of the community being in complete charge of all arrangements. The first picnic was staged at the Old Mill which has been made a state park.

Families are invited to bring their picnic dinners to the Alvarado picnic grounds, where ample shade and other accommodations will be available.

The picnic program will start at 1:30 p. m. with a half hour concert by the Alvarado High School band.

The Old Settlers association will be in charge of the first section of the afternoon's program with Donald Robertson, Argyle pioneer and president of the association serving as the presiding officer.

The Old Settlers association program will consist of informal talks by pioneer residents, among them being F. E. Dohlgren of Alvarado who came to Marshall county in 1879 with his parents and settled on a farm in Alma township. Special recognitioug will be paid to the early settlers of the county during this section of the program. The annual meeting of the association will also be held at the close of the program.

The Historical Society program at the close of the Old Settlers association meeting will be presided over by Judge Nels M. Engen, president. This program will feature and address by Dr. J. V. Breitweiser dean of the department of education of the University of North Dakota.

A history of the founding of the Bethlehem Lutheran church of Alvarado which is one of the oldest congregations in the county will be given by J. W. Sands.

Rescind WPA Shutdown

Marshall county,s Welfare Board rescinded its previous action requesting suspension of WPA in the county and urged and requested all men employed on WPA to register for private employment with the voluntary employment offices throughout the county, at the monthly meeting held July 10, according to Paul Steen.

"The Welfare Board is vitally concerned with a prospect of a shortage of farm labor in the county," said Steen, "and feels that men on the WPA should follow the regulations and accept private farm employment when offered if working conditions and average wages are equal to the minimum WPA monthly wage."

In rescinding their previous action, the Welfare Board took into consideration if WPA is dropped in entirety in the county it may not pe possible to re-open the projects in the future when private employments tightens.

Farmers needing help should call the Welfare Office and get them of the WPA.

Mrs. H. O. Hanson and daughter Dorothy and Geraldine Larson visited at the Leo Horien home Monday afternoon.

Special Achievement Day

A special achievement day for clubs in the eastern part of Marshall County will be held on Friday afternoon, July 25, at Middle River. The exhibits are due at one p. m. The following clubs are planning to exhibit their stock and home economics projects at this event: Viking, Carlsen's 4H, Woodside, Lincoln, and Randeen Ridge. This achievement day is being backed by the Middle River Commercial Club who are awarding the premiums at the event. The winners at this achievement day will be helped with their transportation to the achievement day at Argyle on Thursday, July 31. It is expected to have clothing and canning exhibits, dairy calves, gilts, ewe lambs, and poultry shown at this event. There will also opportunities offered in all the demonstration fields.

This special achievement day at Middle River gives the Club members in that territory a much better chance of showing their projects at achievement day.

Bennie Tanner of Middle River, V. E. Oakey, J. O. Johnson, Lloyd Gilbertson and Milton Hanson left Wednesday for Oakland, California, to look for work.

Strategic Outposts for U. S. Defense

Placing U. S. troops in Iceland in occupation of strategic Atlantic outposts were taken "in order to forestall any pincers movement undertaken by Germany against the Western hemisphere," according to a statement by President Roosevelt. Above map indicates how this works. (1) Iceland occupation nullifies any Nazi threat from the north and occupation of Trinidad, and British Guiana (2 and 3) take care of the southern jaw of the pincer hinged on Vichy-French Dakar in Africa. Some sources contend taking over of Azores and Cape Verde Islands (shown in large type) would further greatly strengthen hemisphere defense.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

WHEN it was decided that the new Garbo picture would get under way on Friday the thirteenth, the assistant director called the cast together to see if anybody's superstitions would get in the way. Melvyn Douglas said that Friday was a lucky day for him, and the fact that it was the thirteenth would make it so much the better. Ruth Gordon, who gave up a number of summer stock engagements to take this one in pictures, declared that she deliberately walks under ladders, and loves black cats. Roland Young said that he'd bring along one of his china penguins, to break the evil spell of the jinx. As for Miss Garbo, she said nothing—just showed up on time.

With the exception of a few minor weekly cast additions, all the regular roles on the new "Hap Hazard" radio series, the summer replacement for "Fibber McGee and Molly," have been assigned. It stars Ransom Sherman, and features the singing of Edna O'Dell and Billy Mills' orchestra. Nowadays people in radio have begun to take these summer replacement shows seriously. The "Blondie" program started as one three years ago—now it tops all CBS half-hour shows in popularity, according to the latest Crosley report.

Good Listening

Being a good listener is essential to conversation. Some people turn conversation into a debate. While the other person is talking, the debater is not listening, but thinking up something in support of his own opinion. When such a conversation is over, he is more thoroughly convinced that he himself is right.

Origin of Ice Cream

Ice cream is so called because it is ice with cream or milk added, in contrast to the ices of the Middle ages, which were made up merely of ice with fruit flavoring. Creamed ices were not originated in the United States. They were first developed by French chefs, who used the same ingredients we use today.

Later the French formula for ice cream was taken to England as a court secret. It came to America with the colonists. It was first served at a presidential banquet during President Jefferson's administration.

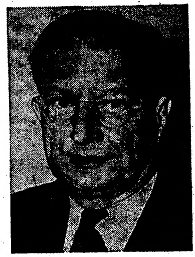
Nazis Claim 'Break Through' Attack Against Soviet Line Is on Schedule; Knox Denies Charge of 'Shooting War' As Debate Continues on U. S. Policy

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



SENATOR WHEELER
From him—a charge.

SECRETARY KNOX
From him—a denial.

(See Below: ICELAND—and Bases.)

ICELAND:
And Bases

The occupation of Iceland by U. S. troops and sailors still was an issue of highest import in Washington, and Secretary Knox found himself much in the center of investigation and censure, as well as the recipient of considerable approval, depending on what quarter one turned to.

A hitherto almost silent cabinet member, Postmaster General Walker, journeyed all the way to Butte, Mont., right into Senator Wheeler's bailiwick to deliver a radio address sharply criticizing the stand of the noninterventionists, of which Wheeler was a forefront leader.

Walker declared that Wheeler and his associates among the isolationists were "talking Hitler's language."

Meantime Secretary Stimson was preparing to launch the congressional campaign in favor of the Reynolds bill to amend the selective service provision restricting the service of the army to the Western hemisphere, and there were indications that the length of service change proposed also was going to meet a hard fight.

Some of the selective service officials themselves were being quoted as saying that they felt a lengthening of the training period of draftees would be a "breach of faith."

Then came Wheeler's charge that the navy already had done some "shooting" on the high seas, and following the session of Secretary Knox before the naval affairs committee there were published, but unverified reports on both sides of the picture.

Some senators, it was said, told friends that it had been admitted that some naval vessels had "dropped depth charges," while other senators said that Secretary Knox and Admiral Stark had made a categorical denial of the whole matter.

Then Senator Taft stepped into the picture, saying that he had information from sources he considered well informed that the United States was already creating bases in Northern Ireland and Scotland.

There were denials and partial confirmation of this, one story purporting to reveal that American citizens were being paid $90 a week and subsistence by the British for working on some sort of a base in Northern Ireland.

This work, however, was not identified positively as the creation of an air, army or naval base.

The whole picture was further confused when Britain announced that instead of leaving Iceland now that Americans were on the ground, as the original plan had been, the British tommies would stay.

This brought further repercussions in Washington, some holding that it would be a menace to our marines if they were on the same island with British soldiers, as the Nazis, bombing the British, might kill marines at the same time.

NAZIS:
Renew Drive

The resistance of the Russians to the fiery Nazi invasion continued to claim chief interest in the news, with the issue still considerably in doubt from a long-range viewpoint, though the Germans, having renewed their blitz technique after a considerable lull, were making important gains.

Competent observers still felt the final issue was whether the Reds could stand the loss of their principal cities and most vital territories on the fighting front, and continue to move backward, force the enemy to spread out, and absorb his power in their country's vastness.

Berlin claimed important breaches of the Stalin line at at least four points, one near Leningrad; two in the central portion of the line and one at the south. In addition, asserted the German communiques, which resumed something of the authoritative note that they had assumed during the Greek and Cretan campaigns, the Russians' defense on the northern sector was generally broken, and the fall of Leningrad was deemed a certainty.

As to Kiev, the Nazi forces were on the threshold of that important Ukrainian city, and while Moscow was still far distant from the Nazi attack, the Germans claimed the capture of Vitebsk, also its occupation, and this brought the invaders' line close to Smolensk, generally regarded as the gateway to Moscow.

What observers wondered chiefly was how much the recent stalling of the German attack had been caused by Russian resistance and how much by the difficulty of long advances over the terrain and the roads the invaders were traversing.

The Russian reports were filled with stories of immense German losses, and these had been partially, at least, verified from such points as Stockholm and Berne. If it was true that the stalling of the Blitzkrieg and the assumption of the offensive by the Russian forces had been caused by determined Red resistance, then there was reason to think that it might be accomplished again.

The Russian reports spoke of reinforcements in astronomical figures, one stating that 8,000,000 men were "moving to the front." Few believed that Germany was equipped to handle 8,000,000 prisoners, let alone defeat that number of soldiers—but then there was considerable doubt whether the Reds actually had anything like that number of men in the field.

But if even a considerable part of such an army was maneuvering into a position of resistance, observers felt it was still too early to predict a certain and smashing German victory.

SYRIA:
Points 4, 5, 6

It was almost coincidental with the halting of hostilities in Syria that the press received any intimation what the British terms would be. There were some 10 points in the British demand, and of these Numbers 4, 5 and 6 were apparently most objectionable to Vichy.

It was quite obvious what Britain was after in these points, which had to do with the handling of both native and French residents who had borne arms in the campaign.

Now these points specified, in one particular, that under the terms of the peace all such persons were to be given their choice of joining with the Free French or going back to France, in the case of French citizens, or, in case of natives, joining with the Free French or being disarmed.

There was another point with regard to the French navy in Syrian waters, ordering that this be surrendered; but the French "beat the gun" on this item, all the French naval vessels, 23 of them, fleeing to the harbor of Alexandretta, under the Turkish flag, where they were promptly interned.

HIGHLIGHTS . . . in the news

Berlin: Columbia Broadcasting System resumed its broadcasts from Berlin, although the Nazi government was told there would be no change in the CBS policy. Germans had halted the broadcasts in protest over the way Elmer Davis had commented on an interview over the air with P. G. Wodehouse, British author interned and then released to do broadcasting.

Washington: Fifty-two D. C. motorists were arrested, charged with having "smoky" exhausts on their cars. It was the opening gun in a campaign by Secretary Ickes, controller of the oil situation, to conserve gasoline. In the national capital motorists were told that they must have their cars adjusted, or their licenses would be suspended as an enforcement measure.

Circumnavigation as Done By Young Naval Officer

A young naval officer whose marks in navigation had not been all that might have been desired, was set to "shooting the sun" to determine the ship's position. The vessel was somewhere west of Penzance. After a while the junior delivered the result of his calculations.

Shortly afterwards, the captain sent for him. "Young man," he said, seriously, "remove your cap. We are now on a hallowed spot." "Beg your pardon, sir?" "Yes, sir," said the captain. "If you have calculated accurately, we are now right smack in the middle of Westminster Abbey."

Storage is the crux of the problem confronting farmers as country elevators experience difficulty finding outlets for grain carried over from the last harvest.

The Crop Storage Problem

Under normal conditions, wheat and other grain crops flow from the fields of the Northwest to distant markets in so orderly a manner that the producer rarely gives any thought to it.

Availability of adequate storage and transportation, he takes for granted.

The familiar elevators form a huge reservoir into which the flood of grain pours as the harvest begins. Long trains begin scurrying back and forth between these country elevators and the big terminal elevators. Thus the level of grain in the country elevators is kept sufficiently below capacity to accommodate the crops of all producers.

Even in normal times this throws a tremendous peak burden on the railroad. It must have the men to handle the many additional trains, engines to haul them, and cars into which to load the grain. It must have the full co-operation of the grain trade so that cars can be loaded and unloaded promptly, and hurried back for more loads. All of this involves a great deal more than appears on the surface—even in normal times.

But this is not a normal year. Great quantities of grain have been carried over in the country elevators. How much of this can be moved before the harvest begins is problematical. For the terminal elevators too are filled to near capacity. The prospect of their being able to reduce this storage materially before the harvest is none too bright.

★ So far as the Great Northern is concerned, it expects to be able to furnish transportation for all of the grain produced in its territory that has some place to go.

★ It expects, at the same time, to be able to discharge its full obligation to the Nation in furnishing the transportation required by national defense.

★ It expects also to be able to provide transportation for the normal business of its territory.

But it cannot perform these important services unless it has the full co-operation of its patrons. It is essential that cars be loaded promptly and, insofar as possible, to their full capacity, and unloaded promptly at destinations.

Despite the fact that the Great Northern has put 4,000 new 50-ton box cars in service in little more than a year, and will begin getting more cars early this fall on an additional order for 2,000, all cars must be used for transportation purposes, and not tied up for temporary storage.

The Great Northern is placing these facts before the producers of its territory because it believes that it is to the best interest of the individual farmer to look into the local storage situation, and if unable to obtain assurance for the handling of his crop, to make other provisions for caring for it until it can be absorbed in normal trade channels.

Orbin Sime Coming Here

From a Wisconsin farm boy, who at the age of twelve, built and played a most unusual instrument without any musical training whatsoever, has emerged a fine musician, the Missionary of Music and Song, Mr. Orbin Sime.

Having traveled 20 years, he has presented over 6,000 concerts in 42 states in Lutheran Churches, in schools and on the radio. In private he has appeared for personalities such as Madam Schumann Heinek, Kirsten Flagstad, and William Dieterle, winner of Academy award in 1937 as director of "The Life of Emile Zola".

This, together with outstanding offers has not swerved him from his purpose of praising God on several unusual instruments through music and song.

Featuring the Theremin, an instrument played without touch, but by waving hands over it, beautiful music pours forth to thrill you. There are no strings, no keys, but it is controlled entirely by the static from his body

The Fork-cello is a one-stringed instrument originated by Mr. Sime and perfected by the late Knute Reindall, famed violin maker and wood carver.

The sixty minute concert will feature the hymns and chorales delightful to all lovers of good music and unique instruments and vocal solos.

Boy Scouts At Pike Bay

The local Boy Scout Troop No. 112, Scoutmaster Hartley Peterson and assistant Howard Lorentson left Sunday for their annual week's camping at Pike's Bay on Cass Lake. Mr. and Mrs. Walter Larson and Mr. Peterson took the boys there. Those who went were Dale Lorentson, Oliver Backlund, Harley Engen, Duane Larson, Lawrence Linstad, Jerome Horien, Irvin Larson.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Austin Lindholm on Wednesday, a boy.

Mr. Sime has attained the distinction of being America's Foremost Hymn Theremist. His programs have always featured many instruments of an unusual nature, and he presents a program full of variety and color.

The entertainment of grand chorales and hymns will linger in your memory for years to come. The presentation will be in both music and song. The singing will be in three different languages, including English, Scandinavian and German.

His concert in the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Monday evening, August 4, is open to everyone. No admission will be charged, but a free will offering will be taken to defray the expense of bringing the artist here.

Kranz On Defense Board

In an effort to incorporate the work of various federal agricultural agencies with the National defense program, Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard has announced the creation of agricultural defense boards in every state and county in the nation.

Charles W. Stickney, chairman of the Minnesota Triple-A committee, was named chairman of the State Agricultural Defense board, and Charles N. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall county AAA committee, was appointed chairman of the county defense board.

The appointments came as a result of the President's recent action in establishing the Office of Agricultural Defense relations set up because of the increasing amount of defense activity affecting farmers. Because the agriculture department's major defense job involves adjustment of crop supplies and adjustments in production, triple-a officers were chosen for this task.

The state board will be composed of representatives of the Bureau of Agricultural Economics, Farm Security Administration, Soil Conservation Service, Farm Credit Administration, The Forest Service, Surplus Marketing Administration, Agricultural Marketing service, Rural Electrification Administration and the Federal-State Cooperative Extension Service.

All agencies and all employees will be asked to incorporate with their regular responsibilities the emergency responsibilities of defense, it was stated.

County defense boards will be responsible through their chairman to the state board and the state boards responsible to the Secretary of Agriculture.

Death Stalks July Drivers

32 Killed First Half of Month; 1939 Toll Far Surpassed.

Death stalked the highways of Minnesota during the first two weeks in July.

Masking chiefly in the guise of inattentive driving, excessive speed and crowding the center line, it claimed 32 lives on the states highways and streets, chalking up during the first half of the month a grim toll of traffic fatalities which came within four of equaling the "allowable death budget" of the Minnesota Editor's Save 100 lives campaign for the entire month.

Forty-two deaths were recorded during July a year ago, and the traffic safety drive had hoped to reduce this toll to 36 this year. With all hope of such a record shattered, newspaper editors and state and local safety leaders redoubled their efforts during the remaining days of the month in the hope that public cooperation thru safer driving would save at least a few lives during the last two weeks of the month.

Records of the Traffic and the Safety division of the State Highway department disclosed that of the 32 men, women and children killed between July 1 and July 16, only 20 percent were victims of traffic errors outside the three principle divisions—speeding, inattention and driving on the wrong side of the road.

Center-line crowding, or what used to be known as hogging the road, was reflected in an unusually large numbers of extremely severe head on collisions and sideswipe accidents, several of which resulted in multiple deaths and one of which claimed five lives. Speed contributed heavily to the severity of the accidents.

Emergency Grain Storage

In an effort to provide emergency grain storage facilities to all low income farmers and to aid in alleviating the acute grain storage situation, the Farm Security Administration has announced an expansion of their present storage-loan plan, according to H. W. Thelander, Acting County FSA Supervisor.

The new program, designed to aid all farmers unable to secure credit for this purpose elsewhere, will offer loans for construction or repair of storage space up to 3,500 bushels, the announcement said.

As the grain storage situation grows more acute daily, the announcement came in an effort to aid all low-income farmers to finance needed farm storage facilities.

Loans will be availabe to AAA co operators who cannot obtain credit for this purpose from any other sources.

"They will be made," Thelander said, "for construction or repair of storage space which meets minimum requirements of the Commodity Credit Corporation and for storage for grain eligible for CCC loans."

Storage bins constructed or repaired with FSA loans may be located on the farm of the borrower for the anticipated period of the storage.

Interest will be charged at the rate of 5 per cent per annum for all grain storage loans.

Farmers in need of this service were urged by Mr. Thelander to contact their local FSA office immediately.

Rural Credit Head Was Here

Mr. Geo. O. Jones, conservator of the Minnesota Department of Rural Credit, St. Paul and Mr. John Wold, Thief River Falls, District supervison for the department were callers in Holt on Tuesday. Mr. Jones spoke at two meetings in the county. On Monday evening he addressed a meeting at Stephen and Tuesday evening at Grygla. Many farmers attended both meetings.

Mr. Jones told us that Rural Credit department had sold all but three state farm around Holt and that these places will be advertised in the News soon. He also stated the department has since he took over, reduced its holdings from about 4800 farms to less than a thousand now.

The State Highway crew that was here last week re-oiling the hiways thru here from Stiener to Middle River have now completed their job here and are working on the road between Warren and Thief River Falls. They put on a two inch thick top coat of new tarvia here and the road now is in very fine shape.

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Johnson and family motored to Red River on Sunday where they attended the silver wedding of some friends.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

NEW IDEAS
for Home-makers
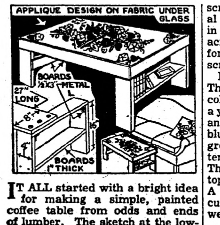
By RUTH WYETH SPEARS



IT ALL started with a bright idea for making a simple, painted coffee table from odds and ends of lumber. The sketch at the lower left gives the dimensions. The two end sections were made first; the top and sides of these being screwed together with 1-inch metal angles. A shelf was then nailed in and a ½ by 3-inch board nailed across the back of it. Two boards for the top of the table were then screwed to the end sections.

Now the needle-lady comes in. The table was to be painted putty color and then waxed. She bought a yard of slightly darker tan sateen and appliqued a design of bright blue and red morning glories and green leaves on it with stems and tendrils in green outline stitch. This was placed over the table top and tacked around the edge. A piece of window glass was then cut to fit and ½ by 3-inch pieces were screwed to the sides.

* * *

NOTE: This graceful morning glory design is so attractive that Mrs. Spears has arranged to furnish transfer patterns to be used in stamping fabric for a table and matching cushion. The pattern is for both cushion and table top. If you are interested in husband and wife projects in homemaking you will be fascinated with the Book 7 in the series of booklets available with these weekly sketches. Book 7 contains directions for more than 30 things to make and a full description of other numbers in the series. The pattern is 15 cents and the booklets are 10 cents each. Order direct from:

TRADE-IN YOUR PRESENT TIRES

Only Firestone TIRES GIVE YOU THESE EXCLUSIVE ADVANTAGES and SAVE YOU MONEY

IT'S just good judgment to BUY THE BEST right now—and that means Firestone tires for tractor, truck or car. You'll get longer mileage and greater dependability through Firestone's patented construction features of a Safety-Lock Gum-Dipped cord body and a wear-resisting Vitamic tread rubber compound —extra features that cost you no more. It's smart to buy now and have the tires when you need them.

All tractor tires are not alike. Only Firestone Ground Grip Tractor Tires have the patented Triple-braced traction bars which provide up to 215 extra inches of traction bar length per tractor. This means a stronger backbone in the "traction zone" where the pulling job is actually done. Continuous traction is assured because the Triple-braced bars cannot bend, slip or tear off and they automatically clean themselves. To get more work out of your tractor, to decrease your gasoline and tire cost, equip now with Firestone Ground Grip Tires.

Star Dust
STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

IT LOOKS as if heroes of the sports world would come into their own on the motion picture screen with a vengeance in the near future. Columbia's already begun production on "Harmon of Michigan," with Tom Harmon himself appearing in the title role. Republic has signed Billy Conn, of the squared circle, to star in one picture. It will be "Kid Tinsel," based on the novel of that name by Octavus Roy Cohen.

Tom Harmon

And David Selznick and Metro want to bring us a picture based on the life of the great Lou Gehrig of the baseball diamond. That one would be a little tougher assignment, of course—imagine finding someone who'd be acceptable as Lou!

*

While we're on the subject of hero portrayal, Gary Cooper does a remarkably good job in "Sergeant York." The picture is one of those that you'll have to see, unless you want to sit by and suffer forever after while your friends tell you how good it was.

*

Most of the sequences of "Glamour Boy" show backstage scenes on the Paramount lot, so if you want to see what the inside of a motion picture studio really looks like, check this Jackie Cooper-Susanna Foster picture as one that you want to be sure to see. For one sequence, in a producer's office, Walter Abel and Jackie Cooper are doing a scene. Framed on the office wall are portraits of Madeleine Carroll, Dorothy Lamour, Claudette Colbert, Mary Martin and Paulette Goddard.

Susanna Foster

"You seem to be nervous, Jackie," Abel commented. "What's the matter?"

"Who wouldn't be nervous doing a scene with all those big stars watching?" Jackie demanded.

*

Deanna Durbin certainly is growing up; she's inherited a story that was originally bought for Margaret Sullavan. It's called "They Live Alone," and the Durbin role is that of a girl reporter who lives in New York. At present she's finishing "Almost an Angel," with Charles Laughton. The new picture postpones three others that were scheduled for her, so Universal must think it's good.

*

"Navy Blue and Gold" was characterized by the nation's critics as one of the finest service films ever made; naval officers have said that it is the most authentic story of Annapolis ever presented on the screen. So Metro is reissuing it, and we'll all have another chance to see James Stewart as he looked when he was a movie actor instead of a soldier.

*

Herbert Marshall has joined the all-star cast of the new Joan Crawford picture, "When Ladies Meet," which already included Greer Garson and Robert Taylor. Even before he joined it, Metro was announcing this as one of the most formidable star combinations of many months.

*

Richard Denning was Anne Shirley's West Pointer husband in "West Point Widow"; then he was Susan Hayward's brother-in-law in "Adam Had Four Sons." Paramount thinks so much of him that he's slated now to be Dorothy Lamour's leading man in "Her Jungle Mate." He's a white youth reared in the African jungle, according to the movie story (in reality he's just a home boy from Los Angeles,) and is brought to America by a circus promoter as a rival to Miss Lamour, who's also been discovered in the wilds.

*

The members of 18 national fraternities voted Ann Sheridan their sweetheart, but she's a lot more excited over the fact that she has been given the most important role in her career. It's in "Whistling in the Dark." Red Skelton, the comedian, has his first starring role in this one.

*

ODDS AND ENDS—Bob Burns will star in "The Wizard of Arkansas"—he'll be a rural sage, fairly bursting with homely wisdom . . . Columbia has acquired world rights to "Five Men," one of the most expensive British pictures ever made —Leslie Howard, Laurence Olivier and Raymond Massey are in the cast . . . For some reason Columbia seems to be impressed by the fact that its Edgar Buchanan used to be dentist; in their publicity he's always referred to as the dentist-actor . . . 20th Century-Fox hopes that "Swamp Water" will give Anne Baxter and Dana Andrews a boost toward stardom . . . Bessie Love returns to acting in the English "Atlantic Ferry."

Foremost among the impostors who have professed an ability to fast indefinitely in order to exhibit themselves as curiosities was Sarah Jacobs of Wales, says Collier's. In 1869, after she and her family had sworn that no food had passed her lips for more than two years, the girl was forced under the surveillance of nurses and died of starvation in nine days. Consequently, her mother and father were convicted of fraud and sent to prison.

Father Looks To Future
From Thief River Falls Times

A farther of three sons told us this week that while he didn't like the idea of our country going to war he thought maybe it would be better for the younger generation if we helped stop Hitler now rather than face the probability of being forced to maintain a big war machine for many years to come if Hitler should take over the rest of the world. We liked what he said, and the way he said it.

FOREIGN NATIONS USE MORE FERTILIZER THAN UNITED STATES

CHICAGO—Nations of Europe use from two and a half to twenty times as much chemical plant food per acre as does the United States for fertilizing crop land and plowable pasture.

"The average for the United States is five pounds per acre," says the report based on international statistics compiled for 1936. "Holland uses 99 pounds of chemical plant food per acre, Belgium 80, and Germany 67. Then come Denmark with 40, Norway with 29, and Sweden with 22 pounds. France uses 21 pounds per acre, Italy 17 and Great Britain 12.

"The rate of consumption in this country is, however, considerably higher than it is in Poland and Hungary which use respectively three and one pounds per acre.

"Soil conservation has been a necessity in Europe for centuries because of the large populations and the relatively small acreage of tillable farm land.

"In the United States millions of acres of farm land have been ruined because of erosion or depletion by cropping. If the nation's greatest resource—the soil—is to be conserved, an ever-increasing program of soil improvement and fertilization must be followed."

Trehus-Folden Wedding

In the presence of the nearest relatives and a few friends, Miss Genevieve Aloris Trehus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Trehus of Spring Grove, Minnesota, became the bride of Mr. Edward Vernon Folden, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Folden of Holt, at the brides home, Wednesday evening at 8:00 o'clock.

The single ring ceremony was read by the grooms brother, Rev. Arvid Folden of Devils Lake at a Candlelight Ceremony. Ferns, Candlelabras, and large baskets of gladioli formed the background for the service.

"At Eventide" was played by the brides aunt Mrs. M. Tollefsrud while guests were assembling, after which Miss Marjorie Barrett accompanied by her twin sister Miss Margaret Barrett both of La Cross, Wisconsin, sang "Because" and "At Dawning". Lohengrens processional was played by Mrs. M. Tollefsrud of Mabel, Minnesota. In closing Misses Margaret and Marjorie Barrett sang "Living for Jesus"

Attending the bride was Miss Harriet Trehus, sister of the bride who acted as maid of honor She was attired in a tourquoise chiffon formal and carried an arm bouquet of peach gladioli. Miss Eunice Elseth of Newfolden, Minnesota, a friend of the bride, acted as bridesmaid. She was attired in a yellow embroidered organdie formal and carried an arm bouquet of cerise gladioli.

Miss Donna Hansen, a neice of the groom, acted as flower girl. She wore a floor length dress of white dotted swiss and carried a basket of cut garden flowers. Master Gayle Trehus, brother of the bride, acted as ring bearer and was dressed in a white suit

The bride was lovely in an off-white Mousoline de soi gown with a full skirt and semi train. Her veil was an off-white sill illusion and fell in a long train from a halo of seeded pearls. She carried a Colonial bouquet of Johanna Hill roses and mist. She entered the room on the arm of her father.

The bridegroom was attended by his brother, Mr. Lawrence Folden of Holt and Mr. Ernest Wick of Spring Grove. The gentlemen wore dark suits and white chrysanthmum boutonniers

A reception was given at the brides home after the ceremony. A beautiful four tier cake topped with a minature bride and groom centered the wedding table.

The newlyweds left on a two weeks trip through various parts of Northern Minnesota and North Dakota. They well make their home in Spring Grove, Minnesota where Mr. Folden is serving a pastorate of the newly organized church.

Aluminum Drive Nets 850 Lbs.

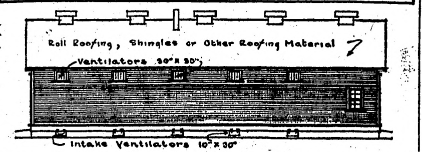
Approximately 850 pounds of scrap aluminum was collected in Marshall county for National Defense during the state-wide campaign which was completed at Warren last week, Judge Nels M. Engen, chairman of Marshall County Civilian Defense committee, has announced, states the Warren Sheaf. The collections were concentrated in the various villages of the county and a Marshall County Highway Department truck brought the aluminum to Warren from where it will be shipped to state headquarters in St. Paul, The drive in the county is considered most successful and is a credit to the generosity of the residents of the county.

Mrs. Julius Borchert and baby of Mentor, Mrs. Johnny Reed and daughters and Mrs. George Gessner and daughter of Thief River Falls, and Mrs. G. Sanoden and Opal visited at the H. O. Hanson home Tnesday afternoon.

EXPERT TELLS HOW TO STORE ONIONS PROPERLY



Roll Roofing, Shingles or Other Roofing Material
Ventilators 30" x 30"
Intake Ventilators 10" x 30"

Whether in June or January, the demand for onions knows no let-up. Many dishes, both humble and aristocratic, owe their tastefulness to this basic "flavor" food.

The grower who would meet this year 'round demand, however, harvests his onions only once a year and must somehow protect them successfully against changing temperatures if he is to get better prices when onions become less plentiful. Storage facilities become increasingly important as farmers recognize that it's good business to hold the finest stock for late winter deliveries.

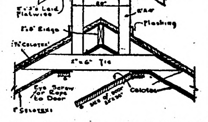
Onions must be well ripened when stored. Plenty of ventilation, coupled with a temperature of from 80 to 90 degrees, should be maintained in the storage house during curing time. The onions should be stored in crates in such a manner as to permit the free circulation of air around them.

The necessary movement of outside air through an onion storage house requires properly spaced ventilators both at the floor and ceiling levels so that when the vent doors are open a current of air can continuously rise up and out.

Experts have a homely method of determining when onions are sufficiently cured in storage. At this stage, they say, onions will "rattle like blocks of wood" when poured from one crate to another.

After the onions have been cured the temperature of the house should be reduced to about 36 to 40 degrees and held there.

To be able to cure and then hold proper temperatures, an onion storage should be constructed along lines suggested by the United States Department of Agriculture. Agricultural engineers state that in addition to adequate ventilation, insulation built into walls and ceiling is necessary to offset climatic temperature changes.



Insulating board is recommended as being the most practical and economical. However, one should take the precaution to select an insulation board that is weather-proofed, moisture resistant and protected from attack by dry rot and termites.

Experts estimate that for a stored crop of 1,500 bushels a house 16 by 36 feet in size will be needed. For a 10,000 bushel storage the house should be 32 by 72 feet.

Structural Insulation Special Plate Release No. 1

Conely Skoglund Fatally Hurt

The people of this community were shocked on Friday of last week to hear of the bad accident that befell Conely Skoglund as he was working at the machine shop of Elmer Engstrom in Thief River Falls. As he was using a large emery wheel for grinding, the wheel became jammed and broke into three pieces with one of the largest parts of it striking Conely in the head in such a way that it almost cut his entire scalp off and also crushed his skull.

He was rushed to the hospital and everything possible done for him but he never regained conciousness before he died five hours after he was hurt.

Funeral services were held here on Monday afternoon from the Nazareth Lutheran church with Rev. Bergee of Middle River officiating.

Conely Skoglund was born in Holt township on August 16, 1915 and passed away August 1, 1941. He spent all his time at his home where he farmed in company with his brother and father. He attended Northwest School at Crookston for a year and a half.

He leaves to mourn his loss his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charley Skoglund and one brother Roger.

Relatives from a distance who attended the funeral were: Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Rosand, Mollie Rosand, Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Rosand, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Rosand all of Minneapolis; A. K. Rosand of Mizpah, Minn., Levan Sundvall of Onamie, Minn., Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Sundvall of Detroit Lakes, Mr. and Mrs. Adolph Martinson of Minneapolis, Mrs. Gust Erickson, Mrs. Alice Anderson and daughter Esther and Martin Nordstrom of Lancaster.

Carlson Funeral Service had charge of all arrangements and interment was made in the Holt cemetery.

Albert Haglund, Harry Engen and Bert Odie made a trip to Baudette on Sunday.

Left For California

Miss Ferne Peterson accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Sandland of Minneapolis and Art Sandland started out for San Francisco, California on Saturday morning. She plans to visit Mr. and Mrs. Verdi Mattson at Staples, Mr. and Mrs. George Sauerbrey and Ruth Saustad at St. Paul and Mr. Irvin Twiet at Cheyenne, Wyo. Miss Peterson will return in a few weeks while the others plan to be employed in California.

The concert held in the Nazareth Lutheran Church on Monday evening was well attended, with every seat in the church filled. Orbin Sime, who gave the concert, played on several rare instruments and also sang solos, and gave readings. He played and sang the beautiful old Lutheran hymns that are so satisfying to the music lover.

Mrs. Fred Peterson motored to Grygla on Monday to assist her sister Mrs. Clarence Doran with her furniture sale. Mrs. Clarence Doran and daughter left Thursday evening for St. Paul to make their future home. Mr. Doran left some time ago and is employed at Swift and Co.

Japanese Movements in Far East Bring Freezing of Assets by U. S. Plus Philippine Troop Mobilization; Nazis Claim Gains on Three Fronts

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

LOS ANGELES, CALIF.—Japanese are shown intently reading "extra" news bulletins posted at a newsstand in Los Angeles' "Little Tokyo" telling of President Roosevelt's order freezing all Japanese assets in the United States.

(For other news of Japan . . . See Below.)

JAPAN:
Shows Hands

Dwarfing even the Russo-German war, with all its action, the Japanese situation because of its closeness to involvement of the United States, stole the world spotlight.

While there were indications that the Japanese were to continue the war with China, perhaps on even a more vigorous basis, and that Nippon was attempting to strengthen its hand on the Russian front, the main move was the military and naval occupation of French Indo-China.

While this had been foreseen as a major Japanese objective, and even regarded as a probable one during and after the period of the change in government in Tokyo, the actual occurrence fell with a sense of considerable shock on the United States.

For once the nation began to feel the hot breath of actual war blowing upon it, and the feeling that "all that" was far, far away began to be a distinctly shaky sort of thing.

For the action taken by this government was swift, drastic and met with complete collaboration by Great Britain, Canada and Australia. It consisted of this, as the first steps:

The freezing of Japanese assets.

The limiting of all trade with Japan under special license.

The mobilization of the troops of the Philippines.

In addition to the British empire's collaboration with the first two plans, Britain's far eastern troops were on the qui vive for action and a request by Thailand for British aid in case her territory was violated was met with instant assent.

In fact, it seemed extremely likely that Britain would move into Thailand in order to create a buffer state that might prevent Japanese attempt to cut the Burma road, which lies only a short distance, relatively speaking, from Hanoi in the northern part of Indo-China.

REACTION:
And Results

The immediate reaction of Japan was what amounted to a "sparring for time." Nippon was caught with several ships tied up at American wharves, automatically, by this government's declaration, prevented from moving.

Some 40 additional ships were en route here, and were hove to at sea. And if the Pan-American republics were to take similar action to the United States they might find it hard to make a port where they would be able to unload. One of the vessels was carrying a $2,500,000 silk cargo and nearly 500 passengers bound for the U. S.

Most serious result, however, was seen as the immediate stoppage of oil exportation to Japan from American sources. Utterly dependent on foreign supplies of petroleum, and for much of her scrap metal as well, Japan was visualized as practically forced to move on the Netherlands East Indies for the former and for supplies of tin as well.

Most observers felt that if and when such a move was made, it would find the United States taking some sort of direct naval action of a preventive nature.

Tokyo, immediately after President Roosevelt's outline of American action with regard to the Indo-Chinese incident, broadcast an appeal to the United States to "reconsider."

The government took immediate retaliatory action, freezing all American, British, Canadian and Australian assets, and Ito, head of the Japanese Board of Information, said:

"If the United States refuses to understand Japan's real intentions and is now bent on taking measures to exert pressure on Japan, the conclusion is inevitable that it is the United States that disturbs the peace. The responsibility rests entirely with that government."

Thus Japan, and this was recognized as the most militant statement against this government that had been made in the history of the relations, many times strained, between the two nations.

COINCIDENCE:

It so happened that the sudden move by Japan and the countermoves by this government were timed exactly to coincide with congressional consideration of the measure to keep draftees, guardsmen and reservists in the armed forces for the duration.

There was no question but that the back of the opposition to this measure was badly bent if not broken by the quick change in the international situation.

NOTICE:
Served on Japs

The reaction of Tokyo, as expressed by Ito, was coupled with a none-too-veiled threat in the newspaper Nichi-Nichi as follows:

"The United States may be confronted with a perilous situation fraught with the danger of war."

The newspaper Asahi said:

"This is no longer an economic problem which could be dealt with economically, but provokes the fundamental determination of the Japanese people."

These words were particularly significant, because they bespoke the nation's inability to face the withdrawal of the exports of the United States and Britain and her dominions, or to replace these missing goods without going to war to get them.

Thus observers saw in the Philippine mobilization order that this government was serving notice on Japan that the United States is getting ready to defend her territory in the South Pacific and her trade lifelines to that part of the world with armed force.

Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur, former chief of staff of the United States army, was called out of retirement to take command of all the far eastern forces. The handsome, socially debonair general, still vigorous for all his years, immediately went to work.

The forces involved total now in the neighborhood of 150,000 trained or partially trained men, and with draft machinery already at work in the islands, and equipment ready to be rushed there, an armed force considerably larger was a possibility.

RUSSIA:
Holding Hard

While it was still practically impossible to make any definite sense out of the German and Russian claims, the consensus was that the Russians were making a surprisingly good fight out of the war.

As time wore on the battles were admittedly severe according to both sides, and the main objectives were clarified as Smolensk, Kiev and Leningrad.

There was nothing definite to indicate that any of these three German claims had actually been carried out.

This lent general credence to the belief that if the Germans were not stalled, they at least were able to make only thin forays past these points, and were probably having a hard time of it.

German dispatches tending to prove this to be so told of "bad roads" and "unfavorable weather," plus "stiff resistance" of scattered units of the Red army as making it difficult to advance.

The Finns were more frank, and stated "there can be no talk of a blitz campaign. We are advancing but have to take one bunker after another."

From time to time there were indications that Moscow was taking the offensive, certainly at some points in the front.

Special Envoy

Harry Hopkins, administrator of the Lease-Lend bill, serving again as President Roosevelt's special envoy to London, is pictured here at the American embassy in London. In a speech broadcast to the British empire, Hopkins promised the British that the "tools" needed for victory are on the way from American production lines.

PAN-AMERICA:
Having Troubles

While the governments of the Pan-American republics were standing firm on their solidarity pledges with the United States covering hemispheric defense, they were beset by many troubles, some of them reportedly generated by a Nazi diplomatic and fifth column offensive ordered from Berlin to occupy America's attention on this side of the Atlantic.

However, the close of hostilities between Peru and Ecuador, in which it was thought that the Nazi-Japanese hand could be seen, finally were halted, and neither the casualties nor the fighting apparently had been heavy.

Bolivia nipped an attempted Nazi coup d'etat in the bud and dealt drastically with the reputed author.

The Herald Tribune came out with a story from Buenos Aires telling of the seizure of some 400 pounds of packages of spy material, messages and the like uncovering a very definite Nazi plot against the government of Argentina.

One German embassy fled the capital by plane, carrying 440 pounds of excess baggage, presumably afraid of having it seized and examined. He finally got it all into safe-deposit vaults in Lima, Peru, after great difficulties en route and after arrival, but there was doubt whether the mysterious baggage would be permitted to remain there.

This doubt was quickly resolved by the Peruvian authorities ordering the whole baggage to be shipped back to Buenos Aires. There it fell into the hands of an investigating committee which found the baggage to contain a radio transmitter and a large number of walnuts, which, when opened contained the plot evidence in the form of messages.

RED:
Defense Technique

Still another described the military technic near the front. The plan was somewhat similar to that of Weygand in his attempted halting of the Germans in France, except that it was implemented by better mechanized equipment.

The Russians give way before the German mechanized advance, which finally, however, meets a "wall of Russian tanks," which at least temporarily halt their advance.

Then the Russian artillery in the rear, already trained on the roads behind the advance German lines, batters away at the supporting columns. When these are sufficiently disrupted to prevent refueling of the tanks and motor-fighting-cars, these have to fall back and the attack is broken up.

The Russians, when this point is reached, military observers were reporting, then attempt to put the "pincers" on the German advance force. This, it was said, was the detail back of the three divisions destroyed, according to Russian claims.

Some let their minds drop back to the Russo-Japanese war of 37 years ago and recalled that the modern Russian army was giving a very different account of itself today against sterner than Japanese opposition.

One of these stated, as a matter of course, that "five Nazi attempts to bomb Moscow had been frustrated in succession," told of seeing two Nazi bombers wrecked 38 and 52 miles west of Moscow, and of watching "peasants calmly tilling their fields" near the wreckage.

INVASION:
By Stratosphere

Huge American-made Boeing "flying fortresses" yet not the largest ships soon to be sent overseas, made British aviation history by participating in the first "stratosphere" raids.

They were sent, with heavy cargoes of bombs, to a height of 33,000 feet, at which point, according to the British, they were practically invisible in the daytime, and apparently inaudible.

Sportlight
by GRANTLAND RICE

THIS may seem premature, but the midsummer date hasn't been early enough to check football gossip on more than a few fronts.

Most of the coaches I've run across are still uncertain about army enlistments and the draft, but there is no uncertainty about what might be one of Minnesota's greatest teams.

Grantland Rice

Bernie Bierman will deplore any such talk, just as any football coach would, but reports from Big Nine camps are all along the same line—"Look out for Minnesota—speed and power—quality and quantity—a great combination in every way."

"Minnesota will be the best football team in the country this fall," a Michigan entry told me. "If any team can go through the season unbeaten it will be Bernie Bierman's outfit, with a brilliant backfield working back of a big, fast line."

Which reminds us that Michigan has lost Tommy Harmon and Evashevski, and a combination of this sort isn't easy to replace. Bo McMillin writes that his Indiana squad has good prospects and that, outside of Minnesota, Big Nine rivals can look for trouble from Ohio State, Wisconsin and Northwestern.

BERNIE BIERMAN

In the East

Conditions in the East are still uncertain until draft requirements are known.

But you might keep an eye on Swede Larson's Navy team when the first kickoff arrives. After considerable pressure the modest Major of Marines finally broke down and confessed that Navy might get along rather nicely before December's snows are reported.

"We have a good-looking squad," Coach Larson said, "losing few men from last fall. With any luck this should be one of the best Navy teams in some time."

Lou Little's Columbia squad should also move up, but there is still uncertainty at Harvard, Yale and Dartmouth.

On a recent trip to Texas we found that Dana Bible's Texas university outlook was the brightest of the Lone Star range. There is the chance that he may lose one or two of his star backs, but if he retains the material that is due back, including Layden and Crain, Bible will have a big Bowl contest on his hands.

SMU to Be Strong

Southern Methodist will again be strong, and so will Rice. Texas A. and M. loses most of her star cast from 1940 and T.C.U. is still looking for another Sammy Baugh or Davey O'Brien. They do not grow on every cottonwood tree.

Along the West coast Stanford still has the ball, with many of her unbeaten veterans ready to pick up where they left off.

Red Sanders, the Vanderbilt director, looks for the usual steamy season in Dixie where Duke, Alabama and Tennessee, plus Tulane, will be well up.

Coach Sanders is looking forward to one of the season's feature battles when Princeton invades Nashville on the first southern trip a Tiger football team ever took. Both Princeton and Vanderbilt will be good, if not outstanding, and the Commodores will go all out to avenge last year's one-point defeat.

Season of Questions

It is doubtful if any football season ever opened with more questions at hand.

"How will Spike Nelson make out at Yale?" "How about Red Blaik at West Point?" "And Tuss McLaughry at Dartmouth?"

"What will Tennessee do with Bob Neyland absent?" Neyland's record is one of the best in football history.

"Will Ohio State's ex-high school coach stop the Buckeye slump of 1940, with so many stars missing?"

"What's the outlook at Notre Dame under new coaching?" My guess is that Notre Dame will be among the best.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.
These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

SEWING CIRCLE

HERE'S one of those very satisfying everyday dresses that's decidedly out of the ordinary in charm and practicality. The lines are really as good as those of your favorite afternoon dress. The skirt sweeps, from a high, small waistline, to a flare that ensures working comfort and looks pretty besides. You can draw the waistline in as slim as you please, by means of the back-tied sash belt—and adjust it to give yourself plenty of leeway for reaching, stretching, sweeping, dusting and so on. This design (No. 1360-B) is simple to make and it really is necessary to a busy day.

Checked gingham, flowered percale, plain-colored chambray or seersucker all look very attractive made up like this, with braid and buttons to match or contrast. You'll enjoy following the pattern which includes a sew chart.

Steel Drilled

A person can at home make a hole in some very hard steel by using an acid. Cover the steel to be drilled with melted beeswax; allow the beeswax to harden, then make a hole in the wax, the size of the hole you wish in the steel. Put a drop of nitric acid in the hole in the beeswax, allow it to stand for an hour, rinse with clear water, apply another drop of the acid, and keep repeating until a hole is eaten through the metal.

Card fo Thanks

We wish to take this means of expressing heartfelt thanks to all who in any way assisted us during our recent bereavement. Especially do we thank the neighbors for their help, Rev. Bergee for his comforting words, those who gave memoriam and floral offerings, the organist and those who sang.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Skoglund,
Roger Skoglund.

Retail seed dealers of Marshall County are directly affected by a new seed act which was passed by the state legislature and goes into effect August 1.

The act requires retail dealers to purchase from the State Department of Agriculture, Dairy and Food, tags which must be attached to containers of seed offered for sale. The tags are available under a sliding scale of costs ranging from 1 cent for containers of less than 15 pounds to 5 cents for sacks 100 to 150 pounds.

The proceeds will be used to defray the cost of a system of statewide checking to insure enforcement of pure seed laws.

C. P. Bull, director of the division of seed and weed control, points out that the new law applies to all agricultural seeds sold in this state except cereals such as wheat, oats, barley, speltz, emmer and buckwheat.

He says further that tags are to be purchased in four classifications:

1. Yellow Tags for seeds of alfalfa, sweet clover, red clover, alsike clover, white clover, lespedezas and other legume seeds of similar size; also timothy, bromus, rye grass, orchard grass, reed canary grass, blue grasses, fescues, red top, rape, bent grass and wheat grass.
2. Green Tags for flax, millets, proso, sorghum, kafir corn, milo maize, mangold, hemp, sudan grass and vetches.
3. Brown Tags for field and canning peas, navy and white beans, and sunflowers.
4. White Tags for any and all mixtures of seeds in the foregoing groups when mixed in the proportion of 5 per cent or more by weight.

Dealers are urged by Mr. Bull to order a supply of tags at once from the state department so that seeds can be properly labeled beginning August 1.

The Weather

The heat has been terrific the past week and the heat has driven the grain so the farmers have to harvest at top speed.

Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Henning and son of Middle River, Mr. and Mrs. C. O. Saastad, Mrs. Clarence Doran and Patty were entertained at a chicken dinner at the Fred Peterson home Tuesday evening in honor of their daughter Ferne.

John O. Berget was the first farmer in this community to thresh new crop this year. He had a fine crop of winter wheat which he threshed out Monday, July 28.

Gust Hillyer, large scale farmer of Excel was the first farmer to bring in new grain here this year. Mr. Hillyer has a very large acreage of crop this year and is hauling his grain in here to the O. T. Ness Elevater.

"Man does not die; he kills himself", wrote a Roman philosopher. Today, overeating, overexertion, overstimulation, worry nervous irritation and lack of relaxation are speeding the killing process.

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor — Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Aug. 15, 1941. — Volume 31, Number 13

Minnesota July Crop Report

The combined acres of all the wheat, corn, oats, barley, rye, flax and potatoes for harvest in Minnesota as of July 1 totaled 14,109,000 acres or two percent less than harvested in 1940. The indicated production, based on July 1 conditions of these crops, would be for a crop of 443,940,000 bushels or about 9 per cent less than the 1940 final production of 489,072,000 bushels.

Weather conditions, especially for corn, flax and potatoes, the rest of the crop season, may either increase or decrease the July total indicated production. There has been rather heavy rainfall this season, especially in certain areas and prospective yields as of July 1 are all below the final for last year, except rye which is the same. On the other hand this has been a wonderful year for hays in Minnesota. For July 1 the indicated production of all tame hay is for a crop of 5,348,000 tons, compared with 4,702,000 tons, the 1940 final production.

Exhibited Yoke of Oxen

Harvey Copp, Excel farmer, created quite an excitement here on Wednesday when he drove into Holt with a Yoke of oxen. Mr. Copp had taken the team in to be weighed and after having that done many people here took pictures of the team and wagon. The oxen weighed 3300 pounds. Mr. Copp is the only farmer we know of in this area who still has oxen on his farm.

Taking Roadside Bird Census

Game Warden, field technicians and sportsmen cooperators took to the field this week on a statewide roadside census that will determine the hunting season recommandations this fall.

Department of Conservation officials announced they expect to have the season data ready for release August 21.

While reports have indicated a good season is in prospect for pheasants, Department technicians have withheld judgement until the nesting season had advanced. The roadside censuses will be conducted these first two weeks in August.

Also scheduled for surveys are the populations of Hungarian partridge, prairie chicken, sharp tailed grouse and quail.

Mrs. Carl Johnson underwent a major operation at the Budd hospital at Roseau on Wednesday. This is the second operation she has had recently.

Brainerd Firm Gets Contract

Contracts were awarded to the P. C. Roth Construction company of Brainerd at a price of $67,538 for the Soil-Cement stabilization program on Highway No. 1 between Alvarado and Oslo, M. J. Hoffman, commissioner of highways, announced in St. Paul last week.

The Marshall county road is one of the first soil-cement road bases being constructed in Minnesota and will be watched with interest by highway engineers throughout the middle west. Work on the project is expected to get under way in a short time.

Highway work in this section of the state is showing considerable progress. Practically the entire route of Highway No. 1 between Warren and Thief River Falls is being given a new treatment of bituminous material by highway department maintenance crews.

Considerable progress is being made on Highway 75 paving operations between Donaldson and Argyle and actual pouring of concrete started last week. The highway 75 improvement program is one of the major highway programs in the state this year.

Canning Demonstration

A canning demonstration will be held in the Holt Schoolhouse Monday, August 18, at 2:00 p. m. This is one of the government's Home Defense Projects intended to show the correct method of canning vegetables. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Who Will Volunteer?

Who will volunteer to do Red Cross work? Our second quota of work will soon be here to be finished by November 15. There will be girls' dresses and layettes to sew, and sweaters and other articles to knit.

Those who will be willing to do some of this work please notify Mrs. A. W. Carlson or leave your name at Carlson's store, stating whether you would like knitting or sewing.

One of the finest cafes on this side of the Twin Cities is found right here in Holt. It is the Holt Cafe operated by Evanstad and Gilchrist. They have just recently gone over the entire interior of the place and it is now all painted and cleaned up. When you are in town go to the Holt Cafe and get acquainted with the new proprietors. They serve the best in eats and drinks.

FAMED BIBLICAL EXHIBIT AT STATE FAIR

Christ's triumphant entry into Jerusalem through the Golden Gate (73), and the famous Temple of Solomon (74) are depicted in this scene from the world famous Holy Land Exhibition which will be presented in the Hall of Religion at the Minnesota State Fair, August 23 to September 1. Acclaimed as one of the outstanding religious creations of the times, the exhibit is the largest animated model in the world. It consists of 57,000 moving parts.

Minnesota In Technicolor

The promotion of "big time" publicity that will carry the story of Minnesota's scenic and industrial attractions to all corners of the globe was announced this week by the State tourist bureau.

Leading the parade of "boost Minnesota" features was the completion last week of a full-length movie travelogue by Mr. James A. Fitzpatrick, famed "travel talk" director for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios of Hollywood.

The film was made with the special cooperation of Victor Johnston, Tourist Bureau Director, and will take viewers on a tour of the State's prize industrial developments and scenic wonders. It will be released in natural color reels next March.

Advises to the Tourist Bureau are that the pictures will be shown in 8,300 theaters and will continue to be run for three years. It is estimated between 50,000,000 and 60,000,000 persons in North America, South America, and such distant points as Australia will see the film.

Taking advantage of clear skies and generally excellent photographic conditions during the recent warm spell, Fitzpatrick's crew of six men, operating one of 20 Technicolor cameras in the world, hustled through the State in eight days taking the film.

Recently Minnesota secured national publicity with a two-page photographic layout in Life magazine. Under the direction of the Tourist Bureau Director and Wallace Kirkland of Chicago LIFE photographer, the pictures featured a Northern Minnesota canoe trip.

"Athlete's foot" is caused by a fungus—similar to yeasts and molds. The fungus must have warmth and moisture for growth. It is contagious and may be spread among the members of a family from bathroom floors and bath mats.

FSA Committee Selected

Selection of the 1941-42 state Farm Security advisory committee, which includes three new members, was announced today by Milo G. Flaten, St. Paul, state director of the Farm Security Administration.

New members, appointed for three years each, are the Right Rev. John H. Peschges of Crookston, bishop of the northwestern Minnesota Catholic diocese; Hervey Richardson of Morris, prominent Stevens county farmer and Irving J. Clinton, of Litchfield, formerly president of the state Guernsey breeders association and now president of the state federation of REA co-operatives.

The succeed Victor E. Lawson, Willmar newspaper editor; M. W. Thatcher, St. Paul, general manager of the Farmers' Union Grain Terminal Association; and the late Frank Murphy, attorney and farm owner of Wheaton.

The advisory committee, Flaten explained, advises with respect to adapting broad national FSA policies to local conditions; makes recommendations as to the future course of the program and assists in coordinating the FSA program with other agricultural programs.

School Opens Here Sept. 2

The local school will open its term on September 2nd. A larger enrollment is expected this year with an increased number from our rural area. From all indications the teaching staff will be the same as last year.

The bus routes will be practically the same as last year with but a few variations so as to accomodate everyone most satisfactorily. Any new families desiring service are asked to contact the superintendent as soon as possible.

There is a possibility that typing will be offered to pupils of the high school that are interested. Those who may be interested are asked to contact the superintendent as soon as possible. The number that can be taken into this course will be limited so that those that indicated their intentions first will have preference.

How To Can Corn

At the University of Montana several methods of preserving corn were tried out — salting, drying and fermenting as well as canning. Experimenters report that salting is an excellent way of preserving sweet corn if you do it properly. It keeps well and has a fine flavor, color and texture. In fact, when tested for flavor and appearance salted corn rated first place.

Here is the recipe recommmended: Place ears of husked corn into boiling water and cook 8 to 10 minutes. Cool the corn, cut it from the cob, weigh it, then pack it in a stone jar using alternate layers of corn and salt. Use one part of salt to 7 parts corn by weight. Place a heavy weighted cover over the corn so the brine will come up to the surface

After 2 or 3 weeks, put the salted corn in clean glass jars and seal tightly.—Eva Blair, nutrition specialist.

A. T. Hagen is rushing the work on his new home in the village and expets to move into it some time this week. He is also very busy completeing the new home for A. W. Carlson.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been fine. The heat wave that held on the past two weeks finally broke on Sunday when this section of the state was visited by a light rain here and much heavier rains at other points. Thief River Falls had a heavy rain and from there south to Fargo the rains were heavy. Much crop was damaged around Ada where they had about six inches of rain.

Most of the heavy rains hit south of here during the early part of last week and Crookston and Fisher also had a bad storm and heavy rains.

Since the rain here Sunday the temperature has been down to normal for this time of the year and harvesting has been going on in full swing here.

Dinner guests at the George Karvonen home on Sunday were: Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Johnson and Jay and Wallace Johnson of Newfolden; Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Karvonen and Grace of Plummer Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Streeter and LeNee, of Mountain Lake, Minn. Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wilmek, Portland, Oregon; Eleanor Peterson, Rev. and Mrs. Hanson and Harold.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Counters Diplomatic Blitzkrieg With World-Wide Economic Warfare Having Trade Control as Objective; Russians Slow Tempo of Nazi Drive

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK CITY.—Here's an example of what the gas "curfew" along the eastern seaboard really means. Murray Jupitor, owner of the gas station, takes off his working clothes when night time comes around. Despite the piled up cars behind him he refused to sell to a customer in keeping with the recommendations of Secretary of Interior Ickes. The sign tells the story . . . "No Gas Till 7 a. m."

DIPLOMACY:

War Bitter

It seemed hard to believe that with 9,000,000 to 11,000,000 human beings bitterly engaged in a death struggle on the Russo-German fronts, that battles of diplomats and economists could stand out in the important news of the day, but such indeed was the case.

Germany was engaged in a well-defined diplomatic blitzkrieg against Pan-American solidarity, and many believed that the entire fabric of Japanese moves in the South Pacific were not only Nazi-inspired, but executed unwillingly by Nippon in obedience to direct orders from Berlin.

The effort obviously seemed to be so to engage the attention of the United States at half a dozen different points that America's entry into the war would be postponed to the last possible moment.

Or, if that entry could not be avoided, the Axis intended that the first attention of the United States should be directed toward the East Indies, thus holding our fleet away from the Atlantic.

There was conceded to be little change that the outbreak of border war between Peru and Ecuador, the attempted Nazi coup in Bolivia, the ditto in Argentina, and the strained relations with Mexico were not part and parcel of a gigantic diplomatic, propaganda and espionage campaign against Pan-American solidarity.

Though it might be said to have failed, it nevertheless engaged our attention for more than a month. Then came Dakar back onto the front pages again, with a Nazi demand upon Vichy which seemed not only aimed at bases in Dakar, but a new effort to enroll the French fleet as a direct German-Italian instrument of warfare.

These were big stakes, and the entire trend and sequence of them almost dwarfed the fighting on the Eastern front, particularly since it continued to be difficult to gain any accurate picture of what was going on in the active fighting.

ECONOMIC:

War Outstanding

Hardly of secondary importance to the diplomatic blitzkrieg launched in the Far East and Pan-America by the Axis was the world-wide economic war engaged in by Pan-America, the United States and Britain against the Axis, now more sternly than ever against Japan.

There were analysts who felt that the outbreak of war between Germany and Russia was directly caused by the success of the economic blockade, plus the fact that Russia either would not or could not trans-ship sufficient needed goods from Japan, nor furnish enough of her own.

Despite the huge losses of the British at sea, it was pointed out that ships sent to the bottom simply meant goods not reaching England—it did not mean that any of this material was reaching Germany.

The economic war, therefore, not only launched the Russo-German war, but also the renewed move by Germany to attempt to corral the French fleet, to replace her surface raiders which were either sunk or bottled up, with which Germany might hope to reopen some trade route now that the Japan-Russia rail method had been halted by the war.

Other observers saw in the success of the economic war against Germany a definite sign that Germany could not win even if she won a complete victory over Russia without one further victory—an actual taking of the British Isles and with it the British fleet.

For as long, they said, as the sea-lanes were open only to British cargoes, and as long as Axis powers were denied the use of the oceans, then the needed materials never could be obtained, even by the utter conquest of the entire continent of Europe.

GASOLINE:

Curfew Starts

The gasoline curfew, ordained by Secretary Ickes at the request and instance of the oil producers and dealers in the eastern United States, was started on short notice, but seemed doomed to failure, and some form of rationing seemed certain to be adopted.

Scarcely anybody except some few oil dealers and some government officials believed that the closing of gas stations from 7 p. m. to 7 a. m. seven days a week would accomplish anything except two things:

It would throw out of their jobs some 100,000 filling station operatives and it would change the gasoline-buying habits of the people of the affected districts.

Trucks, many of them carting goods in the national defense, were to be exempted; also taxicabs, and the buses, most of which today are diesel-operated, nearly all carry 20 hours' supply of fuel, the curfew not hampering their operations whatever.

Ickes expressed hope was that the curfew would make the populace conscious of the shortage, and hence inclined to co-operate in a restricted use of the fuel.

But most believed it would simply mean that those taking long trips would drive by day instead of at night; and that most city dwellers using their cars to and from work and for pleasure driving at night would see to it that they had a full tank at 7 p. m.

RUSSIANS:

Slow Tempo

Most of those who conned the Russo-German war scene believed that the Russians had slowed the German advance down to less than a walk.

A realistic Russian source claimed 1,500,000 German casualties on the long war front since the attack started, and closed with these words: "and if our losses have been greater, what of it?"

That statement gave the picture of a nation of 172,000,000 people pretty well geared for war, willing to fight, and seemingly possessed of huge quantities of arms and ammunition.

It was nearly a repetition of the Chinese answer to Japan's attack, resulting in a stalemate war now well into its fifth year, with the present front little changed in a long time, and Chiang Kai-shek reputedly having a larger organized army on the front than the Japanese by two or three to one.

The Japanese casualties admittedly had been heavy, the Chinese' admittedly much heavier—"but what of it?"

Russian sources were, however, claiming much more than this. They were claiming not only the actual destruction of German division after division; they were asserting that there was a definite Nazi withdrawal in the central, or Smolensk region, made necessary by flanking and "cut-through" movements.

Gloomiest anti-war correspondents, some of them far from the front, pictured the German advance lines within 130 miles of Moscow, but few there were who believed that there was any real capture of territory as close to the capital as that, partly because of the complete failure of the Nazis to bomb Moscow with any effectiveness.

Russia claimed that some of the shot-down bombers showed a gasoline content that told of having come from far-distant bases. A real capture of territory within 130 miles of Moscow would make possible landings and take-offs and sustained flights over the capital.

There was a jubilant character in the Moscow dispatches that could not be overlooked, and the lack of detail from German sources, and the fact that the identical claims were put forth each day concerning the identical territories painted a picture of strong Russian resistance.

Household Hints

Sprinkle talcum powder inside an ice bag or hot water bottle when storing them. The powder helps prevent the bag from sticking together.

• • •

If you heat a lemon thoroughly before squeezing it you will obtain nearly double the ordinary quantity of juice.

• • •

Add a few chopped olives to the drippings left when you broil chops, heat that and then pour it over the chops. This also goes for steaks.

• • •

The red tiles about the fireplace should be rubbed, when they become dull, with cut lemon dipped in salt and then washed with soap and water.

• • •

For a simple luncheon dish, stuff green peppers with creamed tuna or crab, sprinkle grated cheese over the top and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

• • •

Try cooking frankfurters in tomato juice. The flavors blend unusually well.

Big Day At Pelan Park

All of Roseau County is prepared to greet the General of Manitoba and his escort of Scotch Bag Pipers at Pelan Park next Sunday, August 24th. In addition to the Canadians, thousands of visitors from neighboring Counties and the State of North Dakota including a large attendance from Drayton will be welcomed.

The festivities for the day will start at 11:30 a. m. with a concert by the Drayton Band under the direction of Prof. O. J. Pederson. This concert will open a program which will be devoted to honoring the pioneers who opened up Roseau County. In particular, it will comemorate the 50th anniversary of the notorious Roseau County Indian Scare of 1891, when many timid settlers, alarmed by wild rumors spread by irresponsible people, fled in panic down the Sandridge Trail leaving everything behind them.

The story of the Scare will be made doubly interesting by the presence of Tom Lightning and his Squaw. Lightning is a grandson of Oshwaa and a nephew of Maypuck, the two Indian Chiefs who did so much to quiet the fears and allay the panic of the settlers at that time. Both Lightning and his squaw will appear in Indian costume.

Another number on this program will be a piano solo by Dr. Laurence Parker of Warroad. Dr. Parker, who is an old timer in this County and is reported to be 80 years old, will play a patriotic number of his own composition. Senator Wm. Peterson of Lancaster will be the Speaker and at the end of his talk will decorate those old settlers who have just completed their 50th year in Roseau County.

Entertained At Picnic

Mr. and Mrs. Chris A. Saustad, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Saastad and Jerry and Billy Maruska of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. George Saurbrey and Robert of St. Paul, Mrs. Eddie Henning and Jerome of Middle River gathered at the Fred Peterson home on Sunday for a picnic dinner and supper honoring Mr. and Mrs. Saurbrey of St. Paul who are vacationing here.

Government To Loan On Flax

Provisions for making loans on flax is now in the making in Washington and farmers are advised to make provisions for storage so as to benefit from the program, Chas. N. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall County Agricultural Conservation committee, announced.

It is contemplated that the loan will be available on both farm and warehouse-stored flax and the loan rate has been tentatively set at $1.85 a bushel at Minneapolis which would mean from $1.65 to $1.70 at home points in the county, Mr. Kranz stated.

The grain storage situation is becoming more serious and anything that can be done to withhold grain from terminal markets will help alleviate the situation. Farmers are advised to govern their storage facilities accordingly if they wish to take advantage of this new loan provision for flax, said Mr. Kranz.

Further details regarding the program are expected here in a few days and will be announced.

Gates of Minnesota's 10-day 1941 State Fair, the greatest in its 82-year history, will swing open at 8 a. m. Saturday on a breath-taking whirl of fun and education for a million northwest men, women and children.

An army of artisans-the ring of their saws, the staccato clang of their hammers, the swish of their brushes echoing throughout the grounds-are at work this week, transforming the grounds into a veritable fairyland in which an estimated million will find surcease from day-to-day cares from Saturday through Monday, Labor Day, Sept. 1.

The following visited at the Ole Lunke home Sunday evening: Mrs. Fred Larson and Ludvig, Marvin Larson, Raymond Peterson. Mr. and Mrs. Bertil Ness and family. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Engen and family, Delores Larson, Lloyd Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Lunke and baby. Mrs. Fred Larson and Mrs. Lunke have their birthdays on that day.

Mr. and Mrs. Charlie Schreviner, Mrs. Don Haukins from Kansas City, Kansas; Mrs. Wm. Conklin from Sundusky, Mich.; Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Conklin from Minneapolis visited at the A. C. Conklin home last week end.

NEW STARS ENTER STATE FAIR RACES

Can Gus Schrader repeat? This is the question that is agitating auto race fans as time draws near for the world's championship meet on the new super speedway at the Minnesota State Fair, August 23 to September 1.

Schrader, six-time title holder, will defend his crown against the greatest field of pilots ever entered at the fair. The dare-devil Iowan (upper left) will face his stiffest competition from Jimmy Wilburn of Portland, Ore. (upper right), Herschel Buchanan of Shreveport (lower left) and Hal Cole of Los Angeles, all of whom have new, lightning-fast cars.

Four days of racing for $20,000 in purses is expected to attract a field of 60 pilots from all parts of the nation. Race dates: August 23, 27, 30 and 31.

DEFENSE NEEDS ARE STRESSED AT STATE FAIR

Record Premiums Result In Increased Production For National Emergency

Geared to the giant wheel of national defense effort, the Minnesota State Fair, August 23 to September 1, will give forceful evidence of its role as co-ordinator of agriculture in the Northwest.

All-time record premiums of $146,602 have spurred production and resulted in 57,216 individual exhibits valued at $36,000,000. They represent the best efforts of farm, factory and home.

Prize cattle, swine and sheep, outstanding displays of corn, grasses, grains, potatoes and other field crops, unique developments in farm methods and machinery, and new ideas for the home will be on review in this demonstration of economic strength.

Percheron Show Tops

Attention of the draft horse world will be centered on the National Percheron Show, which has been returned to the Fair for the third successive year. Percheron breeders from virtually every state and Canadian province will send entries to the show.

Reassuring answer to the world demand for cheese, butter and milk will be the enlarged exhibits of dairy products representative of Minnesota's $150,000,000 dairy industry.

Augmented premiums and the need for increased production of corn, grains and other field crops will be reflected in the expanded agricultural exhibits.

Mirroring the vast surge of agriculture development, the 90 acres of famed Machinery Hill will buzz with activity as the nation's leading manufacturers put on display the newest types of tractors, baby combines and other farm machinery.

Displays in the Woman's Activities department will reach a new record with the prize baking, canning and needlework of more than 5,000 women, on exhibit.

Record 4-H Show

America's Farm army of tomorrow—the 4-H Club members—will have complete demonstrations and exhibits in their new building. Nearly 4,000 boys and girls will compete.

The bee, wool, school exhibits and varied industries departments will have enlarged displays.

Special dog, puppy and cat shows will be staged August 30, 31 and September 1.

New varieties of plants and vegetables will be on display in the horticultural division.

Many Walleyes In Red Lakes

Experimental use of Upper Red Lake as a gigantic walleyed pike rearing pond moved a step further this week when two employes of the State Bureau of Fisheries used sign language and the Chippewa tongue to get the Red man's knowledge of Kin-oje.

In the Indian language, Kinoje means walleye, the fish that supplies a commercial fishing industry to which the Chippewas have exclusive rights on Red Lake. It is generally conceded that members of the tribe know more about the movements of walleyes in the Red Lakes than any other source.

The investigators, A. L. Nelson of Redby and Hjalmer Swenson of Waskish, sought information on where the fingerling walleyes swarm by the thousands in the shallows of the great lake at short periods every fall. They got the Indians' opinions on whether it would be feasible to trap them.

State Bureau of Fisheries officials believe that if a practical method of trapping the fingerling pike is devised, the stock can be used to replenish hundreds of walleye lakes all over Minnesota. In that manner, the 440 square miles of the Red Lakes would be a huge rearing pond.

Indians reported that at times the swarm of fingerling walleyes is so thick as to cover the bottom shallows. The in-shore movement frequently is accompanied by a heavy sea, with the waves often washing thousands of the little fish up on shore where they perish.

The problem, as reported by Nelson and Swenson, will be to invent a trapping method that will overcome the impossibility of terrain in the region and the heavy action of the waves. The first attempt at harvest is scheduled for September.

Nelson, who is well versed in the Chippewa language, talked to numerous reservation braves and chieftains. The results of his conversations were not made public, but indications were that considerable knowledge of walleye movements was obtained.

Technicians report that if a plan can be devised, it will not harm the lake. The Red Lakes are recognized as one of the greatest "natural" walleye waters in the United States. Because of the nature of the shoreline and the susceptibility of the lake to quick storms, it is angled very little.

Special Gathering

The young people of the Nazareth Luther League will gather in the church parlors on Friday evening. This is a special occasion and all the young people of the community are invited and it is hoped that a large crowd will be present. Lunch will be served by those attending.

Who Will Volunteer?

Who will votunteer to do Red Cross work? Our second quota of work will soon be here to be finished by November 15. There will be girls' dresses and layettes to sew, and sweaters and other articles to knit.

Those who will be willing to do some of this work please notify Mrs. A. W. Carlson or leave your name at Carlson's store, stating whether you would like knitting or sewing.

Hayloft Jamboree At Warren

The WDAY Hayloft Jamboree, popular radio unit from the Fargo station has been signed to appear in person at the Marshall County Fair Grounds at Warren on Saturday, September 6, under the auspices of the Marshall County Agricultural association.

Directors of the Fair association are sponsoring the appearance of the popular radio unit as a means to help reduce the present indebtedness, said Mr. R. B. Taralseth, president. The Hayloft Jamboree gives its program over WDAY every Thursday night and thousands of listeners applaud its weekly presentations.

This will mark the first appearance of the unit here and many people in Northwestern Minnesota will have a chance to see and hear their favorite radio stars. Included in the cast will be the Texas Ranger, Ole Anderson, Oscar Johnson and his Music Makers, the Three Notes, Do Re, Mi, Freckle Face Gertie, Warren, the Three C's, Bill Dean and many others.

The show is scheduled for 9:15 o'clock and will offer a complete variety bill, including dancing, songs, music, and plenty laughs.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson and son Harold visited with friends near Maplebay on Monday.

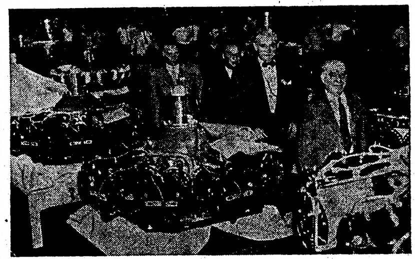
Steel Placed Under Defense Priority; Government Moves to Check Inflation With Installment-Buying Regulations; Tension Grows in Far East Situation

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



Wm. S. Knudsen (2nd from right) OPM director, finds himself in a sea of motors during his inspection of the Curtiss-Wright aircraft plant at Paterson, N. J. The OPM chief on the same day also visited the company's Caldwell, N. J., propeller plant where 300 machinists went out on strike on the day of his inspection.

STETTINIUS:
Issuing Orders

The priorities director of the Office of Production Management, E. R. Stettinius Jr., moving rapidly to get the economic condition of the nation geared into the defense production machine, announced that all steel would be placed under full priority for defense.

Stettinius announced that there was a growing shortage in certain types of steel products, and said that his order covered not only steel but also certain alloys.

It means that the steel companies, already operating to capacity and with growing backlogs of orders, are forced to accept all defense orders in the future even if this means the shelving and deferring of non-defense orders.

The preference given defense orders applies not only to the army and navy, but also to British orders and those of the lend-lease program.

It goes into effect September 1, after which any order for steel will have to be accompanied by a special form which will set forth what purpose the steel is to be used for.

The priorities control over steel rolled the ball a little higher as far as governmental economic action was concerned. Already in August pig iron had been placed on the list, and the recent order concerning the manufacture of silk hosiery, and placing of the entire national output of silk at government and defense disposal sent women chasing pell-mell to department store counters.

Also the Stettinius office was ordering other goods out of production to conserve materials. How far-reaching this was could be noticed in the order outlawing "white-wall" automobile tires.

Stettinius' order stated that 8,000 tons of rubber per year could be saved in this way, and that quantities of zinc, in the form of zinc oxide, also went into the manufacture of these tires.

JAPAN:
'Crisis'

Increasingly "tough" measures against Japan by the British-American front were predicted by London as the crisis grew more acute in the Indo-Chinese area; with the Dutch East Indies, Malaya and the Philippines regarded as equally menaced.

The Japanese demand on Portugal for an air base at Delhi, town on the Portuguese half of the little-known Dutch-Portuguese island of Timor in the Malay archipelago, was the latest move of the Nipponese to raise tension in the South Pacific.

London stated that the granting of such a base would enable the Japanese planes to fly right over the center of the Dutch East Indies, and to throw a loop of military airplanes around the Philippines.

It did not make the tension any easier when it was learned that Nazi Germany was putting pressure on the Portuguese government asking air and submarine bases on Lisbon's colonial territories in return for a Nazi guarantee of Portuguese territorial integrity.

A German base in the Azores, London pointed out, would largely nullify the American aid to Britain on the Atlantic. Also a base on Portuguese territory in West Africa would do the British no good in the Mediterranean battle.

At the same time an article by Chen Chieh, former Chinese ambassador to Berlin, expressed the conviction that stiffer economic pressure on Japan by Britain and the United States might checkmate any of Nippon's demands.

Chieh said that the entire Japanese southern Pacific campaign was the result of prodding by Germany, who had underestimated the courage of the United States, the strength of the Russian army, and while realizing the strength of the Chinese army, thought a bluff would close the Burma road.

BUYING:
Curbing Installments

In an action designed to put a check on inflationary trends in the nation's defense boom, an executive order was issued by President Roosevelt which called on the Federal Reserve system's governors to regulate installment buying.

This order gave the Federal Reserve virtually complete control over consumer credits in the country and will become effective in about a month.

It was indicated by Marriner S. Eccles, Federal Reserve board chairman, that the first steps in the regulation would not be to prohibit installment buying, but merely to control it. This meant that the board might put through an order regulating the size of the down payment to be made and the length of time allowed the consumer for repayment of the credit.

Eccles also said that initial regulation would be issued promptly "following consultation with representatives of the trade and financial institutions affected."

DRAFT:
Extension Fight

The passage by the senate of a bill providing for an 18-month extension of the terms of service of all men in the army and navy did not end the battle by any means, nor did it have the effect of quieting opposition in the house.

First intimation that this was so came from administration circles themselves, with the apparently authorized statement that any extension at all from the house would be acceptable.

When the bill went into the senate, the first goal of the administration leaders was for an unlimited extension. The opposition bloc countered with the Taft bill, calling for six months; later a vote was taken on a year, and the 18-month provision was finally passed, by a fairly strong, though lessened majority.

It was considered significant that on the eve of the first test of strength, house administration leaders were admitting that a "down the line" fight for the senate 18-month extension might risk a complete defeat for the bill.

BATTLE:
Of Propaganda

The rival claims of Russians and Germans to successes on the east front continued to feature the war news to the despair of the reader and observer, and the beclouding of any clear understanding of the action.

Official London, usually ignoring such matters, warned the public to "take the German claims with reserve," but to realize that a serious and dangerous threat to the Black sea port of Odessa was shaping up.

That was one direction in which the Germans were claiming relatively little. They did claim the capture of an army general in the south, and thousands of prisoners, but most of the claims were in the territory closer to Kiev, Smolensk, and Leningrad.

Stories came out of Berlin with an undercurrent of dissatisfaction with conditions, however, one dispatch stating that the Russians, despite huge losses, were still hurling "millions" of fresh troops into the fray with no count of the cost.

BERLIN:
Under 2 Fires

The German capital, since the Russian war started, was placed under two bomb fires, in fact, in recent attacks, people could not tell whether the bombing planes were coming from the east or the west.

Britain, relieved of much of the necessity of protecting her own cities, was hammering away day after day, night after night, when suddenly came reports from Berlin of bombings of the city and territory by Red planes.

DAKAR:
Reported Nazi Move

A relatively strong Nazi expeditionary force, it was learned in Washington, has entered Spanish Morocco by going through Spain and across the straits of Gibraltar, and is poised for an entry into Dakar.

This news was coupled by a Brigham dispatch which declared that France is believed to have concluded a full war alliance with Germany, calling for industrial, colonial and, eventually, the sending of men to bolster the Nazi attack upon Russia.

The Dakar report, impossible of verification, placed the German force as fairly large, including 1,000 mechanized units including tanks, and counting at least two panzer divisions.

They were poised, Washington heard, for simultaneous thrusts at Dakar and at French Morocco. The French commander in this territory is Maxime Weygand.

This, according to Washington sources, will be Germany's answer to the American occupation of Iceland, and will render this nation's position on the war more ticklish than ever, because of the policy statement that any attack on or occupation of Dakar would be regarded as a direct blow at this country's security.

STRIKES:
Break Out Again

With the mounting cost of living, particularly soaring food prices, once more labor trouble began rearing its head, particularly in defense industries.

Twenty-two thousand shipyard workers at Kearny, N. J., went out on strike, and boldly demanded that the United States government take over the yard. There was a smaller strike at a nearby shipyard in Brooklyn.

At Caldwell, N. J., a vital airplane propeller plant was crippled by a strike. In many instances, workers receiving about 72 cents per hour were asking for a raise to $1; other groups were asking a 20-cent-an-hour increase, while one or two of the disputes had a jurisdictional phase.

Oddest strike was that in the propeller plant, where the workers put on their demonstration on the very day when OPM Director Knudsen was due for a visit to watch airplane propellers being rushed into production.

The company finally joined the workers in asking U. S. assistance to end the walkout.

Meanwhile, similar troubles were reported at the Philadelphia Navy yard, where some of the navy's biggest fighting ships are built. This was not a walkout of shipyard employees, but a carpenters' dispute which, according to navy officials, was seriously curtailing the defense effort.

SINKINGS:
Totals

A review of 101 weeks of world war on the high seas revealed that 1,813 vessels have been sent to the bottom, and 14,859 persons have lost their lives at sea.

First vessel to go to the bottom was the Athenia, 13,500 tons, the very day that Britain declared war on Germany. Since that day, the record shows, 6,829,000 tons of shipping have gone to "Davy Jones'" locker.

This includes both sinkings and scuttlings of all merchant and naval shipping. It represents an average of two ships and 21 lives lost each day.

The list also includes 9,217 persons reported missing, about 13 a day, most of whom must be regarded as dead.

Britain has lost almost half of the total ships, 816. Scores of nations have lost ships, many of them non-combatants, such as the United States, Egypt, Sweden, Portugal, Denmark and others.

Two American ships were lost, the City of Rayville, which struck a mine off Australia, and the Robin Moor, torpedoed on a voyage to Africa.

NEW EFFECTIVE HAY FEVER RELIEF

Hay fever, which annually causes more sneezes, more inflamed noses and more red, streaming eyes than any other scourge, may have its final big fling this September, all because a Pennsylvania electrical engineer was served a dish of corn meal mush which was entirely too salty.

The engineer, sneezing, and with all other hay fever manifestations, stopped at a hotel where he was served a dish of mush which he considered sending back as it was much too salty. Finally he ate it, however; the hay fever attack lessened, ultimately ceased! Next day he had three meals, all over-salted, and experienced his most comfortable time in years in the "hay fever season."

His analytical mind quickly grasped the possibility that the saline substance in his food was responsible for his relief.

About this time, Dr. E. E. Selleck, a graduate of Columbia University, met the engineer, made notes, and when he returned to his home, began experiments. Today Dr. Selleck declares he has found a certain means of relief for hay fever and is supported in his contention by other medical experts, and a nationally known chemical manufacturing concern, the Hollings-Smith Company, at Orangeburg, New York, has taken over making the remedy, which is called Nakamo Bell.

Describing the experiments, Dr. Selleck said, "After I was sure I had found a means of quickly relieving hay fever through the chloride group, I tested it in the most practical way I knew. I held a three day clinic, to which many hay fever sufferers responded, from ages ranging from 10 to 60 years. Each person was given two tablets with a little water. Some relief came to all within ten minutes. Reports on these cases during the ensuing weeks showed practically a complete cessation of symptoms."—Adv.

Rail oddities

The hooked-head spike which is used today by railroads throughout the world to fasten steel rails to cross ties, was designed by an American in 1831.

One hundred thousand model railroad hobbyists in the United States collectively own and operate enough miniature trackage to reach from New York to San Antonio, Texas. Their total investment in model trains and tracks is about ten million dollars.

For carrying first-class letters (on which the postage is three cents or more) anywhere in the United States, the railroads receive an average of 1/5 of one cent per letter.

An Open Letter To Drivers

In considering safe speeds for the operation of automobiles, we believe that the following "Open Letter" which was clipped from a recent issue of the "Roselle Spectator" is especially appropriate:

"I saw you barely miss a little boy on a tricycle this afternoon and heard you yell: 'Get the hell out of the way! Don't you know any better than to ride in the street?' He didn't answer, because he hasn't learned to say much yet so I'm going to answer for him:

"No the little boy doesn't know any better than to ride his tricycle in the street. He has been warned not to, but little boys don't always heed warnings. Some adults don't, especially traffic warnings, for example the one limiting the speed of automobiles in city streets.

"I'm going to tell you something about that ittle boy. He has a mother who endured considerable inconvenience, anxiety and suffering to bring him into the world. He has a father who has worked hard and made many scrifices to made him healthy and happy. The supreme purpose of their lives is to have their little boy grow up to be a useful and prosperous man.

"Now stop a minute and think. I know your minutes are valuable; and I know it will be hard for you to think. But try. If you should kill a child, how would you feel facing its parents. What excuse could you possibly offer Him whose Kingdom is made up of little children?

"Children, my hasty friend, were here long before you or your automobile were ever thought of. All the automobiles on earth are not worth the life of one little boy on a tricycle. Any competent garage mechanic can put a car together, however, badly smashed, but nobody on earth can put a child together once its life has been crushed out. We don't know what the little boy may be some day. But we know what we are, and it's unimportant. We could get along without you, but we can't spare a single little boy on this street.

George Malcolm Smith"

One of the news items that was left out of the News last week was that Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Adams of Grand Forks and Mrs. R. A. Holmgren of Glyndon spent the week end visiting relatives here.

Evelyn and Beatrice Larson who have been attending teachers college at Bemidji have now returned home and are getting ready to go out to teach again.

Methods For Good Canning

Modern methods of canning and freezing have not replaced entirely Grandmother's favorite recipes for drying, brining and pickling of vegetables. With extra stress being laid on a full food cellar in each farm home, this is a good year to revive some of the old proved methods, especially if the homemaker is short of canning equipment or does not have access to a pressure cooker.

Inez Hobart, extension nutrition specialist, says that while dried vegetables lose much of their vitamin content, other food values are very well preserved.

Corn lends itself best to drying among the common garden products. When corn is properly dried in the eating stage, it keeps its flavor and provides a nutritious winter food. Miss Hobart suggests steaming the corn for 8 minutes to set the milk. Another way is, to cut the raw corn from the cob and heat in a slow oven until the milk sets. The product can then be dried successfully in three or four hours at 165 to 130 degrees.

The drying of vegetables can be carried out in the sun on a roof, in the Kitchen stove oven, or in a specially prepared drying box with warm dry air circulated freely by an electric fan. The important thing is that there be free circulation of air with all methods and that the product be protected from insects and dirt.

While corn is probably the best among dried foods, mature peas and beans, celery, parsley, chives, pumpkin and squash can also be treated successfully this way. Fruits, though more easily canned than vegetables, can be dried if desireable.

Two U. S. Department of Agriculture bulletins give useful advice on both drying and brining. They are No. 984, "Home Drying of Fruits and Vegetables," and No. 1438, "Making Fermented Pickles." Copies may be had by writing direct to Bulletin Room, University Farm, St. Paul.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hansen at the Mercy Hospital at Thief River Falls on Sunday morning, a boy. This was a stillbirth and a private funeral service was conducted for the infant here at the cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated and Erickson and Lund of Thief River Falls had charge of arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fricker and children returned home Saturday from a two weeks vacation trip along the North Shore of Lake Superior.

TALENTED FOUR IN STATE FAIR REVUE

The Four Franks, direct from Radio City where they rocketed to the limelight with their smart steps and tunes, will have a lead role in State Fair Revue, super grandstand production to be staged nine nights during the Minnesota State Fair, beginning Sunday, August 24, and running through September 1. The Revue, which will include 57 "hit" acts, will be presented on the world's largest outdoor stage.

Give Cows Special Attention

Cows that will freshen during the next six months on Minnesota farms should not be neglected even though other duties make heavy demands on dairy operators, says County Agent R. A. Reierson. The kind of feeding a cow received during the dry period will largely determine her money making abilities during the milking period.

Feeding the dry cow deserves special attention in view of the favorable price outlook for dairy products, and dairymen who manage their herds for full production may benefit during the year ahead.

E. A. Hanson, extension dairyman at University Farm, points out that liberal amounts of corn or barley and oats should be included in the ration for dry cows. Grain feeding should be eased off a week or ten days before freshening to avoid udder trouble.

Condition at calving time is all-important, Hanson says. Cows that have had at least a two-month dry period and are in good flesh will give more milk of higher test than those that have had a short dry period and freshen in thin condition.

According to E. E. Peterson, proffessor of dairy husbandry at University Farm, a cow freshening in good condition will give 25 per cent more milk at the beginning and maintain this over the poor condition cow for the entire milking period.

School Opens Here Sept. 2

The local school will open its term on September 2nd. A larger enrollment is expected this year with an increased number from our rural area. From all indications the teaching staff will be the same as last year.

The bus routes will be practically the same as last year with but a few variations so as to accomodate everyone most satisfactorily. Any new families desiring service are asked to contact the superintendent as soon as possible.

There is a possibility that typing will be offered to pupils of the high school that are interested. Those who may be interested are asked to contact the superintendent as soon as possible. The number that can be taken into this course will be limited so that those that indicated their intentions first will have preference.

Mrs. Carl Johnson Died

The people of this community were saddened on Tuesday forenoon to hear of the death of Mrs. Carl Johnson. She had undergone three major operations at a hospital in Roseau and although no hope was held out for her after the last operation, she still rallied and for a time it looked as if she had been able to stand it all. She failed fast early Tuesday morning from internal hemmorhage and passed away at 9:45.

Funeral services will be conducted from the Free Mission church here this afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius Borchert and baby, Emily Borchert and Mr. and Mrs. L. Borchert were Sunday dinner guests at the G. Sanoden home. Bonita Joan, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julius Borchert, was baptised in the afternoon by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson with Emily Borchert and Opal Sanoden as sponsors.

45th Church Anniversary

The Nazareth Lutheran Church of Holt will commemorate its 45th anniversary on Sunday, September 14th. Efforts are being made to get the names and addresses of former members and confirmants of the congregation living within 100 miles or less, so that cards can be sent out inviting our former friends back for this occasion. This can be done only with the whole-hearted support of the community. So please do yourself, your friends and the congregation a favor by leaving the names and address with Mrs. Ole J. Backlund, Mrs. H. O. Hanson or Rev. T. G. L. Hanson. If you do this, we may see many friendly faces we have not seen for many years.

Open House At Parsonage

Two years ago the work of improving and remodelling the parsonage was begun. Some of the work of this program remained unfinished until this summer when the walls were replastered, painted, the floors sanded and the defective wiring repaired. Now the house is fully reconditioned and the members and friends of the congregation are invited to inspect this fine work on Sunday afternoon from 2 to 5. The people are free to look at everything from the attic to the basement and from the front porch to the back porch. The Ladies Aid will serve lunch in the church parlors during these hours. The members of the local Ladies Aid are requested to bring cake or sandwiches to take care of the large crowd expected. The friends from Silver Creek congregation, near Thief River Falls, and Landstad, near Gatzke are invited and it is expected that many will come from there. Again we wish to emphasize that the public is invited.

Sunday School Opens Here

The Nazareth Lutheran Sunday School will open it's school year in the church parlors on Sunday morning at 9:45. Mrs. A. W. Carlson will serve as superintendent; Mrs. H. O. Hanson, Assistant superintendent; and Mrs. Louis Sagstuen Secretary-Treasurer. The teaching personel will be much the same as last year wish only a few slight changes. It was decided to continue to give awards for perfect attendance with attendance on the opening Sunday being necessary to receive the awards. All indications are for a splendid Sunday School year. The parents of the village and country are urged to send their children. A post-Confirmation class will be organized to serve those who have been confirmed in the recent years.

Miss Marjorie Mattson of Greenbush, who had charge of the intermediate classes at the school here last year, has resigned her position to accept a better one at Baudette. Miss Margaritta Lee of Newfolden has been hired to fill her place on the teaching staff here.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larson and daughter Geraldine returned home Monday evening from a two weeks vacation trip. Among the places they visited were New York, Washington, D. C., Mt. Vernon, Niagara Falls, and Chicago.

Hayloft Jamboree At Warren

The WDAY Hayloft Jamboree, popular radio unit from the Fargo station has been signed to appear in person at the Marshall County Fair Grounds at Warren on Saturday, September 6, under the auspices of the Marshall County Agricultural association.

Directors of the Fair association are sponsoring the appearance of the popular radio unit as a means to help reduce the present indebtedness, said Mr. R. B. Taralseth, president. The Hayloft Jamboree gives its program over WDAY every Thursday night and thousands of listeners applaud its weekly presentations.

This will mark the first appearance of the unit here and many people in Northwestern Minnesota will have a chance to see and hear their favorite radio stars. Included in the cast will be the Texas Ranger, Ole Anderson, Oscar Johnson and his Music Makers, the Three Notes, Do Re, Mi, Freckle Face Gertie, Warren, the Three C's, Bill Dean and many others.

The show is scheduled for 9:15 o'clock and will offer a complete variety bill, including dancing, songs, music, and plenty laughs.

Albert Knutson of Gary, Minn. was a visitor here Friday.

Prolific Insects

Every season the white ant or termite proudly produces a million baby termites to swell the world's ant population. Toads and frogs both have large families, the former in the neighborhood of 6,600 at a time, and the latter half that number.

Snakes are three to four times as prolific as rabbits, for whereas the latter rarely produce more than a dozen baby rabbits at a birth, a snake often produces 40.

The king of the jungle, Lord Lion, is usually the proud father of quads, and his hereditary enemy, the tiger, can boast of the same number.

Quickening Emotions

When men are rightly occupied, their amusement grows out of their work, as the color petals out of a fruitful flower; when they are faithfully helpful and compassionate, all their emotions are steady, deep, perpetual and vivifying to the soul as is the natural pulse to the body.—John Ruskin.

HIGH PRICES
Do Not Go WITH ADVERTISING

Advertising and high prices do not go together at all. They are extremely incompatible to each other. It is only the product which is unadvertised, which has no established market that costs more than you can afford to pay.

Whenever you go into a store and buy an item of advertised merchandise, it doesn't make any difference what, you are getting more for your money—more in quality and service—than you would get if you spent the same amount for something which was not advertised.

Grand Coulee World's Number One Dam

Grand Coulee, biggest dam in the world, is now in action. The Columbia river, which has been dammed, is one of the swiftest and fiercest in the world, and to curb it a barrier has been erected which is three-quarters of a mile long and 500 feet high.

The result will be a lake 151 miles long, the irrigation of 1,200,000 acres of land, and sufficient electric power to supply an area five times the size of England.

Boulder dam, which harnesses the Colorado river, with all its collateral works, was completed in 1935. It is thrown across a terrific gorge called Black Canyon, which is 2,000 feet wide, and the lake behind it is 115 miles long and took three years to fill.

So tremendous is the weight of water in this lake that geologists have suggested that it may cause a bending in the crust of the planet.

Habits of Salmon

A group of Pacific salmon, or king salmon, that inhabits the Northern Pacific waters, dies after the breeding season (July to December) is over, says Pathfinder. These salmon never return to the sea.

Other types of salmon, however, return to the sea after spawning, and remain there until the next breeding season. All salmon live partly in the sea and partly in fresh water, breeding in the latter. They ascend rivers and tributary streams to spawn.

Wasn't Asking for Trouble That Early in the Morning

Two travelers had just met. One was doing most of the talking.

"Yes," he said, "I arrived home one morning after midnight and, as I opened the door, I saw a stranger kissing my wife. I closed the door softly and hurried downstairs. At 1 a. m. I came back. I opened the door softly—and there was the stranger, still kissing my wife. So I went downstairs again. At 1:15—"

"Just a minute," interrupted the other man. "Why did you keep galloping downstairs? Why didn't you walk right into the room?"

"What?" cried the talkative man. "And have my wife catch me coming home at that hour?"

U. S. Voters

The census bureau estimates that there are 80,528,000 American citizens eligible to vote. The total number of persons 21 years of age or over, however, is 84,178,000, but 3,200,000 are aliens and 450,000 maintain their residence in the voteless District of Columbia.

Counted in the voting eligibility figure, but who are non-voters because of illness and because they have forfeited their voting privilege are the 563,321 occupants of our mental institutions, and the 161,000 members of America's prison population.

De-Oiling Sea Gulls

For almost two years, a de-oiling hospital for sea gulls has been operated near Penzance, England. Every time a submarine is sunk off this coast, the explosions kill many fish, thereby attracting flocks of gulls, which become so drenched with the floating oil that they cannot fly. As many as 700 of these birds have been rescued and sent to this "de-oilery" in a single day.

Life Of Mrs. Carl Johnson

Funeral services were conducted from the Free Mission Church here on Friday afternoon for Mrs. Carl O. Johnson who passed away at the Budd hospital at Roseau on Tuesday morning of last week after having three major operations.

Rev. Thv. Myhrer, Newfolden, pastor of the Free Mission church here officiated assisted by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson, pastor of the Nazareth Lutheran church.

The church was filled to overflowing with sorrowing relatives and friends who came to pay their last respect to the deceased.

Mabel Ruth Johnson passed away on Tuesday August 26th at the age of 41 years, 10 months and 26 days.

She was born Sept. 30, 1899 to Mr. and Mrs. Ole A. Christianson in Holt township. She was baptised that same year in the Free Lutheran church at Ringbo.

On October 22, 1920 she was united in marriage to Carl O. Johnson.

She is survived by her husband, six children: Forrest Reuben, La Vernne Ruby, Merle Ellsworth, Marian Grace, Joyce Carmen, Elaine Doris all at home

She also leaves her mother, Mrs. Ole Christenson, three sisters and four brothers: Clarence Christenson, International Falls; Mrs. Nora Stensrud, Thief River Falls; Oscar Christenson, Holt; Rudy Christenson, Holt; Lawrence Christenson, Seward, Alasda; Mrs. Myrtle Johnson, Fargo; Mrs. Delores Dovre, Holt.

She was preceeded in death by her father, one brother and one sister Reuben and Ruby.

Mrs. Johnson was a devoted wife and mother and will be sadly missed by her family. She was in staunch worker in the church and always willing to give a helping hand with all activities in the community.

Carlson Funeral Service had charge of all arrangements.

Indicative of the high esteem in which she was held in the community was the wealth of floral and memoriam offerings.

The pallbearers were: Henry Fosholm, Ingvald Fosholm, Hilmer Davidson, Oliver Davidson, Ingvald Johnson, Elling Waagedahl.

Interment was made in the Holt cemetery.

No Deer Season This Fall

The Department of Conservation this week spiked rumors that there will be a deer hunting season in Minnesota this year.

Officials explained that the law governing deer seasons specifically limits such periods to even numbered years. A former provision empowering the governor to declare open seasons in emergencies was stricken from the statutes by the 1939 legislature.

Surveys by Department technicians indicate the deer population is good throughout the state, generally on a par with the supply before the start of the 1940 season.

Deferred For School Training

Stilaf Anderson told us the other day that he had been deferred from the army so that he could attend another year at the Veterinarian School at Ames, Iowa. All the students taking the same course as he was at the school were deferred. Stilaf has been there two years already and the government decided in his case that they are too short of Veterinarians to let these students go in as only privates now when as next year they can draft them for use in the Army in their line of profession. They can be classified as Junior Veterinarians after three years of school.

Relatives Had Big Picnic

A large group of relatives gathered at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Tony Peterson on Sunday for a picnic dinner in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Peterson and baby of Pontiac, Michigan, who were here for a visit. Those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Peterson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Petman Peterson and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Johnson and family, Mrs. Frank Carlson, Mrs. Gust Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Larson and family, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Ness and family all of Holt, and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Surmo and son, Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. Tom Lardy and son and Ben Ensrnd all of St. Hilaire and Mr. and Mrs. Eddy Henning and son of Middle River.

Upland Game Birds Increased

Upland game bird populations indicate another season of good shooting this fall, detailed investigation by Department of Conservation technicians revealed Saturday, with sharptailed and ruffed grouse more plentiful than in some years.

Open seasons were set Thursday last week by the Department on six upland species, including a 20-day shooting period on ruffed grouse and 17-day limits on pheasants and quail.

Pheasants will not be as numerous this fall as in 1940, the State's record year for that species thus far, said L. A. Parker, biology reseach supervisor, but will approximate the population in 1939, which was considered an excellent pheasant year.

Other upland species will stack up about as follows:

Prairie chicken--slightly fewer than a year ago probably because of the heavy spring rains which flooded nesting grounds.

Sharptailed grouse -- "on the way up", with virtually all observers reporting more than last year.

Ruffed grouse--near the top of a ten-year peak in a cycle which apparently operates independent of hunting harvests.

Hungarian partridge -- on the increase and appearing farther east than previously.

The Armistice Day storm last year, which took a huge toll of human lives, undoubtedly was responsible partly for the decline in pheasant population compared with a year ago, Parker said. In addition to the hundreds frozen to death, many of the birds were found crippled after the storm, indicating they were buffeted about.

Parker said that in estimating pheasant populations from the roadside, census counts were used. Tables of conversion worked out previously were used to translate the roadside figures into the approximate numbers of birds in adjacent larger areas.

To utilize the conversion table, birds along selected lengths of secondary roads in all types of pheasant country are counted in the early morning before the dew leaves the vegetation. The presence of dew tends to keeping the birds in the open.

This tabulation gives them the number of birds per mile. The table is used to convert the totals back into acres per bird.

In the best pheasant counties of southwestern Minnesota, the average last year was one pheasant for every 2 to 4 acres.

New Power Setup For Holt

A lot of people here wondered why the Interstate Power Co. were making some changes here in the village recently. A representative of the company told us that they have now fixed it so they do not need the sub-station here. They cut in the village from the Sagen Transformer northwest of Holt. This substation serves Newfolden, Middle River, Holt and Viking. Also on the new set-up they come in with 6900 volts direct to the local transformers instead of the old way of 22000 to the substation here and then 2300 volts into the local transformers cutting it to 110 and 120. The new way eliminates one reduction unit. They will also remove their line coming in here to the substation and place it along the State Highway.

45th Church Anniversary

The Nazareth Lutheran Church will commemorate its 45th anniversary on Sunday, Sept. 14th at its annual Mission and Harvest Festival. It is hoped that many former friends and members of the congregation from a distance will return and renew former friendships and acquaintances.

The local pastor will preach in the morning at which time there will be a mission offering received. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, the newly elected president of the Northern Minnesota District will deliver the festival address in the afternoon. The Luther League will render a program in the evening at which time movies of the Billings Luther League convention will be shown.

The Ladies Aid will serve dinner at noon consisting of the following menu:

Swiss Steak
Riced potatoes Brown gravy
Buttered Carrots and Peas
Romme Grot
Sliced tomatoes and cucumbers
Pickles Jelly Bread & Butter
Coffee and Apple Pie or Cake

More detailed announcements will appear in next week's issue.

Hayloft Jamboree At Warren

The WDAY Hayloft Jamboree, popular radio unit from the Fargo station has been signed to appear in person at the Marshall County Fair Grounds at Warren on Saturday, September 6, under the auspices of the Marshall County Agricultural association.

Directors of the Fair association are sponsoring the appearance of the popular radio unit as a means to help reduce the present indebtedness, said Mr. R. B. Taralseth, president. The Hayloft Jamboree gives its program over WDAY every Thursday night and thousands of listeners applaud its weekly presentations.

This will mark the first appearance of the unit here and many people in Northwestern Minnesota will have a chance to see and hear their favorite radio stars. Included in the cast will be the Texas Ranger, Ole Anderson, Oscar Johnson and his Music Makers, the Three Notes, Do Re, Mi, Freckle Face Gertie, Warren, the Three C's, Bill Dean and many others.

The show is scheduled for 9:15 o'clock and will offer a complete variety bill, including dancing, songs, music, and plenty laughs.

Mrs. J. Reed and children visited relatives here this week.

Pay Your Bills With Checks

Having a Checking Account is one of the most convenient ways we know of for handling money. It's safe, too, because you don't have to carry a lot of cash around with you. It costs so very little to maintain a checking account that it's very foolish to do without it any longer. Stop in today and let us give you full details about a personal checking account for yourself. There is no obligation, of course.

JUST JESTING

No Wonder

"My father lost money on everything my brother makes."

"What does your brother make?"

"Mistakes."

Why Tell It?

It was a very wet night when Jones knocked at the door of his friend Watts.

"Hallo!" exclaimed Watts. "I'm glad to see you. Come in!"

"I don't think I dare," Jones protested. "My feet are very dirty."

"That doesn't matter. Just keep your boots on."

If you don't strike oil in five minutes' talk, you should stop boring.

No Sale

Lawyer—That'll be $10, please.

Client—What for?

"My advice!"

"But I'm not taking it."

SOMETHING ELSE

Pop—So your engagement to that rich deb is off. I thought you said she doted on you?

Son—She did; but her father proved to be an antidote.

While Iron Is Hot

"I hear your new lodger is a very impetuous fellow. Does everything in the heat of the moment."

"Yes, it's his job. He is a blacksmith."

One Too Many

Young Alec was watching a house painter at work. Presently he asked:

"How many coats of paint do you give a door?"

"Two, my boy," was the reply.

"Then if you give it three coats," said the lad brightly, "it would be an over-coat?"

"No, my lad," retorted the painter grimly, "it would be a waste coat."

Circulating

He—The bank has returned that check of your father's.

She—Isn't that fine? What can we buy with it next?

Prelude

Wife—That boy of ours gets more like you every day.

Hubby—What's he been up to now?

Her Secret

"Why do they always call Nature 'she'?"

"Because no one knows how old she is."

New Land Areas

The 1940 census has issued completely revised statistics on the land areas of all states, the first remeasurement of its kind since 1880, reports Collier's. The five largest additions are 1,246 square miles to Texas, 1,151 to California, 1,145 to Maine, 1,058 to Mississippi and 743 to Oregon; while the five largest deductions are 992 square miles from New Mexico, 849 from Minnesota, 599 from Florida, 546 from Idaho and 541 from Wisconsin.

FAMOUS ALL-BRAN MUFFINS. EASY TO MAKE. DELICIOUS!

They really are the most delicious muffins that ever melted a pat of butter! Made with crisp, toasted shreds of KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN, they have a texture and flavor that have made them famous all over America.

KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN MUFFINS

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 tablespoons shortening | ¾ cup milk |
| ¼ cup sugar | 1 cup flour |
| 1 egg | ½ teaspoon salt |
| 1 cup All-Bran | 2½ teaspoons baking powder |

Cream shortening and sugar; add egg and beat well. Stir in All-Bran and milk; let soak until most of moisture is taken up. Sift flour with salt and baking powder; add to first mixture and stir only until flour disappears. Fill greased muffin pans two-thirds full and bake in moderately hot oven (400°F.) about 30 minutes. Yield: 6 large muffins, 3 inches in diameter, or 12 small muffins, 2¼ inches in diameter.

Try these delicious muffins for dinner tonight or for tomorrow morning's breakfast. They're not only good to eat; they're mighty good for you as well. For several of these muffins will add materially to your daily supply of what physicians call "bulk" in the diet, and thus help combat the common kind of constipation that is due to lack of this dietary essential. Eat ALL-BRAN every day (either as a cereal or in muffins), drink plenty of water, and see if you don't forget all about constipation due to lack of "bulk." ALL-BRAN is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of exposure and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feel constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

STAGE ☆ SCREEN ☆ RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

CAREY WILSON, producer of the Hardy Family pictures, was awarded a Master of Arts degree by the Colorado State College of Education recently, in recognition of his "artistic, creative and ethical contributions to the screen and because the Hardy pictures have made an outstanding contribution to clean, wholesome entertainment for the American people."

All of which is pretty impressive. But—right on the heels of all that, the National League of Decency cracked down on "Life Begins for Andy Hardy," the latest of the series, finding it objectionable for children!

—*—

Norma Shearer is back in Hollywood after a visit in New York, preparing for her first film since "Escape." It will be "We Were Dancing," based on a Noel Coward stage success, and Melvyn Douglas will be her romantic partner. He's now occupied with "The Twins," along with Greta Garbo and Constance Bennett—that's the one in which Garbo evidently does practically everything but walk a tight rope.

NORMA SHEARER

Lyle Moraine, who writes songs and works in pictures, was inspired by Bob Hope's "Caught in the Draft" to write "I've Been Drafted, Now I'm Drafting You," which Hope and Miss Lamour sang on the air. Moraine announced the other day on the "Louisiana Purchase" set that part of the title had been in the nature of a prophecy. He's set for a compulsory role in the army.

—*—

Dinah Shore, who sings "Yes My Darling Daughter" so effectively that it made her famous on the air, has had to defer her picture-making plans. She's been re-signed for the new Eddie Cantor program, which means that she'll remain in New York. Cantor is set to stay there; he's returning to the stage in the autumn in a musical comedy entitled "Banjo Eyes."

The Rudy Vallee program now has an impressively large production staff—six script writers and four song writers, to turn out the original music. All of which doesn't keep John Barrymore from ignoring the script and ad libbing occasionally.

—*—

Lana Turner's making it three in a row—three of Hollywood's most popular male stars. She did "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" with Spencer Tracy. Then came "Honky Tonk" with Clark Gable. Her next is "Johnny Eager," an underworld story, with Robert Taylor. That one sounds familiar — ex-convict, soured on the world, and society darling who falls in love with him.

—*—

As was expected, Ellen Drew lost no time after doing location scenes in Nevada for "The Remarkable Andrew" before marrying Sy Bartlett in the same state. Paramount lost no time in putting her into "Prison Widows," a story of the women who wait outside prison gates for their men to return to them. She's being currently seen on the country's screens in "The Parson of Panamint."

—*—

Mildred Coles was heartbroken a while ago when, after a week's shooting in "Scattergood Pulls the Strings," she came down with acute appendicitis and Susan Peters had to take over her role. Now she's happy; she's leading lady in "Scattergood Meets Broadway."

—*—

ODDS AND ENDS—Ann Sheridan will be in two Warner pictures at the same time for the next two months—"The Man Who Came to Dinner" and "King's Row" . . . The Mutual chain will bring five championship boxing bouts to the air this late summer and fall . . . Waite Hoyt never was afraid of anything when he played baseball—but now that he's broadcasting he's afraid of the word "particularly" . . . Betty Harrison, Deanna Durbin's stand-in for five years, will appear on the screen for the first time in Deanna's "It Started With Adam" . . . Tyrone Power won new laurels recently when he returned to the stage at an eastern little theater.

PATTERNS
SEWING CIRCLE

THIS is a dress you'll love for summer wear, because it buttons all the way down the front and may be put on and taken off like a coat. None of this tugging on over the head which you know is a bother on a very hot day. You can make it in fine silk crepes and it will be one of the smartest and most impressive frocks in your entire wardrobe. For this style is dignified by a very pretty collar arrangement — a ruffled edge collar to be worn under the dress revers, so that just the ruffling shows. Send for Pattern No. 1435-B at once, and make it your next new dress.

Make this dress in any pastel or dark colored crepe, or in a pin dot cotton or silk crepe. Then the contrast of a white ruffle around the collar will stand out prettily. If the dress is to be of a printed crepe the ruffle might be of Irish crochet or Valenciennes lace; if it is a plain color the ruffle may be of organdy or net.

• • •

Barbara Bell Pattern No. 1435-B is in sizes 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 36 takes 4⅞ yards 39-inch material, ½ yard organdy to trim. Send your order to:

Christ of the Andes

The year 1902 was a great peace year for the two great "A" and "C" South American republics, Argentina and Chile. Great Britain had successfully mediated a boundary dispute between the two nations which had almost turned the neighbor republics into two armed camps.

To cement the boundary agreement, Chilean and Argentine delegates agreed to a reduction of armaments May 28, 1902. The women of Buenos Aires commemorated these peace pacts by supplying the necessary funds to erect the huge bronze statue of Christ on the Andes frontier between the two republics.

Tobacco tops the gift list with men in the service. They've said so themselves in survey after survey. A gift of a carton of cigarettes or a tin of smoking tobacco is always welcome, and more than welcome the week before pay day. Actual sales records from service stores show the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, the Navy, the Marines, and the Coast Guard is Camel. Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco is another popular favorite. With these sales figures and preferences in mind, local dealers have been featuring Camels by the carton and Prince Albert in the big pound tin as gifts preferred by men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

Standard Time Zones

Officials of the large railroads in the United States met in 1883 to discover some method of establishing a time-system that could be universally adopted by all American railroads. Previously, all roads had used different systems.

The railroad men adopted a system based on the idea that 24 standard meridians should be established 15 degrees apart in longitude, starting from the meridian of Greenwich, England, and extending around the globe. An international conference on standard time, meeting in Washington in 1884, made the same recommendation to the countries represented. Since that time, the four time zones, Eastern, Central, Mountain and Pacific, have been used in this country.

'Miss America of National Defense'

Alma Carroll, 18, above, captured the title of "Miss America of National Defense" awarded during the annual Mardi Gras celebration at Venice, Calif., by the army, navy and marines. Candidates were "drafted" in drawing from goldfish bowl, designating them to represent training camps throughout the U. S. Then enlisted men made their selection. Miss Carroll represented Quantico, Va., marine base.

Local Items

A very large crowd attended the Open House at the parsonage on Sunday afternoon. There were also many from the Silver Creek and Landstad congregations. They all spoke very appreciatively of the remodeling and modernization of the parsonage.

Mr. and Mrs. Rolland Hall of North Chicago visited relatives and friends here last week. They were united in marriage a month ago and were returning home after a honeymoon trip through the Dells of Wisconsin and several other places of interest. Mrs. Hall was formerly Shirley Herien daughter of C. E. Horien. The newlyweds will make their home in North Chicago where the groom has held a position the past five years.

Howard Lorentson left Wednesday for Duluth where he will attend college.

The Weather

Last Thursday we had rain which halted all work for the week end. Friday morning we had another shower and Sunday we had a real soaker. The weather all week has not been the best for threshing. Another big down-pour hit here early on Thursday morning and soaked up this area in general.

Card of Thanks

Set New Attendance Record

A new attendance record of approximately 750,000 was established by the 1941 Minnesota State Fair which closed Labor Day, breaking the former mark of 706,619 made in 1939.

The 1941 Exposition was the most successful in history, says A. A. Derenthal of Wykoff, president. Not only was the attendance gratifying but the exhibits reached an all-time high both in number and quality. The livestock, agricultural and 4-H displays were absolute tops. The Fair's entertainment was most attractive and well received by the crowds that thronged the grounds each day.

All expenses incurred by the 1941 Exposition will be paid and a profit shown, it was stated by Raymond A. Lee, secretary. The exact amount cannot be determined until receipts from all sources can be checked and outstanding bills listed.

National defense was the theme of this year's Fair. In virtually every department special displays emphasized defense needs. The U. S. Army featured machine guns, jeeps and other equipment used in blitz warfare.

The National Percheron show was most successful, according to Ellis A. McFarland of Chicago, secretary of the show which was staged in conjuntion with the Fair.

Sales of machinery and equipment by the leaders in the farm machinery field exceeded $2,000,000, according to D. J. Murphy, supervisor of the show.

Beatrice Eastby and Glenn Lunsetter of Gatzke is visiting at the parsonage this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Sorum and family of Grand Forks spent Sunday here with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Wegge of Thief River Falls visited relatives here Sunday.

A. O. Aspelin and daughter Caroline spent the week end at Grand Rapids, fishing and visiting friends.

HORACE GREELEY ONCE SAID

"Young Man Go West"

You may have to move from the farm you now occupy, but you don't have to "GO WEST". Right in your neighborhood there exists the opportunity Horace Greeley had in mind.

With a modest down payment, you can procure a farm home of your own, on easy terms, at 4% interest, on a 20 year contract, in desirable farming regions in central and northern Minnesota.

Now is the time to select one of these farms and gain the independence you have long dreamed of.

County Included In FSA Setup

Marshall and Pennington Counties have been designated as two of seven counties in which the Farm Security Administration's special real estate program will operate this year, according to word received this week by Mr. Hilding W. Thelander, county supervison, from Mr. Milo G. Flaten, state FSA director.

Special real estate loans are an adaptation of the FSA's "rehabilitation" or chattel goods loans and are designed especially to help farm families in the northern cut-over area of the state. The loans are made to refinance real estate indebtedness and remove liens from farms, including taxes, assessments and amounts due under purchase contracts. In some cases loans are made to refinance the purchase of additional land needed to convert a presently owned tract into a family-size, self-supporting unit, and to clear what land is needed.

The loans proved of such definite value in saving many farmers in the cut-over area from bankruptcy and in re-establishing themselves that U. S. Dept. of Agriculture officials endorsed continuance of the special loan program for another year and doubled the allocation or funds for Minnesota.

Newly designated counties for the expanded program include Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Todd and Wadena. ~~The program is now operat~~ing in 27 counties.

First consideration will be given to applicants, Mr. Thelander said, who are in danger of losing their farms through foreclosure and especially in such cases where there is a possibility of debt adjustment. It has been learned from experience, he explained, that many applicants for these loans are in difficulty because of having contracted for land at a higher price than the production ~~value of their~~ farms would justify.

In approved cases, loans will be made to enable borrowers to refinance their indebtedness, finance the purchase of additional land needed, and in some cases to make minor building improvements and to finance land clearing.

Mr. Thelander cautioned applicants that the loans could not be used to refinance indebtedness to other Federal agencies. He said that loans under the plan bear interest at 3 per cent, will be secured by first mortgages on the land refinanced, and that repayments may be extended over a period of 40 years.

Market Day and Smoker

The business men of Holt met at a special meeting at the school house on Wednesday evening and started the plans for a fall market day and smoker. Nearly every business man was there and took part in the discussion and were put on the committees to work out the plans.

The celebration will be held on Saturday, Oct. 25. The merhants will again give out tickets the same as last year and, will start this next Monday.

L. L. Social Postpond

The Luther League Social will be held on Friday evening, Sept. 19, instead of the regular date. A Scavenger Hunt has been planned by the social committee, so lets all come and have a very special treat.

Register Cars October 1st

A new provision of the motor vehicle registration law provides for this earlies re-registration beginning this year. On January 1 all motor vehicles must carry new plates showing new registrations for the year or be ruled off the streets and highways. There will be no operation under old plates for any reason whatever. To that end, the re-registration tax for 1942, under the new law will become payable October 1 this year. If the owner does not make application for re-registration on or before November 15, he will have to pay an extra fee because of his delay. That extra fee will be 25 cents a day for the first two days and after that will be stepped up to $1.50 by December 1. Seven days after January 1 if the re-registration is not paid, it will be delinquent. After that the law attaches more additional fees for delayed registration. The additional fees for delay after the registration tax becomes delinquent will accrue at the same rate as in former years, 25 cents a day for the first two days of such delay, and 50 cents a month thereafter. These fees will be in addition to the fees for delayed registration that may have accrued before January 1 so that it is possible for the total of the fees for delayed registration to accrue to the amount of $4.00.

There can be no extension of the time for registration without ~~payment of the extra fee, nor~~ for the use of number plates issued for the past year.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been dark and wet with rain falling nearly every day. Wednesday it cleared up and yesterday it was nice sunshine and windy so that things were really drying up a little. It is too bad for the farmers to catch so much of this wet weather at this time when there is lot of threshing left and much crop to be cut.

45th Church Anniversary Sunday

The Nazareth Lutheran Church will commemorate its 45th anniversary on Sunday, Sept. 14th at its annual Mission and Harvest Festival. It is hoped that many former friends and members of the congregation from a distance will return and renew former friendships and acquaintances.

The local pastor will preach in the morning at which time there will be a mission offering received. Rev. R. M. Fjelstad, the newly elected president of the Northern Minnesota District will deliver the festival address in the afternoon. The Luther League will render a program in the evening at which time movies of the Billings Luther League convention will be shown.

The Ladies Aid will serve dinner at noon consisting of the following menu:

Swiss Steak
Riced potatoes Brown gravy
Buttered Carrots and Peas
Romme Grot
Sliced tomatoes and cucumbers
Pickles Jelly Bread & Butter
Coffee and Apple Pie or Cake

The early history of the congregation is obscure. Its historical documents are fragmentary and occasionally contradictory. In piecing together the fragmentary documents, annals and accounts existing of its early history, together with the memories of a few of the early settlers, the following history seems somewhat authentic. Corrections will be gladly received as that will make our historical account more reliable.

As the curtain of history begins to lift, we find that Rev. Peter T. Hillman, who was serving a large field around Crookston, preached occasionally in the field that was to become Nazareth Lutheran Church. This was before 1893. Then came Rev. Ludvig C. Evenson, an itinerant minister who served a very extensive field in the Synod church. Some organization was effected by him on January 6, 1893 and continued through the year 1894. When Rev. I. T. Aastad came to Thief River Falls in 1895, he also took up the work here. Then in January, 1896, the "Nazareth Norwegian Evangelical Lutheran Church" was organized by Rev. Aastad in the home of Reier Reierson. It appears that the organizational work of Rev. Hillman and Rev. Evenson had diminished to a point where it was necessary to reorganize. More than that, the group who met for worship became a congregation in 1896 instead of a preaching place as heretofore.

The parsonage was built in 1896 on the old Dovre, just across the road from Sunnyside School. There was no church. The congregation worshipped in the homes and schoolhouses. It was planned at one time to build a church on the Reierson farm southeast of Holt, where there is to this day a cemetery, but this was changed in favor of Holt when the railroad came here in 1904. Rev. Mathias Flekke was called and took over the duties as the first resident pastor here on August 2, 1896. The first minutes of a congregational meeting in existance was that of January 13, 1897. At this time, the congregation applied to join the "Norwegian Synod."

Rev. Flekke resigned in 1903 and Rev. T. L. Rosholt was called and came the same year. At a decision of the annual meeting in Dec. 13, 1904, it was decided to build the church in 1905 if the congregation could raise $800.00. Rev. Rosholt left in 1905 and Rev. S. T. Palm came the same year. The church was built in 1906 at the cost of $1100.00 and the congregation was in debt only $186.00 at the time of its completion.

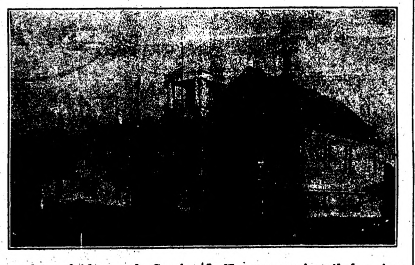
Rev. Palm resigned in 1908 and Rev. M. B. Ordahl was installed as pastor here on August 9, 1908. In 1910. the parsonage was torn down, moved to Holt and rebuilt. In 1919, an addition was built to the church and a full basement constructed. Rev. Ordahl resigned and preached his farewell sermon on Dec. 25, 1926. Rev. S. L. Tallakson, then of Thief River Falls served temporarily in 1927. Rev. L. M. Redal came in 1928 and resigned on January 10, 1936. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson was installed on August 16, 1936 and has served here since that time.

In 1939 a new basement was constructed under the parsonage, a new heating plant installed and some remodelling made.

Let us bear in mind that in the fabric of the history of the congregation, there is entwined the work of the Ladies Aid, the Dorcas, the Luther League, the Sunday School, the Men's Club and other organizations that may have flourished from time to time

Scanning the pages of the congregational history, we read between the lines how the church was built with sweat, toil and sacrifices under trying financial circumstances. Today, we are not called upon to build but to uphold. Written by—

Rev. T. C. L. Hanson.



Ernest Gjelten visited at the parsonage from Sunday evening to Monday noon. He left by bus for his home at Lake Park having spent the summer as student pastor at Gatzke and Middle River.

Robert Johnson, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Victor Johnson, had to be rushed to the St. Lukes hospital at Thief River Falls on Saturday evening due to a bad case of stomach illness. He was still at the hospital on Wednesday

Petition Against Oleomargarine

In a petition filed in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at St. Louis, asking that the oleomargarine order of Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator, be set aside and reversed, Land O'Lakes Creameries and the Twin City Milk Producers Association assert that Mr. McNutt has not now and never has had the authority to make the oleo order, declaring that sole power thereof rests with the Secretary of Agriculture.

The petition, filed by Doherty, Rumble, Butler, Sullivan and Mitchell, attorneys for the petitioners, declares that oleomargarine is used for the sume purposes as butter and is a substitute thereof and if the order stands permitting it to more nearly simulate butter in color, flavor, or texture, the result will be an increased use of oleomargarine and decreased sale and consumption of butter. The use of the ingredients permitted in the ruling will not promote honesty and fair dealing in the interests of consumers and will lead consumers to believe that oleo actually has substantial quantities of butter in it.

The petition was signed by John Brandt, president of Land O'Lakes Creameries, and W. S. Moscript, president of the Twin City Milk Producers Assn.

Nazis Kept on the Alert

Guerilla warfare is admittedly a thorn in the side of Germany's invading army. Top photo shows German troops in a village watching the windows of the houses in an effort to catch snipers. At bottom, German troops have dropped to the side of the road to flank an enemy patrol after learning the patrol was headed towards them.

Quick on the Trigger

The motorcycle scout shown in this photo demonstrates how he would act if an "enemy" plane attacked the truckload of supplies he was escorting during third maneuvers at Camp Polk, La. The soldier quickly dismounted and set his automatic rifle into play against the plane.

On Their Toes in the Desert

Daylight patrols in the western desert carried out daily by the South African infantry brigade quite naturally keeps the unit on its proverbial toes, and when the long journey is over those toes need a rest. The waves along the beach have a cooling effect, and shoes are piled neatly, military style, on the sand.

A Free Show for New Yorkers

Here's a Solution to Your Apron Problem

APRON problem!! It is solved here with two exciting new motifs in the Accordion Flare and the Water Lily. Ingenious gores make the fetching style at lower left; an applique cactus is on the waistband, and rickrack trims. The softly flared apron at top is appliqued with huge water lilies on skirt edge and band, and another lily forms a handy pocket.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. This advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

PATTERNS
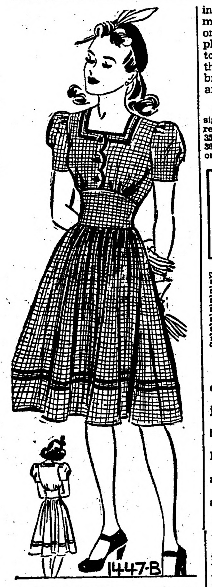
SEWING CIRCLE



A NEW-FOUND smartness for junior girls is presented in this basque dress. Gay with the colorful charm of the old-world peasant frock, this youthful style provides a refreshing fashion change which you, too, will find becoming. Learn for yourself, when you make this easy-to-sew frock, what a curving basque bodice, a low square neckline, a taut wide waistband and a swirling skirt will do for the feminine figure! The basque silhouette is entirely new, different, quaint.

Another feature of the basque fashion which you'll appreciate is that it may be as brilliant in coloring and trimming as you care to make it. Pattern No. 1447-B is one you may make up in a bright plaid, a sprigged challis, a vivid tone in plain material. Then add the true peasant touches in the braid around the neckline and around the top of the hem.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

More Men Wanted

Word has been received by C. H. Sjelander, Manager of the Division of Employment and Security in Thief River Falls, Minnesota, that the applications of 17 young men between the ages of 18 and 35 for shop learners and trainees with the Locheed Aircraft Corporation at Burbank, California have been acted upon favorably. These applicants will be expected to take a physical examination in Thief River Falls before leaving for Burbank. They are expected to report at the Fletcher Aircraft School, Burbank, California for a fifteen day training period commencing September 22 through 24. After the completion of their training course they will be placed at regular factory work at either the Lockheed or the Vega Plant.

In view of the fact that there are still several young men from this territory that wish to avail themselves of the opportunity for employment with the Lockheed Aircraft Corporation, the local office of the Division of Employment and Security at Thief River Falls has scheduled further examinations to be given at Lincoln High School in Thief River Falls on September 16, 23 and 30 at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. All persons who are interested in taking these examinations should first call at the Employment Office in Thief River Falls in order to fiill formal application blanks.

Aluminum Sent To Smelters

All the "pots and pans for defense", about $27,000 worth of scrap aluminum contributed by Minnesotans during the recent campaign, last week end was in cars and on trucks, converging on sorting yards and smelters at Chicago, it was announced last week in Minneapolis by Ernest L. Olrich, OPM Coordinator and chairman of the Minnesota Defense Council, sponsor of the project.

In this county, the collection was in charge of Probate Judge Nels M. Engen.

The 270,000-pound collection required transportation facilities equal to thirteen railroad gondolas, each containing about 20,000 pounds.

According to an estimate made by Walter W. Finke, director of the state Social Welfare Division and chairman of the council's advisory committee, in cooperation with which the local aluminum committee worked, the state's "defense aluminum" will net about ten cents a pound.

After the shipment has been sorted and smelted, the processed metal will flow into defense production channels, under government priorities. Payment will be made to the United States Treasury, from which agency the money will be allocated to help finance non-revenue producing phases of Minnesota's and the nation's Civilian Defense Program.

The Aluminum collection campaign is typical of the nation's preparedness activities of a civil nature that are to be under the State Defense Council.

Sale of the aluminum was under the supervision of John Mc Ginness, of St. Paul, regional procurement officer for the U. S. Treasury, under orders from Washington.

Wild Rice Harvest

Harvesting of Minnesota's wild rice crop moved past its peak this week, the Department of Conservation reported, with indications higher prices this year would offset a lower yield resulting from high water levels.

A return of between $350,000 and $400,000, about the same as in the last two years, seemed likely despite the fact the crop was cut in half compared with 1640.

The harvest was completed last week on many of the 125 lakes opened to ricing, and non-processed rice brought 10 to 15 cents a pound, compared with four and five cents last year.

Yields in some areas, including Star Lake in Otter Tail county, which has some 800 acres of rice, were cut down because of high winds that knocked the grain into the water before harvesting was completed.

Reports to the Department indicated Indians, who years ago harvested all the wild rice for their own use, made up the biggest part of the ricers this season. Since the cereal has become a delicacy on markets of the world, the white man has taken an increasing part in the industry, and in recent years had comprised about 60 per cent of the workers. This year approximately 75 per cent were Indians, with other activity having absorbed the former white ricers.

Some of the most extensive rice beds, including those in Upper Rice Lake, Clearwater county, are of a late variety and will not be harvested for perhaps another week.

The crop is considerably below average in Wisconsin also this year, it was reported, indicating most of the rice sold as seed during the next year will come from Minnesota.

Youngsters Need Much Sleep

One of the advantages of growing old lies in the fact that oldsters need less sleep than they did when they were young.

Until they reach the ripe old age of forty, however, today's school boys and girls should have their nine hours and more, uninterrupted rest every night, the Minnesota State Medical Association's Committee on Public Health Education declared in a bulletin issued today.

Pending that great day, Johnnie and Mary, especially while they are in the growing years, need a great deal of rest and sleep for good health and proper growth, the doctors say.

Fatigue is a much greater threat to normal health and development than many parents realize, the bulletin points out. Children seldom admit to it and often they show it only by increased restlessness and physical activity. But irritability, failure to gain weight, lack of success at school and a general under-par condition are often due solely to lack of adequate sleep and rest.

Sometimes it occurs in families where everything else possible is being done for the child's welfare, the doctors say.

A regular bedtime with absolutely no interference allowed, especially on school nights, should be a law in every household where there are children, the bulletin says. A quiet place to sleep, in separate rooms if possible, is also essential with rest periods during the day for very young scholars, especially of the nervous and excitable variety.

Movies, expeditions, radio programs should be confined to daytime hours for children. At least they should never be permitted to delay bedtime during school.

Festival Was Successful

The Annual Mission and Harvest Festival commemorating the 45th Anniversary which was held in Nazareth Lutheran Church on Sunday was very successful. The church was crowded to capacity at the morning services. The offerings to Missions and to the local work were very good. The number partaking of the fine dinner served by the Ladies Aid was beyond expectation and the total receipts for dinner was $110.00.

The afternoon was featured by the anniversary address given by Rev. R. M. Fjelstad of Thief River Falls. At this program, two duets were sung by Mrs. Oscar Fosholm and Mr. Marvin Sandberg accompanied by Mrs. Sandberg. A letter of greetings from Mrs. M. B. Ordahl of Glenfield, N. Dak., was read. A brief history of the congregation was also read. Following the program, lunch was served by the Ladies Aid.

The Luther League had their program in the evening with reports from the Billings YPLL Conventions. The devotion was given by Miss May Ronglie of Middle River. Evelyn and Beatrice Larson and Marlan Augustine gave reports. Following this Marlin showed movies of the convention and a trip through the Yellowstone Park. A full church was in attendance at this meeting.

Not only was there a fine response from the local people to this festival but there were so many from a distance who came back to their old church and to renew former friendships. There were visitors from Thief River Falls, Middle River, Wylie, Pembina, No. Dak., Rosewood, Warren, McIntosh, Stephen, Radium, Gatzke, Strandquist, Fertile, Roseau, Oklee, Barnesville, Fargo, Lake Park, Strathcona, Newfolden, Frederic, Wisc., and other places.

Straw House For Pullets

Poultrymen who are keeping extra hens for laying this winter should find other shelter for them than the old poultry house which is probably already overcrowded, says County Agent, R. A. Reierson. The favorable egg prices and the tendency to keep over more hens to meet the defense demands are putting a new strain on housing facilities in Marshall County this fall.

Cora Cooke, extension specialist in poultry at University Farm recommends a straw house to relieve the housing shortage cheaply. Straw houses are warm in winter and cool in summer. They can be built "Strawpile" fashion with a frame front and poles to support straw, while more permanent structures can be made of baled straw. Straw can also be used to cover old buildings that are too cold and drafty as they stand. Straw houses are not difficult to ventilate because the straw loft principle is a part of their construction.

Building ideas for a straw house are found in Extension Bulletin 227, and the Minnesota straw loft poultry house is described in Extension Bulletin 121 Either or both these bulletins may be had from the county agent or by writing direct to Bulletin Room, University Farm, St. Paul.

Rev. Hanson conducted funeral services for Mrs. Joseph Wold at Gatzke on Tuesday.

Club Year Almost Completed

The 1941 club year is almost complete and 4-H members in the county are turning in their completed records to the extension office by October first. All clubs are working hard to have 100 percent of their project records in by that time.

The annual Fall Achievement Day will be held in Warren on Saturday October 4. Exhibits of fat stock (lambs, beef, hogs, and poultry), garden corn, and potatoes are due at the fairgrounds at 11 a. m. Ten 4H members will be chosen to show their stock at the Junior Livestock Show in South St. Paul from October 27 to October 30.

The following trips will be awarded:

3 Baby Beeves
3 Fat Lambs
1 Pen of Lambs
1 Pen of Fat Poultry
1 Pen of Turkeys
1 Market hog

The date for the annual 4H banquet at Stephen was set for October 18 beginning at 7 p. m.

The Junior 4H leaders in the various clubs are planning a big training meeting to be held at Island Park in Argyle on Saturday, Sept. 20. The meeting will begin at 1:30 p. m. and continue thruout the afternoon and evening.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Greer Incident Is Believed Nazi Test Of American Foreign Policy Position; Japanese Paper Sees Defeat for Germans; General Winter Nears Eastern Front

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

One Was Attacked; One Sailed Safely

Almost at the same time that a Nazi sub attacked the U.S.S. Greer near Iceland, the safe arrival at Vladivostok was announced of the 8,428-ton American oil tanker, Associated. (Below) The Associated carrying 85,000 barrels of high-octane gas for use by Soviet aircraft is the second tanker reaching the Siberian port without incident despite some Japanese talk of stopping American ships in a Japanese sea zone. The Greer, undamaged, dropped a depth bomb in a counterattack on the sub. The incident is the first in which an American warship figured in the present war. Showing (at top) is the U.S.S. Roper, sister ship of the Greer.

GREER:
A Test by Nazis

The encounter of the U. S. Destroyer Greer 200 miles southwest of Iceland with a German submarine turned out to be an incident of the utmost importance in defining America's position in the world war.

It was not so much the nature of the battle, but the wording of the German announcements concerning it that increased its significance to Americans.

For the Nazis not merely admitted that it was a German submarine which was involved, they placed the blame squarely on President Roosevelt, not only because of the President's general foreign policy, but went beyond this and charged that Mr. Roosevelt had given general orders for the American navy to start shooting.

The Germans asserted that the Greer was the aggressor in the fight, had not merely contented itself with ascertaining the position of the submarine, but had begun the shooting, and that the German craft had defended itself without "being in a position to know" the nationality of the U. S. craft.

The President took the attitude that the Greer was on proper U. S. business on the high seas, that he saw no reason to consider a German blockade zone as having any effect on the freedom of the seas for American vessels, and that the Greer, in attempting to "eliminate" a German submarine after an attack, had acted properly.

In many quarters it was believed that the prime purpose of the U-boat attack on the Greer had been to create an incident which would test out the strength of the President's foreign policy, and perhaps create a national tempest to have American troops withdrawn from Iceland, and the naval vessels ordered to keep out of the eastern parts of the Atlantic.

Perhaps, if the Germans had said: "We are sorry, but the torpedoes were launched from a considerable distance, and we had thought the Greer was a British destroyer," the furor over the incident would have died in a day or two.

No bones were broken or armor plate dent. But the Germans decided instead to charge Mr. Roosevelt with having ordered the American ship to attack the U-boat, and the reaction, as far as could be seen, was quite the reverse of what the Germans had planned and hoped for.

One congressman said:

"I'd believe Roosevelt against Hitler any day in the week."

And that about summed up the general public reaction. Most interesting was the excitement of certain super-isolationists, who immediately, following the encounter, had said that the Greer was attacked by a British submarine in a gigantic plot to get the United States into the war.

The acceptance by Germany of the submarine's identity deflated these arguments abruptly.

BRIEFS

GLASGOW: Four American pilots joining the British air forces were drowned and seven survived the torpedoing of the vessel on which they were crossing from Canada. A seaman said the submarine commander, a young German, apparently ashamed of what he had done, came to the surface, talked with the survivors, and disclaimed firing the torpedo which sank the ship.

JAPAN:
Sees Defeat?

Arrival of a second tanker-load of oil at Vladivostok without Japanese interference was accompanied both by a stiffening of the British-American attitude toward Nippon and a sensational article in Japan News-Week practically predicting a Nazi defeat in this, the third year of the war.

No attempt was made to suppress the publication in a paper which often reflects the views of high government circles.

At the same time a national newspaper poll disclosed that Americans had voted 70 per cent in favor of a curbing of Japan even at the cost of war.

Japan's News-Week said: "The situation ushering in the third year of war is such that although it does not indicate that the Nazis and their ill-founded plans have been defeated, it does mean that by the end of the third year the finish of the horrible carnage should be within the grasp of the Allies.

"However well Hitler may have thought he planned his march to world domination, it is now quite apparent that even he is fallible."

Regardless of the official or unofficial character of the publication, observers saw in the permission to circulate this article a powerful sign of a milder Japanese viewpoint toward the world situation, and a doubt in thinking circles as to the wisdom of the Axis tie-up for Japan, an affinity which the United States and Britain were doing all in their power to break down.

LENINGRAD:
Defense of City

Despite conflicting reports about the status of the battle for Leningrad, it was evident that the defense of the city already had started, and that once again the Russians were surprising the world with the tenacity of their resistance, and their willingness to make huge sacrifices for eventual victory.

Early in the German invasion of Russia it had been stated that if the Russians were willing to make the necessary sacrifices, and were willing to fight on even though forced into retreat that might cost them Leningrad, Moscow and Kiev, the Germans would find them as tough a nut to crack as the Japanese had found the Chinese.

France had the same opportunity, but had failed. Would the Russians really fight.

The answer to that question already had been written in the history of 2½ months of warfare on the eastern front, and the Russian defense of their homeland was challenging the admiration of skeptical England and even more skeptical America.

The end of September was going to bring the end of favorable blitz weather for the Germans, and most military observers believed the Nazi army was in for a tough winter in Russia.

Claims were still conflicting, but the admission by the Germans of upwards of 1,500,000 casualties on their own side spoke volumes for the real character of the Russian defense.

The Finns were claiming "confusion" in Leningrad and the "city in flames," while Moscow reported its defense intact, and counterattacks on the borders of the city succeeding. The German communiques claimed only that her longer-range guns had found the city's industrial plants, but told of severe resistance "by men, women and children."

Round Leningrad

The map shows the area in which the battle of Leningrad was bitterly fought. (a) Schluesselburg, 25 miles from Leningrad; (b) Kronstadt, Soviet naval base and fortress; (c) Jerijoki, which witnessed some of the grimmest fighting.

CRUISERS:
Pair Take Water

At Kearny, N. J., and at Quincy, Mass., two more cruisers took the water to add strength to America's two-ocean navy, and a third's keel was laid the same day at Philadelphia.

The Kearny ship, a 6,000-ton speedster, was reported to have a speed of 43 knots, equal to the fastest destroyer. Many secret features give her this speed, it was said. The other vessel, the San Juan, launched at Quincy, was of similar characteristics, but all information about her in detail was withheld.

The launchings brought the total of ships far past the 338 figure on August 1, which did not include the new battleships North Carolina and Washington, floating but not yet in actual service, also many smaller craft.

The fleet actually in service included 15 battleships, 6 aircraft carriers, 37 cruisers, 168 destroyers, 112 submarines.

FORTRESS:
Plane of the Hour

Although there are only a few "fortress bombers" in Britain taking part in the air blitz of Germany and occupied points, the work they were doing was bringing much commendation that many styled them "America's outstanding contribution to warfare."

There was little mystery about the new ships, for they were simply a translating of the "stratoliner" into a warplane.

And the United States, recognizing the favorable reaction to this air weapon in actual use, immediately implemented it by giving a $337,000,000 order to Boeing and designating two other factories to make them in volume, giving Douglas a $9,700,000 contract for a few, and ordering the Vega factory to get ready to put them out on a basis of interchangeable parts with those made by Boeing and Douglas.

What the Fortress plane, as Britain called them, could do was being demonstrated almost daily in warfare. The usual communique was that a bombing had been carried out, and "all our planes returned." A jaunt from Britain to Berlin was just a short hop for these planes, carrying a huge load of bombs and moving high above accurate anti-aircraft fire, often not seen or heard until their explosives started hitting the ground.

Yet at least one had returned partially damaged after an encounter with seven Nazi fighter planes, which were forced to attack it from down under. The usual technique of fighting a bomber is to swoop on its tail from above.

The planes are four-motored, of excessively high speed, capable of flight, fully loaded, at 40,000 feet altitude, carry a big crew, heavy armament, and a tremendous load of large-caliber bombs.

It is known that a navy plane of similar proportions is soon to be launched and tested in this country. It is even larger than the Fortress bombers.

PLOT: ### To Fuel U-Boats

Baltimore, a port-of-call for the German submarine Deutschland during the last war, got a thrill out of the revelation that a Portuguese freighter, the Mello, was seized at Norfolk, Va., after loading in the Maryland city a cargo of 1,000 gallons of lubricating oil, believed destined for German submarines at sea.

The Mello put into Norfolk, and during a routine customs examination, the supply of lubricating oil, which the ship was not licensed to carry, was found, and it was listed simply as "stores."

The U. S. attorney at Baltimore issued a warrant for the arrest of the captain, J. C. Martins. He was charged with violating two presidential proclamations which listed certain items which could not be exported without license.

A customs investigator said: "We believe this sort of thing—you might call it a racket—has been going on for some time." He explained that with 75 ships loading at once, and only 25 customs investigators to examine them, many vessels are "getting away" with large quantities of unlicensed material.

Largest Whale Caught

According to the World Almanac, the largest whale ever caught was a blue monster harpooned in the Antarctic in 1927 by the crew of the N. T. Neilsen-Alonzo. This leviathan measured 110 feet in length and weighed 115 tons. Incidentally, the February issue of Norwegian Whaling Gazette listed the N. T. Neilsen-Alonzo as still operating in Norway's whaling fleet of floating factory ships.

State Has Post-War Chance

Minnesota has the capacity to weather the post-war economic readjustment era in relatively better shape than the rest of the nation, Herbert J. Miller, executive secretary of Minnesota Resources commission, said today.

Miller said his observation was based on two facts:

"Minnesota's economic foundation, partly due to the fact that it is based on the natural function of raising and processing food, is much more stable than that of other states. It doesn't go as high in a boom, or sink as low in a depression.

"Secondly, we have more latent, hidden opportunity to put people to work, if we only seek it out, due to the variety and wealth of our resources, and the almost virgin opportunity for development some of them present."

Chemicals and the forest industry are two fields which Minnesota can develop to help cushion the anticipated economic jolts of the post-war period, Miller indicated.

Hanson and son Harold spent a few days with Mrs. H. O. Peterson at Viking.

Middle River Has Robberies

A gang of robbers did a big job at Middle River last Sunday evening and early Monday morning when they rifled the safes in in four business establishments in that village. The places broken into were: the Henry Young store where they ruined the safe and only got about $35.00 in cash; the Berg Drug Store, where they took about $75.00 worth of Narcotics and also tarried long enough to mix a half pint of whiskey and a couple of Coca Colas, the Cooperative Store where they got $175.00, some of which was money taken in for fishing and hunting licenses; the St. Hilaire Lumber Yard where they only got a few pennies for their trouble.

Sheriff Toftner and Deputy Johnson investigated the robbery early Monday morning but had no clues to work on. The fellows who pulled this job were smooth as they wore gloves even when they mixed their drinks.

The Weather

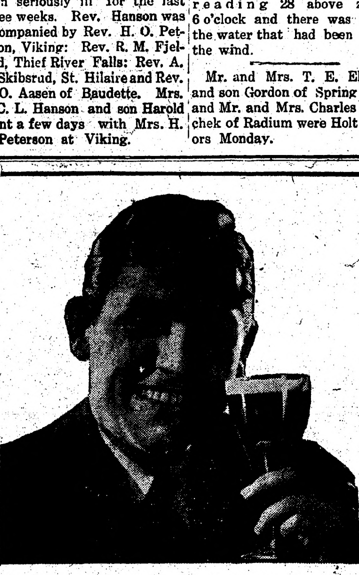
The weather the past week could well be classified as real bad. On Saturday we had one of the heaviesr rains of the season. Since then it has rained every day and on Tuesday and Wednesday it poured down pretty lively at times. All low places are filled with water and the side roads without gravel are getting in bad shape.

Yesterday morning the sun came out bright at 6:30 and hopes for clearer weather. We also had a heavy frost yesterday morning with the thermometer reading 28 above zero at 6 o'clock and there was ice on the water that had been out of the wind.

Mr. and Mrs. T. E. Ellestad and son Gordon of Spring Grove and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Sedlachek of Radium were Holt visitors Monday.



"BEER IS GOOD TO ME"

"Beer helps me to relax and enjoy life. I find that beer, when used with normal good sense, is not intoxicating. In fact, I never have any regrets over a pleasant evening drinking beer with my friends.

"I have noticed that 'beer is good' for the other fellows too. Good fellowship seems to go hand in hand with beer.

"I also understand that 'beer provides many economic aids' to Minnesota and the Nation. The manufacture, sale and distribution of beer gives employment to approximately 35,000 people in Minnesota alone. In addition, the Municipal, State and the Federal Governments collect millions in taxes each year. These are additional dividends I get from the use of beer."

Food Is Important Weapon

The Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service has pledged its best efforts toward the attainment of the U. S. Department of Agriculture goal of more food for America and other countries resisting aggression, announces Director Paul E. Miller, who just returned from a 12-state meeting at Chicago where he and other agricultural leaders assured Secretary Claude R. Wickard that Americas foremost farm states are ready to undertake the greatest production program in the history of this country.

Director Miller believes that the Minnesota goals of more milk more eggs and poultry, more meat, and more garden products are not only attainable, but that Minnesota farmers have the desire and the resources to deliver the goods.

He has urged extension workers and volunteer leaders in Marshall county to place food production at the head of the list of aims for the county. As soon as the state and county defense boards have set up county goals, and AAA committeemen have conducted their canvass of farms to find out how much food can be produced, hundreds of volunteer leaders in extension work will have the opportunity to help in the food campaign.

"There will be a big premium on good farming practices in the coming months," says Director Miller. "That is especially true of good feeding and management practices which will get more milk from each cow, more eggs from each hen, and more meat from market hogs and cattle. America has enlisted in the battle for freedom with food as its most important weapon. Food production is a job that we in Minnesota can do exceptionally well."

Leskinen-Sorter Wedding

Miss Tryne Leskinen and Mr. Selmer Sorter, both of Middle River, were married at the parsonage on Saturday evening with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiating, using the single ring ceremony. Their attendants were Miss Thelma Leskinen and Mr. Elmer Korpi. They will make their home on a farm near Middle River.

Hundreds of hunters from all parts of the state spent Saturday and Sunday in this area hunting prairie chicken and Hungarian partridge. Most hunters report that the birds were none too plentiful, but that they had fair shooting. Local sportsmen fared only as good as the others and none reported limit bagging anywhere around here. Rain both days also put a damper on the hunt as the birds took to heavy cover.

Lewis Sagstuen has rebuilt his farm home east of the village. He has had the house all remodeled and resided and otherwise fixed up in good shape besides adding a breakfast nook and a big new porch. Martin Swenson has done the carpenter work for Mr. Sagstuen.

Wallace Peterson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Peterson had a close call Saturday when he got hit in the face with birdshot as he was out chicken shooting. He also got a pellet in the neck but that did not worry him so much as the one that hit him in the face and lodged in the bone of the nose.

Battles For Dairy Farmers

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22—At the insistence of dairy farmers and organizations in all parts of the country, Congressman August H. Andresen of Minnesota today introduced in the House of Representatives a bill designed to prohibit interstate shipment and sale of oleomargarine manufactured under the new standards set up by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

Minnesota farmers have been particularly incensed by the McNutt standards, which provide that oleomargarine is to be synthetically made so as more nearly to imitate butter, according to Representative Andresen.

"As the leading butter-producing state of the nation, Minnesota faces a serious situation if its dairy farmers must compete with efforts of the United States government to change the diet of the American people from butter to a synthetic product like oleomargarine, "Representative Andresen said today, describing the government's as 'a crime against both farmers and the consuming public.'

"The dairy farmers of Minnesota and the entire nation are thoroughly aroused over Paul V. McNutt's action," Mr. Andresen declared. "They will not rest until his oleomargarine standards are set aside.

"I am bitterly opposed, as well, to the activities of the Consumers' Counsel office in the Department of Agriculture, which recently has played the role of salesman for the oleomargine interests," the Minnesota Congressman said. "We strenuously protest the Federal government's use of its facilities and money to advertise this product as against butter. We contend that oleo should be sold for what it is and not as a deceptive product in imitation of butter."

Henning Bought Tavern Here

Eddy Henning of Middle River closed a deal last week with the Schmidt Brewing Company in which he became the owner of the Dew Drop Inn here. Mr. Henning took over the management at once. Mr. and Mrs. Henning and son are now staying at the Fred Peterson home and will move here as soon as a house is available. Mr. Henning has operated a service station at Middle River the past two years.

The people of Holt and vicinity bid them a warm welcome here.

Stilaf Anderson left on Sunday for Ames, Iowa to resume his studies at a veterinarian school where he has attended the past two years. With the work that he will complete this year he can next year get an assignment as a junior veterinarian in the United States Army. He was deferred from the draft by the army to take this course as they need these men for their professional services as soon as they could get them.

Celebrate Anniversary

Neighbors gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Waldemar Wendt on Sunday and gave them a 10th wedding anniversary party. The honored couple received a cash purse for a gift. A delicious lunch was served by the self invited guests.

Heavy rains forced threshing to quit in Montana of North Dakota.

An aeroplane passed over the village. In a few years it will probably be a common sight to see them in the air.

G. Sanoden moved their household goods into the P. B. Larson house which they had rented.

Elmer and Oscar Odie and Ole Nybo all of Golden Valley made a business trip to Thief River Falls.

F. W. Ramaley of St Paul was here looking after his big farm near the Thief River.

30x3½ tires sold for only $17.50

Alfred Sollom proved up on his homestead in Mud Lake.

Hardly anyone went home without first eating a good lunch at the Holt Cafe. (They do the same now.)

Given Reception

Relatives and friends gathered at the farm home of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Lysne on Sunday afternoon and gave them a wedding reception. The honored couple received many lovely gifts. A delicious lunch was served by the self invited guests.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste
Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.
Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.
Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.
There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

THE dress which is practically a requirement for college entrance is the jumper. It's the basis of every well-planned school wardrobe, for it can be worn with different blouses and sweaters in many interchangeable effects. Pattern No. 8018 presents a jumper which slim girls will like—it has a fitted waistline, marked with a shaped, wide belt. The regulation convertible collar blouse is included with the jumper pattern.

* * *

Pattern No. 8018 is in uneven sizes 11 to 19. Size 13 jumper requires 3⅛ yards 35-inch material or 2⅝ yards 54-inch material. Blouse with short sleeves takes 1⅝ yards 35-inch material. For this attractive pattern, send your order to:

Made Most of Opportunity To Illustrate His Point

The prisoner charged with assault had been severely cross-examined by the prosecuting attorney, but continued to maintain that he had merely pushed his victim "a little bit."

"Now," said the prosecutor, "for the benefit of the jury, will you please step down here and, with me as a subject, illustrate just what you mean by 'a little bit'?"

The prisoner descended and the spectators were astonished to see him slap the lawyer in the face, seize him bodily, and with a supreme effort, lift him from the floor and hurl him prostrate across a table.

Turning to the jury, he explained mildly, "Gentlemen, about one-tenth that hard."

A Man's Job

LONDON, ENGLAND.—Britain's man shortage is even felt in the post office department, where women have taken over duties of mail collecting. This pretty miss, wearing practically a "mailman's" garb, is one of the many additions to the British postal staff.

NORWAY:
Pays and Pays

Reports filtered through from Norway to neighboring Sweden by the simple method of couriers slipping across the border, to the effect that Norway's boundless courage and defiance of Nazis and Quislings were the cause of the uprising which swept the country and made the conquered people pay and pay again for their temerity.

The incident is said to have occurred at Oslo, when, during a British raid on the port, people thronged the streets, waving happily at the bombers overhead, regardless of their own danger.

From the throngs, also especially from school shelters, were heard strong voices singing Norway's national anthem and the king's hymn.

Suddenly the word came that one British bomber had been downed and that two men of the R.A.F. had been taken to an Oslo hospital.

The crowd surged toward the hospital, bearing flowers and cheering the men within to the echo. They demanded admittance. The demonstration grew to such proportions that the Nazi military dispersed it and from that time on labor troubles grew until the final outburst.

Locomotives were sabotaged. Nazi troop movements were halted. Munitions factories were blown up. A general strike spread through the nation.

These troubles were simultaneously and apparently spontaneously occurring at other points in Nazi occupied countries. These were the developments:

1. Practical martial law declared by the Quisling government over most of Norway. A church "purge" expected.

2. A warning in Rumania that "Communists" would be "shot on sight."

3. Reports from Jugoslavia that guerillas had slain 398 persons in one village, had sabotaged a freighter and had blown up an important highway.

FINNS:
Will They Quit?

The publication of anti-Nazi articles in Helsinki newspapers, plus the general national jubilation over the recapture of the capital of Karelia, former Finnish province lost to the Russians early in the war brought to the fore the question of whether the Finns would continue their part in the fight to occupy Leningrad.

The feeling was expressed in certain quarters that the Finns already have quit, and they cited the fact that the Germans had reported the entire encirclement of Leningrad and then, two days later, had admitted this was not true.

The "hole" they reported in the encirclement was in the Lake Ladoga region, the exact part of the front which the Finns were working in predominantly.

LINDBERGH:
Loss of Support

A recent speech by Lindbergh, leading orator of the America First committee, instantly lost him the support of the Hearst newspapers, which had been enthusiastically printing everything he had been saying.

Lindbergh was booed and hissed, as well as applauded in Des Moines, Iowa, when he made the statement, among other things, that the only groups really pulling for American entry into the war were the British, the Jews and the Roosevelt supporters.

This brought down on his head a considerable blast of indignation from private and public characters throughout the nation.

But outstanding among his critics was William R. Hearst, who caused an editorial to be displayed on the front pages of his papers under the heading "An Un-American Address" in which he said "The raising of the racial issue is the most unfortunate happening that has occurred in the United States since the present tense international situation developed."

THINGS for You to Make

MISCELLANEOUS cutout designs are here to tempt hammer and saw into use. At top, left, is a very practical item—the "Leave a Note" bungalow. Inch wood makes this, and it is to be placed beside the front door. Pad and pencil inside the hinged door invites friends to leave word if they call when you are away. Practical, too, are the doorknockers—the red-headed woodpecker and the horse. And kitchen or dining room will welcome this clever cottage flower holder and the matching shade pulls.

People of Thailand

The inhabitants of Thailand (Siam) are called "Thai," which is a plural term meaning "The Free People." Because the natives have always been known as Thai, and have preferred to call their country "Maung Thai," rather than "Sayam" or "Siam," the terms Siam and Siamese were officially changed to Thailand and Thai, respectively, on June 24, 1939, by a notification of the president of the council of ministers.

Public Mass Meeting

A public mass meeting will be held in the Holt School on Thursday evening Oct. 9. at 8:15 p. m. The purpose of this meetting will be to study and take action regarding the Holt Cemetery Association. A temporary organization will be set up to consider the reorganization of the Association.

For a number of years, the Holt Cemetery Association has been inactive due to the fact that most of the old officers have moved away or died. Difficulties have arisen in choice of plots, upkeep, ect. If the association could be organized so as to have an annual meeting to elect officers, transact other business and determine the future policy of the Association, it would make it easier for all concerned. However, what is to be done will be done at the Mass Meeting on that evening The meeting is called by a number of interested men and women of the community. Since the Cemetery is something that should be of vital concern to the whole community, this meeting should be well attended. This invitation goes out to all who are interested as the more that are present, the better the meeting will be. Anyone having any documents, records, statements, ect. pertaining to the present Association, please bring them along, so as to assist in determing its future policy, insidentally, we are informed that the same Cemetery is recorded under two different titles in Warren.

Ram Sale and Swap Day

Marshall county sheep men will have an opportunity to improve their flocks at another purebred ram sale and swap day at the county fairgrounds in Warren on Wednesday, October 8, R. A. Reierson, county agent, announced this week.

The present favorable outlook for wool and lamb prices makes it all the more important for owners of farm flocks to use good purebred sires this year, Mr. Reierson pointed out. At the big sale and swap day, sheep men will get together, to arrange for better rams to head their flocks for the coming breeding season. Good rams that have served their purpose in one flock can be brought in for sale or exchange, and there will also be on hand a number of high-quality rams consigned by leading purebred breeders.

The ram sale and exchange days are sponsored by local farmers and purebred breeders in cooperation with the Extension Service. W. E. Morris will be on hand from the University Farm staff to give demonstrations and also consult with sheep men who are selecting rams.

There will aloo be a supply of good bulls and boars at this big swap and sale day.

Miss DeLoris Mackie of Alvarado and Mr. Reuben Engevik of Gatzke were married at the Lutheran parsonage on Saturday evening with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiating. Their attendants were Miss Kathleen Lofstrom of Alvarado and Mr. Walter Lunsetter of Gatzke. They will make their home at Gatzke where the groom is engaged in farming and the bride is a public school teacher.

Mrs. Casper Higgerness of Ada formerly Eunice Leiran, daughter of Mrs. Mike Leiran, is critically ill at the Mercy hospital at Thief River Falls.

"BEER IS GOOD TO ME"

"Beer helps me to relax and enjoy life. I find that beer; when used with normal good sense, is not intoxicating. In fact; I never have any regrets over a pleasant evening drinking beer with my friends.

"I have noticed that 'beer is good' for the other fellows too. Good fellowship seems to go hand in hand with beer.

"I also understand that 'beer provides many economic aids' to Minnesota and the Nation. The manufacture, sale and distribution of beer gives employment to approximately 35,000 people in Minnesota alone. In addition, the Municipal, State and the Federal Governments collect millions in taxes each year. These are additional dividends I get from the use of beer."

Kranz Reelected Chairman

Chas. N. Kranz, Strandquist farmer, was reelected chairman of the Marshall County Agricultural Conservation committee at the annual election held at the court house in Warren on Tuesday last week. There were 39 delegates from the various communities in the county participating in the election.

At the same election, Alphonse E. Johnson, Stephen, was reelected vice chairman and Anton Anderson, Argyle, was reelected as the third member of the committee. Alternate committee members chosen include Otto Thompson of Newfolden and John Gratzek of Strandquist.

Due to a new regulation adopted by the Federal A. A. A. setup prohibiting county extension agents from serving as secretaries of county A. A. A. organizations, R. A. Reierson resigned as secretary of the local committee. Mr. Reierson has served as secretary of the county committee for seven years in which time he assisted in setting up the program for Marshall County. In tendering his resignation, Mr. Reierson expressed his appreciation to the county and community committees as well as others for their cooperation and assured them he would assist them in the future whenever called upon to do so. The change in the setup will permit county agents throughout the country to devote more of their time in extension work, which is the original purpose of the county agent's work.

Ervin R. Vansickle was appointed secretary of the association by the county committee while Mrs. Beulah Miller was named treasurer and Miss Lola Belle Rosendahl was named assistant treasurer.

The committee also selected Committeeman Anton Anderson to be in charge of wheat loans, Committeeman Alphonse E. Johnson in charge of crop insurance and Chairman Chas. Kranz in charge of the sugar beet program and marketing quotas. The entire committee will handle the education, price adjustment and parity programs.

Local hunters report poor shooting on Wednesday the first day of duck hunting season. They claim the local ducks are flying too high as they go so far to find and feeding ground.

Anderson's Leave Holt

Friends, relatives and neighbors of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Anderson and daughter Inez gathered at their farm home on Sunday afternood and gave them a farewell party. They were presented with a cash purse as a remembranse of their long stay in this community. The Anderson's moved to Thief River Falls on Tuesday. They have a new home on the east boulevard in that city.

The Dorcas Society of the Nazareth Lutheran church will hold a reorganization meeting at the parsonage on Tuesday evening, October 7th, with Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson entertaining. The Dorcas has been an active organization in years past and it is anticipated that it will continue as such. The old and new members are invited to be present at its reorganization meeting.

Mr. Geo. Karvonen and Rev. T. C. L. Hanson accompanied Rev. H. O. Peterson of Viking to Baudette on Tuesday where they attended the annual meeting of the Lake of the Woods Bible Camp Association. Mrs. Peterson spent the day with Mrs. Hanson.

Gilbert Sanoden has remodeled the heating system at his home by putting in a new pipe furnace Geo. Karvonen has been assisting him with the installation.

TELLS HOW BANKS AIDED PROGRESS

Economist Describes the Ways Banking Institutions Have Contributed to Development of United States

OMAHA, Nebr.—Privately owned banking, despite its faults, has served America well, William A. Irwin, Professor of Economics, Washburn College, Topeka, Kansas, declared in a recent address here on "Banking in a Changing World."

"Under the leadership of individuals banking has helped to bring this country to a foremost place in economic development among the nations of the world," he said. "The small community has been developed by the individual bank. The frontiers of America have been pushed forward by the help and counsel of the individual banker. The shocks of wars and depressions in a century and a half have been withstood with the assistance of the individual banker.

Change May Be Necessary.

"It may be that we have reached a tide in the affairs of America when new methods are needed. It may be that we have come to a point where the individual should be submerged for 'the greatest good of the greatest number.'

"It may even be that complete centralization of the banking system has become an economic necessity in our complicated social life. But the banker ought to be satisfied that these things are so before he should give up his fight for the system we have known. We came to greatness under that kind of banking; we should not give it up without unmistakable proof of the absolute necessity of such a change."

The American Pattern

Professor Irwin said that the proposal which has been advanced for coordinating banking operations in the national interest under "a 'Supreme Court' for banking is typically American and ought to have the most serious consideration of those elements which are clamoring for political control, which is typically un-American." It is not wise, he said, to oppose changes as such, but that bankers should "see to it that change, if and when it does come, shall preserve all that is good in the past and stick as closely as possible to the American pattern of things."

Banking is properly a conservative profession, he pointed out, and should cling to practices and principles of banking that are, and always have been fundamentally sound.

"It is to its credit that so large a group of its members never faltered, even in boom times, in their allegiance to those sound principles," he declared. "We probably owe our salvation from chaos to that fact."

Revised Traffic Laws

The State Highway department announced this week that it has printed a revised edition of 100,000 copies of the Minnesota traffic laws, for free distribution in the cause of greater traffic safety.

The booklets, pocket-size will be distributed to the schools thru the department of Education; to local safety groups by the Minnesota Safety Council; and to local officials and individual motorists, upon request, by the Department of Highways.

There was little change in the uniform traffic act by the last legislature except in the provision which made the revocation of a driver's license mandatory upon conviction for drunken driving.

The new booklets, however, in addition to the state traffic regulations, contain the provisions of present state laws governing unauthorized use of a motor vehicle, crimes against public health and safety, regulations governing the scattering of refuse along the highway, causing injury to or obstructing or damaging a highway, and the laws regulating the use or sale of fireworks.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Larson accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Ness of Red Lake Falls to Clementson on Sunday for a little pike fishing. They had caught some very nice size fish.

The Weather

The weather the past week has not been much to write home about. On Saturday morning we had our first snow of the season when a light flurry followed an all night rain and sleet storm in here. Since then we have had only cloudy and damp days with occasional rains which have hampered threshing operations here.

Side roads are in a very bad shape now farmers are reporting to us. We hope that it will dry up some before it freezes so that they would not remain in too bad a condition.

Enactment of Price Fixing Measure And Repeal of U. S. Neutrality Act Are Chief Congressional Problems; Soviet Situation Grave, Say British

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Bernard M. Baruch, who headed the War Industries Board during World War I, is pictured as he urged congress "to put a ceiling over the whole price structure including wages, rents, and farm prices." Baruch, who appeared before the House Banking and Currency committee, advocated a much more drastic price control bill than that planned by the administration. ## KIEV:
Two Versions

The Germans had claimed the complete capture of Kiev, the entering of the whole city, the "mopping up" of small bodies of "die-hard" troops, and the fleeing of Russian commanders.

On the same day the Russians, admitting the German entry into the Kiev suburbs, had pictured a "battle to the death," and a defense of the city which was costing the Nazis 150,000 men and vast quantities of material.

Odessa, in the south, was finding the "pressure relieved," the Reds had reported.

In these diametrically opposing statements, perhaps the only light was coming from British sources, presumably getting information from mission observers on the scene, but the British reports had been entirely gloomy.

The British had reported that an "apparent" cutoff of the Crimean peninsula had occurred, and though they scouted the German report of having trapped 400,000 to 500,000 Russian troops in an encirclement near Kiev, they saw the Russian situation as grave indeed.

From out of all this it was evident that the fall of Kiev seemed inevitable and finally even the Russians admitted its fall, after what was termed "fierce fighting."

BULGARIA:
On Nazi Side

Britain had admitted the decision of King Boris of Bulgaria to throw his nation, final Balkan question-mark, in on the side of Hitler.

In this was seen a more general picture of the German effort, which undoubtedly was to be a threatening move toward Turkey, and the establishment of sea-borne invasion points to go after Rostov and the oil fields.

All this was tied up indissolubly with the Russian crisis, as it was plain Turkey would view with alarm the Russian weakness and her own resistance to Nazi advances would be tempered by the strength or weak character of Soviet military power.

Also the effort of the British to bring her own and United States' material to the Russian fields through the Persian gulf was largely to stand or fall as a result of the success or failure of this southern German drive.

Hence it was that W. Averell Harriman, head of the American mission to the Soviet, had stressed the immediate and vital necessity of rushing all possible material to Russia.

JAPAN:
Gets Tougher

Nippon, in the meantime, had been taking a stiffer attitude toward the United States, and in particular had turned her ire upon Russia, sensing that in the wounded "bear's" distress lay her opportunity of hitting out at her old rival.

Charging that the Russians had cut loose floating mines in the Japanese sea, in violation of international law and friendly behavior between nations, Japan made the strongest representations.

At the same time she was rebuffing efforts of the United States toward a peaceful settlement in the Pacific, and was issuing propaganda charging that the Chinese would demand equality with the white races, and a right to enter the U. S.

The government of Thailand, faced further with the request from Vichy that America, in settling peace in the Pacific, see that the Japanese were expelled from Indo-China, and realizing the critical times in the Orient, informed its people that war for Thailand was near at hand.

PRICES:
And Baruch

Bernard Baruch, World war wartime industries head, threw a bombshell into the price-fixing bill discussion when he postulated that no price fixing would work without fixing costs of merchandise, including wages and rentals.

That his pronouncement had a profound effect had been immediately evident in the acceptance of his views by at least two influential members of the committee, and it was considered more than possible that the final form of the bill would carry an amendment to fix wage ceilings.

Also there was more than an undercurrent evident hitting out at Leon Henderson, price control administration by executive appointment in the committee's feeling that the bill should be administered by a board, not an individual.

POLICY:
Gains Support

Faced with the grimmer picture of European war, and a realization through Russia's crisis that American aid would have to be considerable if the Axis were finally to be defeated, and the democracies win the victory, one notable change in Washington sentiment was a growing support for the White House foreign policy.

It was evident in the pre-action discussion of the repeal of the Neutrality act, President Roosevelt's latest request anent his policy.

Even from circles most strongly isolationist, and most vigorously opposed to the President it was conceded that the act would be repealed, perhaps within two months.

The cohesion of foes of the President's policy was becoming less firm. Senator LaFollette, for instance, had urged all isolationists, non-interventionists to gird for the battle of ballots this fall, and to make the foreign policy their issue.

Senator Taft, at the same time, had urged campaigners and voters in the congressional primaries to leave the foreign policy out of the picture. He said:

"Congressional votes on the question have cut across party lines, and there is no reason for the party to make an issue of foreign policy."

Wendell Willkie, storm center of both of these statements, saw the first as an acceptance of his challenge to the isolationists to meet interventionist candidates he would put in the field, and the second as an unwillingness on the part of a Republican leader to meet the issue.

DUTCH:
In Rebellion

Sabotage, theft and anti-Nazi rebellions were occurring on an increasing tempo in Holland, it had been reported in London through a Dutch news agency.

The Rotterdam public prosecutor stated that the city was unsafe, and that the forces of law and order were unable to cope with the wave of crime.

While not giving actual instances of anti-Nazi demonstrations, the censored dispatches had spoken of "rowdyism, burglary, petty thefts and other outrages." In Utrecht special guards were appointed to aid the police.

HOSTAGES:

The Germans in Paris, under General Stuelpnagel, executed 12 French hostages to pay for the death of one German non-commissioned officer, shot in the back on a Paris street as he walked to his home.

The shots came from a passing auto. The assassins were not arrested. Summarily taken out and shot had been seven Communists, one Jew and two persons accused of having been in the possession of weapons, and three who had been charged with attacking soldiers.

JUDY GARLAND was up a tree when she got that very special invitation to go to Chile recently. It came from the Hon. Claude Bowers, U. S. ambassador, asking her to be guest of honor at a gala charity premiere of Metro's "Ziegfeld Girl" in Santiago. (And if you think Metro's publicity department had a hand in the matter you can't be far wrong!)

Well, Judy couldn't get away, because she's working with Mickey Rooney in "Babes on Broadway." So she wrote a nice letter and arranged to send as proxy a doll, three feet high, resembling her in every detail. Wearing a modish traveling suit, it was to take a plane, be met by the ambassador and a group of American women, in Chile, and attend the dinner clad in a replica of the gown worn by Judy in one number of "Ziegfeld Girl." Which should satisfy even an ambassador.

Dad Expected Memorial To Be a Speaking Likeness

Mrs. Woop had died, and Dad wanted to put up some sort of memorial to her. A stained-glass window in the local church being suggested, Dad agreed, and left all arrangements with the minister.

At length the window arrived. Dad, unusually excited, set out to view it.

The minister escorted the old chap into the church and, with a flourish, indicated the window, which depicted an angel.

"How do you like it?" said he.

Dad gazed at it thoughtfully.

"No good," he grunted.

"Why, what's your objection?"

Farm Land Speculation Is Threat to Agriculture

Government Warns Against Fever of Land Buying That Would Start Another 'Unhappy' Economic Cycle for U. S.

By BAUKHAGE
National Farm and Home Hour Commentator.

WNU Service, 1343 H. Street, N. W. Washington, D. C.

Farm income—cash income—will be nearly $11,000,000,000 this year. That is two billions greater than last year.

Money to burn!

And the burning question in Washington is how to stop the conflagration before it starts. The chief danger is another prairie fire of farm land speculation such as started out in Iowa in World War I. First there were wash sales. They were publicized. Real sales began which sent farm prices up to the blue skies and which ended by making a farm mortgage the cheapest form of wall paper.

Two years after that World war started, the prices of farm land rose 5 per cent. Not much later they leaped a hundred per cent and more. The eventual collapse was forerunner of the depression.

Today, two years after the present war started, farm land prices are up 1 per cent. That isn't so bad but the government is already worried enough to consider it worth while trying to start a back fire in the hope of preventing a recurrence of the unhappy cycle which began 25 years ago.

When Governer Black of the Farm Credit administration called in the farm mortgage bankers, the insurance people, farm organization representatives and others in the rural real estate field he simply reminded them that when the government loaned the farmers the money to bail them (the mortgagors) out last time, it was done on appraisals based on normal values. Now it is up to the real estate people to make their appraisals on normal values, too. That means on figures based on the relationship between farm products prices and other prices established for the years of 1914-1918.

A million farmers who were loaned money by the Farm Credit administration during the depression have repaid their mortgages. Those farmers are keenly aware of the danger to agriculture and to the whole economy if a fever of mad land-buying starts again. They will help stop it, if they can. The government will do all in its power in the way of education—meetings will be held—the house organ of the Farm Credit administration which has a million circulation will carry the warning. The real estate operators have indicated that they will cooperate.

Whether money to burn will burn the farmer is still uncertain. In the end, stopping another drunken orgy of land speculation and the terrible headache afterward depends on the word-of-mouth message of the individual. The burned child fears the fire but there is always someone to urge him to risk a blister for the delicious chestnut he sees roasting on the coals.

Policy—Orders—Action—Silence—

"As Commander in Chief of the Army and Navy I order the following policy carried out at once: our patroling vessels and planes will protect all merchant ships—not only American ships but ships of any flag—engaged in commerce in waters which we deem necessary for our defense. American naval vessels and American planes will strike the first blow against Axis submarines or Axis raiders on the surface of the sea."

This communication in substance was transmitted to the office of the secretary of the navy from the White House a few weeks ago.

There it was immediately translated, first into naval language and then into code. Over land wires to the wireless towers near Annapolis it was flashed to ships of the United States navy on the seven seas . . .

It is early morning. A thin steely light spreads across the horizon as the U. S. destroyer "Blank," a part of the Atlantic patrol, rides the easy swells. On board, the smooth routine goes on with its clock-work monotony. But there is the ghost of a grim smile exchanged between the captain and the executive officer—they have both read the coded message recorded by the wireless operator a little while before.

Three minutes later the ship is galvanized from galley to crows-nest.

A strident gong has sounded. The bos'n's whistle is trilling high above the wash of the waves and the whirr of the engines for the word has come down from the lookout:

"Torpedo track sited. Starboard bow. —4-0!"

The gong sounds—that might mean any emergency but before there is time to wonder the order rings out—

"All hands to general quarters."

Before the gun crews have ripped off the site covers, the executive officer has reported to the captain: "Battle stations manned, sir."

The "torpedo track," a ribbon of white moves forward toward the destroyer at the rate of 1,000 yards a minute. But the tube of high explosive itself, which is sending up the tell-tale "track" of bubbles is 40 yards ahead of the nearest one that shows—it takes some time before those bubbles can reach the surface.

The bearing of the torpedo is verified and the destroyer swings and leaps "full-speed-ahead" to meet it. Not because the captain wants to contact the whirring death-bolt head-on, but because there is less chance of a hit if the ship shows its beam instead of the length of its hull as a target. And the objective of the destroyer is a spot as nearly over the point where the submarine is submerged as it is possible to estimate it. That point is reached for the torpedo has missed its mark while ears are glued to the sound-detector straining for the noise of the sub's engines.

"Release depth charges."

Down go the "ash-cans," one after another; mounds of water rise; the sound detector is deafened. The destroyer, turning sharply, returns to the spot and releases another series of charges.

The roar dies in the detectors. There is silence.

And that is the end of the story. Perhaps it is the end of the submarine. It is quite possible that no one will ever know what happened until after the war—perhaps not then. And even if some tell-tale piece of equipment is blown from the inside of the sub and reaches the surface, that does not mean that the public will know. At least not for a long time.

Seasonal Glory In National Capital

Washington is standing on the threshold of its seasonal glory—"October's bright blue weather," the month of beauty in the capital.

Already the early morning sun comes down in soft blue bars and August's heavy carpet of shadow on pavement and lawn is thinned to a lacework pattern as the leaves shrivel and drop.

Gardens have faded but there is one hardy bush (Rose of Sharon?) which blooms before the more modest doorways. A cross between a hollyhock and a morning glory it is hardier than either.

The city wakes with a new vigor now that the tropic days are over. Women government workers are out with a brisk step for a last stroll with dogs or babies, whichever they possess, before they go off to the "office." Landladies straggle homeward cheerfully with their bags and parcels. But trolley cars still lag and jerk, packed to the doors with the new thousands who crowd the sagging city with the clerks of Mars.

Suez Canal Symbol Of British Power

Symbols are often more powerful than facts or things in influencing the public. The Suez canal has always been considered Britain's life-line. It is the symbol of Britain's sea-power, of the bonds that hold the Empire together, of British achievement.

And yet the canal is as much French as British, both in construction and control. What is more, months ago it became of highly questionable value because for weeks at a time it has had to be closed as a result of attacks from the air.

Long ago shrewd Britons realized that they must prepare for the eventuality of the loss of the Suez. At least five years ago a book was published pointing out that in case of war Britain must be prepared to protect ship routes around Africa.

BRIEFS . . . by Baukhage

- A high government official said the other day (privately, of course): "If 50 per cent of the people working on defense in Washington were fired the work of the remainder would be more efficient." Oh, make it 33½ per cent!
- Some 6,700,000 pounds of pots and pans collected in the aluminum drive are now being processed into fighting planes.
- "My colleagues have undoubtedly observed that the color of the walls of the senate chamber is the same as that of caskets."—Senator Andrews.
- Warning to politicians: Nobody has ever been elected on his opponent's platform.
- The big brass bell on fire engines is doomed. The brass is needed for defense.

WHO'S NEWS THIS WEEK

By LEMUEL F. PARTON
(Consolidated Features—WNU Service.)

NEW YORK.—Although the answers to the famous inquiry of Pontius Pilate aren't all in yet, we assign a man to discover and tell us what is truth.

'Tis Said, 'Truth May Lie at the Bottom of a Well'

Dr. James P. Baxter III, president of Williams college, takes on this office, for Col. William J. Donovan, co-ordinator of defense information. His job will be to screen out from the mine-run of world information the dubious, tricky or deceptive items of propaganda or distortion and deliver to the President and the state department the chemically pure raw material for policy-making. This "fact-filter" appears to be news in world statecraft.

In the midst of a long address which Dr. Baxter delivered in 1938 was the following pertinent utterance, foreshadowing his new undertaking:

"The first element of defense is truth. Inculcation of the zeal to get at the truth, no matter what the cost of time and effort, characterizes real education."

Is it possible that this led Colonel Donovan to his truth-seeker? In the above address and on several later occasions, Dr. Baxter denounced "defeatism," and has been a spirited advocate of a "militant democratic faith," which would not wait until it was enslaved before fighting back.

After his graduation from Williams college in 1914, Dr. Baxter tried Wall Street for two years, with the Industrial Finance corporation, and then returned to Williams and Harvard for master's and doctor's degrees. He taught history at Colorado college and Harvard and became president of Williams in 1937. With him on the new truth-filtering board are six other professors, all skilled researchers in the entomology of the propaganda bug. They have as an unofficial precedent the extensive researches of the Institute for Propaganda Analysis.

THEODORE ROOSEVELT would have approved highly of his fellow townsman of Oyster Bay, Col. Van Santfoord Merle-Smith, just now arriving at Sydney, Australia, as the newly appointed naval attache. He is tall, handsome and physically impressive, always lookin' for action.

Always Somethin' Stirrin' Wherever Merle-Smith Goes

At Princeton, young Merle-Smith "hit the line hard," as a backfield football star; he was a hell-for-leather cavalry officer on the Mexican border, and in the World war, he mixed in the fighting wherever he could find an opening, was wounded three times and was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross; he had a fling at statecraft, at The Hague and in our state department; he engaged in the rough-and-tumble of Wall Street, winning every bout, and as a yachtsman could make more out of a hat full of wind than anybody on the Long Island shore.

All in all, his career would make T. R. flash a couple of octaves of teeth and yell "Bully!"

He is the son of the late Dr. Wilton Merle-Smith, who was pastor of the Brick Church of New York, and has long been active as one of the leading Presbyterian laymen. After his graduation from Princeton in 1911, he took his law degree at Harvard in 1914. He was a member of the American secretariat at the Paris peace conference, and in 1920 was appointed third assistant secretary of state.

For several years after 1935, his yacht, Seven Seas, was showing her heels to competing craft, but more recently Colonel Merle-Smith has been shore-bound by ill health.

He practiced law with a distinguished New York firm, in the immediate post-war years, and entered the investment banking field about a decade ago. He is now a member of the advisory committee of the New York Trust company.

Colonel Merle-Smith in all probability will find action even in the Australian navy.

GEN. JORGE UBICO is named by a "constitutional congress" for his tenth consecutive term as president of Guatemala, his incumbency to continue until 1949.

He was first elected for a one-year term, survived two revolutions, and then set aside the constitutional limitation against more than one term. He is hard-boiled and diligent, brilliantly educated and strongly pro-United States. He is startlingly like Napoleon in appearance, with a haircut like the little corporal's, understudying Napoleon in attitudes, dress.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON & ROBERT S. ALLEN

WINTER PLANS

As far as can be ascertained, the most important point under discussion between Hitler and Mussolini during their recent visit to the Russian battle lines was a plan by which Italian troops would hold down a sizeable portion of the German front during the Russian winter stalemate.

Naturally, no one outside the Fascist-Nazi high command really knows the details of what happened. However, Mussolini squawked so loudly over Hitler's demands, that their general nature leaked out in Rome—where a lot of army leaders are none too friendly to the Axis.

Hitler's theory, bluntly put, was that the Italians were no good as fighters; so during the winter months when there was no fighting to be done, they could move into the trenches and protect the German lines.

Then Hitler could ship his troops down to Africa, and could clean up the whole of North Africa before spring and good fighting weather returned to Russia. Hitler figured that during the winter he could take over all of French North Africa, Egypt and the Suez canal, then penetrate to Dakar—from which he would have a base against South America.

It has long been known that Hitler realizes he has to move fast in Africa and the South Atlantic, or the United States will be strong enough to block him.

Mussolini's reaction to this plan was anything but enthusiastic. Aside from the ignominy of withdrawing from Italy's proposed field of conquest—Africa—Il Duce argued that Italian troops could not stand Russian winters. They would die of pneumonia in such a rigorous climate.

Whether Mussolini finally agreed is not known.

Note: The Nazi plan apparently is to put 250,000 Hungarian troops in the Russian trenches during the winter; plus 200,000 Rumanians; plus about 50,000 Slovaks and about 500,000 Italians. The German army during the winter would be reduced to a mere skeleton of about 100,000 men.

NEW IMPRESSIONS

Washington newsmen, after seeing Roosevelt twice a week for eight years, have only dull impressions when they walk into a press conference. A fresh impression comes from Jack Moffitt, ace Hollywood reporter, who saw the President the other day for the first time.

"There was charm in the setting," Moffitt said. "The mementoes on his desk indicate a man of imagination who can extract pleasant memories from past experiences . . . He costumes well. Hoover's choker collar became a symbol of Tory America. Coolidge dressed like a small town banker. Roosevelt avoids the foppish, but hits a certain suburban ease in his dress which sells quickly to the public.

"He was impressive in handling himself. There was ease and frankness, and a quickness in response to questions. He was at all times master of the interview.

"I was struck by his paleness and the lines in his face, contradicting the smirk I've seen in a thousand cartoons. If I were a casting director, looking for an actor for this part, I'd cast him as a man who is working hard under great strain."

* * *

UNDER WAR SECRETARY

Newsmen sat three deep around a long polished table in the new war department building. They fired questions at the man with a sun-tanned face sitting at the head of the table. He was the under secretary of war.

What's a T-6 tank like? . . . Are M-3 tanks available for the maneuvers? . . . Did the French find the 75 mm. tank gun effective? . . . What is the altitude range of the 90 mm. anti-aircraft gun? . . . Is the army in Iceland? . . . What do you think about the Russian resistance?

He ducked the last two questions, but answered all the technical questions with the assurance of a soldier trained all his life in ordnance.

But he isn't a life-long soldier. He is a lawyer, an ex-circuit court judge, who scarcely a year ago was concerned with such non-military subjects as the reorganization of the New York subway.

This was a press conference with the under secretary of war, Robert P. Patterson. A judge in 1940, he is a soldier in 1941, with a complete grasp of the technical information of his job.

CAPITAL CHAFF

The President is wearing a black four-in-hand tie these days, as well as the black armband.

Latest addition to Roosevelt's trinket-laden desk is a white porcelain figure of Churchill with a cigar in his mouth.

OPM has a defense job waiting for movie star Marlene Di trich as soon as her broken ankle is mended. They want to use her glamorous gams (legs) to publicize cotton stockings for women, made necessary by the shutting off of Japanese silk.

The New Hat

By SELMA HART
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

BILL KEMP, the head of the exchange department, looked up wearily from his desk. It had been a day of odd jobs—refunds, complaints, exchanges. Everything had been relatively unimportant and yet everything demanded instant attention. Had Bill Kemp been ten years older than he was he would not have taken it so seriously, and consequently would have been nearly as fresh at the end of the day as he was early in the morning.

"I want," said a pair of violet eyes, at least Bill Kemp would have sworn that it was the eyes that spoke, so timidly and questionably did they regard him. "I want to know if I could do something about my lace hat."

Bill Kemp sighed. They were such marvelous eyes. And then to be mundanely interested in a hat—a silly lace hat.

"Well," he said gruffly, "what did you contemplate doing about this lace hat? If it's been worn it cannot possibly be accepted for exchange or refund."

The latter words issued mechanically from his mouth, and he wondered subconsciously how many hundreds of times he had uttered that same sentence — sometimes about gloves, sometimes about hair goods, sometimes about shoes.

"Oh, it hasn't been worn!" came the soft voice again. The voice sounded as though it were full of tears and he looked at the violet eyes again. Sure enough, there were large tears there.

Bill Kemp steeled himself. All women used tears as a means to an end and he determined that he would not be taken in. "Well, go on, go on," he said as testily as he could.

"You see I decided last Saturday that I could take it—it's a beautiful hat. Oh, it was really the most beautiful hat in the whole world, I think," she said wistfully. "I looked and looked at it—before, you know—and on Saturday I paid a deposit on it, a deposit of a dollar. I was to take it this Saturday, but—" the lips that were soft and pink closed firmly. "I—I believe that I shan't need it after all."

"And so you want the dollar back again I take it?" he said, tapping his pencil against the desk and regarding it coolly.

"Oh, my, no," she said softly. Of course they wouldn't give back the dollar, but I went to the millinery department and the clerk said that I had agreed to take it and I would have to finish paying for it. I—I have the money, but—"

"Will you sit down?" said Bill Kemp, rising suddenly, wondering why it was that he had not thought of it before. "I haven't been head of the department long and I am at a loss to understand one thing. Why do women buy a thing, take it home and then run right back here to return it?"

The violet eyes crinkled at the corners and the soft pink lips twitched. "I don't know," she confessed. "I never do myself. It's not that I probably wouldn't if I had the chance, but I work and so scarcely have time to buy what I need let alone buying things for the fun of thinking I really owned them for a while before I returned them. It must be lots of fun, mustn't it?"

"And so you want to leave this flower hat on our hands," he expostulated.

"Oh, no, not flower!" she exclaimed in horrified tones; "it's lace. And besides, I don't want to leave it on your hands. I'd love to keep it myself only I heard about this Mrs. Benzinger whose husband is in the hospital and whose children are all so small that she can't work. It wouldn't be right to wear a lovely hat when they might be—hungry. If you say I don't have to take the hat I'm going to take a basket out there tonight." She looked at her watch. "It's 'way, 'way out in—"

"You run along and get the basket and I'll see about the dollar refund. Then when you get the basket filled come back here and get the dollar and I'll take the basket out for you—wherever it is. You can't be running all over town—a girl like you—"

He listened to her words of thanks with an air of abstraction. "We ought to get a bit of supper at a restaurant, first, maybe," he said nonchalantly, quite as though he were in the habit of asking strange girls to eat with him. He sent the call boy for the dollar and pulling a card from his pocket, wrote down: "She'd like a hat—lace—later."

And the violet-eyed Mrs. Bill Kemp with her still-shiny wedding ring was happily surprised on her birthday a few months later with a round hatbox with a huge violet bow. The hatbox held a hat of lace.

Diamonds, Platinum in Steel

Diamonds and platinum, used in steel manufacture, run into thousands of karats and grams a year. Most diamonds look like dark gray, sharp-edged pebbles, cost $100 a karat, come from Brazil, are known as "carbons." Another type of diamond used is "borts," imperfect white diamonds, cost $30 a karat. Diamonds are for rock drilling in iron ore mines, for truing grinding wheels, for making dies for drawing wire. Platinum, fine jewelry grade, has at least 10 different uses in steel laboratories.

Kathleen Norris Says:

Life Is Too Short for Jealousy

(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

It never occurred to Sally that in every town there are women who make a business of entertaining celebrities. If she had stopped to think she would have realized that these stars could have no interest in Martha.

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

> WHICH IS BETTER?
> Which is better—to make the most of what you have, or to make yourself miserable because you can't have what someone else has? You can, says Kathleen Norris, turn your assets to such advantage that you make what you have seem good, whether or not it is exactly what you think you want. The story of Sally and Martha is the old, old story of the girl who has everything and the girl who thinks she has nothing worth having. Be sure to read Kathleen Norris' advice to the Sallies of this world—those who don't have, or don't use, the good sense to make the most of themselves.

FOR the 17 best years of her life Sally Davis was envious of Martha Stevenson. Then Martha was injured in a motor accident and died of a lingering disease. Sally made no secret of her sense of personal satisfaction and triumph. Which was worse for her—the long years of jealousy or the cruel pleasure in another woman's tragedy—it would be hard to say.

None of it hurt Martha, but it destroyed Sally. From 17 to 34 she felt her life shadowed, twisted, spoiled by Martha's perfections, and after seventeen years of feeling like that no woman can ever get back to normal. Sally will be petty, jealous, unhappy for the rest of her days. Once jealous always jealous is not just an old saying; it is a simple psychological truth.

Not that there was anything remarkable about Martha. A hundred other women were prettier, smarter and more fortunate. But Martha was one of those maddening girls who make other women think that everything they have is somehow mysteriously better than anything anyone else has. Martha had a way, even in high school, of dressing up her trips and possessions and friends and plans that made them seem all-important. And she would comment upon what the other girls had to relate in a sympathetic, amused manner that seemed to put them into a different class.

Took Martha Seriously.

Sally always took Martha seriously; it seemed to be her fate. She watched Martha as a cat watches—or used to watch in less hygienic days—a mousehole. She reported upon Martha's doings in so obvious a mood of trembling jealousy that they really began to seem as enviable as Martha tried to make them.

The school girls scattered, went their happy, absorbed ways. But it was Sally's destiny always to be within sight of Martha, and to marry the man whose boss Martha married. Martha had a smart city apartment; Sally lived out with Joe's mother in the country. Martha had one tidy little lifeless girl, and she somehow made it seem amusing and pitiable in Sally to have four children.

Martha attracted clever persons to her Sunday lunches, managed a sort of studio atmosphere, dressed in oriental silks. Sally came in from the farm to some of these lunches; Joe not liking it much, but feeling he must keep in with the boss, the children protesting, the car in none too good shape, Sally's clothes not quite right, and Sally in purgatory. To witness Martha's success and to hear her praised almost killed Sally, but she seemed drawn into it as a moth to a flame. Envy had its terrible way with her, and her very soul was corroded by it.

When she heard that a singer or a lecturer was coming to town she would say, "I suppose Martha is going to entertain him?" And when she was answered that indeed Martha was, she writhed mentally. It never occurred to her that great singers and movie actors and lecturers all have dull wives and relatives and secretaries, and that these supposedly desirable guests can eat up food and drink up wine in a way that sends bills skyrocketing and weary a hostess almost to tears.

A Dull Business.

It never occurred to her that in every town and village there are a few women who make a business of following up celebrities and entertaining them. If Sally had stopped for a moment to think she would have realized that these glittering stars could have no possible interest in Martha. They went to Martha's house because it was cheaper and more comfortable than the hotel. Concert tours and personal appearances are a dull business in strange towns, and any amusement is welcome.

Sally never thought of what she might have made of the farm. Of the outdoor meals, the simple hospitality, the four delightful children in sandals and sun-suits, the up-building of a family life that might have made Martha's tinsel achievements seem small indeed. She might have had Martha's tepid little girl out for visits, and have had Martha feeling a little twinge of jealousy in turn because Thelma preferred Aunt Sally's farm to her own home. She might have had thousands of hours of gardening, hundreds of picnics, years of cloudless happiness. Instead she nurtured a bitter sense of wrong; nothing that Joe could do compared with what Martha's husband gave her.

Sally got so that when she could buy a new coat she must manage that Martha saw it; she must ask Martha casually what she thought of it. And when Martha said gently, "I'm waiting until Braumann's new coats are here; they tell me they're going to be much plainer," Sally promptly hated her coat and felt like a martyr because she had to wear it.

"My children are terrible little wild Indians!" she said to Martha, even though in her heart she knew they were perfect. And it stung her soul for days when Martha said pleasantly, "Well, truly, I think any woman is heroic to try to bring up four children without a nurse. I don't think one can do any one of them justice."

Letter upon letter comes to me from women who have everything in the world to make them happy, who would be considered fortunate by 99 out of every 100 women in the world, and yet who are eating their hearts out because of the imagined or real superiorities of some old friend.

Lose Youth and Beauty.

They lose their sense of proportion; they lose youth and beauty; they wrong everyone to whom they owe service and affection by the constant fresh miseries of watching what that other luckier woman is doing. We make our own heavens on this earth, and our own hells.

Use Milk Can to Preserve Blood

Scientists Find Method to Refrigerate Liquid for Army Emergencies.

CHICAGO.—Two scientists have recommended the common milk can as an effective means of storing blood for army emergencies "under all military conditions."

The "milk can" bank was explained by Drs. Elmer L. De Gowin and Robert C. Hardin in War Medicine, published by the American Medical association and the national research council's medical division.

Terming the product of their investigation "a new, simple method for collecting, storing and transporting human blood plasma," the Iowa City, Iowa, physicians said they had developed and tested a bank which would have the following recommendations:

Practical usability under shell fire.

Ability to withstand long distance shipment in any vehicle.

Easy maintenance by a supply sergeant or other enlisted man.

Use limited only by accessibility of snow or cracked ice for repacking every 18 to 24 hours.

Make Many Tests.

The doctors disclosed that the new preservation method was equally applicable to whole blood and blood plasma (fluid part without red cells) but stressed the significance of plasma.

Physicians consider plasma of vital military importance because it can be used for quick transfusions without matching the type of the patient.

De Gowin and Hardin made the principal unit of their bank by fitting large glass flasks, in common use in hospitals, with rubber stoppers allowing self-closing needle punctures.

Tests showed the flasks could be immersed in ice water for long periods without leakage, and the contents safely administered directly from the flasks. They found that the red cells would precipitate in 24 to 48 hours.

Next, the scientists developed a delicate temperature indicator, simple enough for layman or soldier to read. A supply sergeant or someone else, the doctors said, could discard flasks whose indicators showed proper temperatures had not been maintained.

Find Milk Can Best.

Searching for economical refrigeration containers, Hardin and De Gowin discovered after several experiments that "the commercial type of 10-gallon milk can" was most practical. Covered with insulated jackets, such cans accommodate 10 flasks and enough ice for 12 to 24 hours.

"The transportation of blood in these individual refrigeration units ought to be particularly practical under shell fire," the doctors said, "for the cans could be disbursed in many types of vehicles so that some would almost certainly arrive at their destination."

To test the banks, the physicians shipped two consignments of cans, one 720 miles by automobile and one 3,539 miles by airplane. The contents in both shipments were transfused to hospital patients requiring such treatment.

From 40 transfusions, there was only one unfavorable reaction, that of a patient suffering chills and fever.

Bedtime Story by Thornton W. Burgess

PETER AND THE HUNTER ARE CLOSE TOGETHER

IT WAS a smart dog who was chasing Peter Rabbit. There was no question about that. Even Peter himself admitted it, and you know Peter is rather inclined to think that dogs are very easy to fool; in fact that they are not smart at all. But this one wasn't easy to fool. Peter had tried every one of the common tricks and not one of them had bothered that dog for more than a few minutes. It was clear that he knew a great deal about rabbits and their ways.

Peter wouldn't have minded this particularly if the dog had been alone, but when Peter found that a hunter with a dreadful gun was looking for him and was standing where he could shoot Peter if he should try to run to the dear old Brier Patch, why then Peter did begin to get a little worried. It was very clear that he must get rid of that dog somehow. Without the dog the hunter never could find him, never in the wide world.

So Peter ran a little harder than before, lipperty-lipperty-lip, just like that.

When he had almost caught up with the dog, Peter ran off to one side in a straight line a little way and he ran very fast. Then he turned around and ran straight back in his own tracks almost to where he had turned off and there he did a very surprising thing. That is, it would have been surprising to anyone who didn't know Peter and his tricks. He leaped off to one side, making just the longest leap he possibly could so that there was a long distance between the place where his feet left the earth and where they touched it again. Then he did it again and again and still again. After that he headed straight for the Laughing Brook and when he reached it he ran along in the water on the very edge until he came to a hollow log lying on the bank. That log was hollow its whole length and open at both ends. Peter crawled into it from the end nearest the Laughing Brook and there he made himself comfortable while he rested and listened to the dog.

He could tell just what that dog was doing as well as if he were watching him. You see Peter leaves a little scent in his tracks. He can't help it. So all the dog had to do was to keep his nose to the ground and follow that scent. All the time he kept barking to let his master know that he was following Peter. When he reached the place where Peter had turned and ran back along his own tracks he was puzzled and stopped barking. After a little he began to work back. He suspected what Peter had done, but he wasn't quite sure and he didn't bark much. When he reached the place where Peter had made the long jump to one side he stopped barking altogether. Peter smiled. He knew just how that dog was running back and forth trying to make out where Peter had gone. After a while he barked once. He had found the place where Peter had touched the ground after his long leap.

He could tell just what that dog was doing as well as if he were watching him.

Now, that dog had patience and perseverance. He kept at it until at last he found where Peter had started for the Laughing Brook. Once more his voice rang through the Green Forest. But when he reached the Laughing Brook he stopped barking. You see the running water had carried away Peter's scent. Peter chuckled. By and by he heard the hunter come over and talk to the dog and encourage him to hunt for the lost scent. Then he heard the hunter come tramping along the bank of the Laughing Brook. What do you think happened then? Why, that hunter sat down on the very log in which Peter was hiding. Yes, sir, that is just what he did! He sat on the log while the dog hunted and hunted for the lost scent.

Of course it made Peter a little bit nervous, but he just had to laugh to himself to think how close together he and the hunter were without the hunter having the least idea of it.

'Paralyzed Oath' Is New One to Courtroom

PORTLAND, MAINE.—A "paralyzed oath" has no standing in municipal court. Answering a charge of assaulting a woman, a defendant in the court said: "I'll take a paralyzed oath that I never struck her." The defendant explained a "paralyzed oath" meant, "I will be paralyzed by the Almighty if I don't tell the truth."

Dried Human Blood Used With Success in Clinic

HOUSTON, TEXAS. — Dried human blood plasma that can save life for as long as five years after being taken from the donor's veins was one of the chief chemical developments on display at the recent Texas Pharmaceutical association convention.

The product, perfected by a leading pharmaceutical firm, was released for general hospital use June 2 after more than 10 years' experimental work in clinics and laboratories under the supervision of leading scientists.

Its chief advantage is that it is usable after long periods whereas liquid blood is seldom kept more than four weeks.

The product is made by freezing plasma to over 100 degrees below zero. With less than 1 per cent moisture when it is dry, it is sealed in vacuum containers and distributed for hospital or other professional use.

Liquid blood must be kept and transported with refrigeration but the dried plasma can be handled under adverse conditions, it was pointed out. Too, its use is extremely simple.

World's Most Narrow Harbor Entrance

Here is the narrowest harbor entrance in the world, spanned by a four-lane highway bridge of the Oregon Coast highway, U. S. 101. The entrance from the Pacific ocean to Depoe bay, Ore., is only 22 feet wide and nine feet deep. Only fishing craft, trawlers and sports boats can negotiate the tortuous channel.

Water Hyacinth Removal In Bayous Costly to U. S.

NEW ORLEANS. — Water hyacinths, spreading with the speed of tropical jungle growth, block more than 2,000 miles of Louisiana's swamps, bayous and inland waterways. Government appropriation for the job of clearing these floating flower fields from the water was $180,000 for the year July 1, 1940, to July 1, 1941.

After 42 years of fighting this water traffic hazard, victory is in sight.

Radio-Phosphorus

Radio-phosphorus, made by the University of California cyclotron, has been used in the treatment of leukemia, the unconquered disease in which white blood cells increase wildly causing death by sheer anemia. Rays hurled by the radio-phosphorus within the body do not cure leukemia, but afford remarkable relief and improvement to the patient who can resume his normal work and play.

Windsor Household Aids By Forming a Pig Club

WINDSOR, ENGLAND.—Like other patriotic citizens, members of the royal household at Windsor have formed a pig club—the 1000th to be registered with the National Pig Breeders council.

The scraps from the castle are being put to a new use. They go straight to the pigs.

Each member of the club paid a subscription of $4 and among them they own 52 pigs.

WOMEN OF FRANCE USE U. S. FLOUR SACKS FOR CLOTHING

VICHY, FRANCE.—Two hundred thousand sacks that contained the United States gift of flour to the people of unoccupied France have been transformed into sheets, aprons, bibs, dresses, shirts and underclothing for the children of French unemployed.

In an interview with the newspaper Journal a member of the unemployment bureau told how this had come about.

"One of our employees who was in Marseilles when the Red Cross was distributing the American flour happened to remark the flour sacks and to exclaim on the beautiful cotton material of which they were made," she said. "The Red Cross official present said that if they could be turned to useful purposes for the unemployed he would donate them gladly. The gift was arranged and thousands of French unemployed women received the task of preparing and making useful things from the sacks.

"By scraping and beating the sacks after they had been emptied by the Red Cross, these women were able to recover 30 kilograms of flour from each 5,000 sacks. This flour was distributed among the most needy of the unemployed.

"In the endeavor to remove the trade marks and designs stamped on the sacks the women found that part of the cloth turned to a pale pink. This part has been used in making underwear. The work on all the articles is fine, and they are serviceable.

'The string that tied the sacks was sorted, combed and made into yarn, and with it the unemployed women have knitted more than 4,000 suits of rompers.'

By Grantland Rice

NASHVILLE, TENN.—This is the story of one of the greatest pitchers—and one of the oddest ball players—that ever wore a spike or threw a curve ball.

He started his pitching career here at Sulphur Dell well over 40 years ago—and he is still working out every day at Redland field, Cincinnati.

His name is Noodles Hahn. Noodles Hahn, a slender left hander, set a record of 16 strikeouts for the revised National league. This was back in 1901 with the Reds. He floated his dinky-dinks by hostile bats year after year, back in the forgotten days.

But last fall I saw him working out before the first World series game in Cincinnati between Reds and Tigers.

"I haven't missed a day's workout for 40 years," Hahn told me. This means that Hahn, out of baseball for at least 25 years—still puts on the old uniform and takes over the day's warm up with the Reds. "I haven't missed a work out in this same park since 1915," he said again. That's some sort of a record, whatever it means. For 1899 wasn't yesterday. And you'll still find Noodles Hahn working out with Bucky Walters, Paul Derringer and other Red pitchers who were born long after Hahn set his 16 strikeouts mark.

Lefty Grove

Hahn was a left hander who belonged to the Herb Pennock, Eddie Plank school. He lacked the blazing speed of a Grove or a Rube Waddell, but he could tie up batters into more knots than 10 sailors could untie in a week. And you could see the seams on the ball as it came floating up.

Great Left Handers

Who are the greatest left handers baseball has ever known? Rube Waddell and Noodles Hahn, perfect opposites, were two of the best, dating back to 1900. Each held a strike out record of 16.

To this pair, covering the last 40 years, you can add Eddie Plank, Nap Rucker, Rube Marquard, Doc White (the left hander who always baffled Ty Cobb), Herb Pennock, the star of the stylists, Carl Hubbell and Robert Moses Grove.

From this list Rube Waddell and Lefty Grove undoubtedly had the big edge in physical stuff—which largely consists in speed. Speed—and a fast curve. Waddell had the fastest breaking curve ever thrown.

On the right handed side this distinction belonged to Dazzy Vance. Waddell and Vance could start a fast curve for your Adams' apple and have it kick up dust in front of the plate.

So could Nap Rucker—minus the speed. I happened to swing a few bats against Nap Rucker around 1903—swinging shoulder high—only to see the catcher take the pitch ankle high.

Toad Ramsey, one of the greatest, goes on back beyond the 40-year span. Toad had a curve ball you couldn't hit with two planks. His record was phenomenal. But that was too far away and too long ago.

How They Rank

Here's the left handed ranking I'll give you since 1900—all in order—

1. Lefty Grove; 2. Eddie Plank; 3. Rube Waddell; 4. Herb Pennock; 5. Carl Hubbell; 6. Nap Rucker. And Hubbell might be moved up into third place. A great pitcher.

From this list Grove and Waddell had the physical stuff. Waddell was the greatest genius of the lot—but too much on the erratic side. The Rube would rather fish or act as bartender than pitch a World series game.

Carl Hubbell

Grove and Plank, both under Connie Mack's direction, were the two greatest combinations of brilliancy and consistency.

They won the most games—which is a big part of the answer.

More than a few have ranked Herb Pennock as the top left hander of the long parade—for brains, control, style and the rest of it. Pennock was Bill Hanna's nomination—and Bill Hanna knew his share of baseball.

We'll still string with Grove, Plank, Waddell, Pennock, and Hubbell, in that order. Grove, at his greatest physical peak, was still learning how to pitch. I've seen him strike out six of the first nine Yankees and be hammered from the box two innings later. When Grove got to be canny and cunning he was almost unbeatable. For example 1931—when he won 31 and lost 4. That's what you might call pitching. Compare this to any 1941 record—I mean Feller or any of the others.

Coal Was Used in the Bronze Age

The popular legend is that coal was discovered by Joseph of Arimathea who, near Glastonbury in A. D. 67, found a black lump and took it to the monastery where it was thought to be a stone and thrown on the fire. It became known as "seacoles," and was first used generally as fuel in 1228.

It is now established that coal was used in Great Britain much earlier. Sir Cyril Fox, director of the National Museum of Wales, while excavating in the neighborhood of Bridgend, England, came across two cairns, both of the Bronze age. One had buried in it two adults and a child, and fragments of coal found with each set of remains show that coal was used in these cremation burials. It was also established that the burials took place about 1600 B. C.

'Trials by Touch'

As late as the Seventeenth century, America held "trials by touch," in which the defendant in a murder case was made to touch the corpse to see if it would give some indication that he was the guilty person, says Collier's. In one such trial in Virginia in 1663, several members of a family had to touch the body of a former Negro servant. But they were acquitted because Uncle Joe "gave no sign."

An Important Statement About Rubber in National Defense

AND WHAT YOU AS A CAR OWNER AND A LOYAL AMERICAN CAN DO ABOUT IT

Among the strategic raw materials so vital to national defense, rubber is one of the most indispensable.

Airplanes, scout cars, tanks and trucks — as well as thousands of vehicles necessary for transportation in defense industries — require tires, tubes, and hundreds of other products made from rubber.

And while no other nation in the world has such vast natural resources as the United States, all of our rubber must be imported across thousands of miles of ocean.

With world conditions as they are today, we must face the growing possibility that this country may be cut off from its principal sources of rubber supply.

Realizing the dangers of a single source of supply, Harvey S. Firestone began years ago the development of a huge million-acre tract of land in Liberia for growing rubber. Today, an ever-increasing amount of highest-quality rubber is being shipped to Firestone from these plantations.

At present, this country has on hand or in transit only enough crude rubber and finished products to last 13 months at present rate of consumption.

Comparison of rubber supply on hand and amount needed for one year at present rate of consumption.

Every month part of the rubber imported is used by the government to build up a reserve. The remainder is allotted to the rubber companies who must FIRST manufacture products needed for defense. They then use the rest to make the thousands of rubber products needed by automobile and other manufacturers and by the public.

New Firestone synthetic rubber factory

Fully aware of these serious conditions, Firestone has taken many steps to conserve and increase America's supply of rubber. In cooperation with the government, Firestone is now building another factory for the manufacture of synthetic rubber. This will greatly increase present capacity.

As a further step in conserving rubber, Firestone scientists and engineers recently developed the new wear-resisting Vitamic rubber compound, which enables car owners to get much greater mileage from their tires and thus save more rubber.

HOW EVERY CAR OWNER CAN HELP CONSERVE RUBBER

Today's conditions stand as a challenge to the loyalty and patriotism of American motorists. Here are a few common-sense rules of tire care which will save millions of pounds of rubber annually for your country — and save money for you.

UNDERINFLATED TIRES WASTE RUBBER

Look at this chart — if a tire with 30 pounds of recommended air pressure is run at 25 pounds, 32% of normal mileage is sacrificed! Save money and save rubber by having your tires checked every week.

SPEED WASTES RUBBER

Chart shows excessive speed is the greatest thief of tire mileage. An increase in speed of 50% may mean a 50% increase in the cost of operating your car.

QUICK STARTS AND SUDDEN STOPS ARE COSTLY

In quick getaways, wheels spin against the pavement, wasting rubber. Sudden stops cause your wheels to slide. Save rubber by starting and stopping slowly.

CHECK WHEEL ALIGNMENT AND HAVE BRAKES BALANCED

A wheel only ½-inch out of line is dragged sideways 87 feet per mile, scraping off tread rubber. Unbalanced brakes are equally wasteful of tire mileage. Save rubber by having your wheel alignment and brakes checked regularly.

CHANGE TIRES FROM WHEEL TO WHEEL EVERY 5,000 MILES

The diagram at the right shows how the tires on your car should be changed from one wheel to another every 5,000 miles. This plan of inter-changing tires saves rubber by eliminating uneven tire wear.

WHEN YOU NEED NEW TIRES . . . IT'S ALWAYS GOOD JUDGMENT TO BUY THE BEST

One of the most effective ways to save rubber — and at the same time save money and save precious human lives — is to equip your present tires with Firestone Life Protectors, the new-type tubes that out-wear three sets of ordinary tubes.

With Firestone Life Protectors on your car you can drive your present tires safely thousands of extra miles without fear of blowouts, because these tubes make a blowout as harmless as a slow leak.

And after your present tires are worn out, replace them with the safest, longest-wearing tires that money can buy — the new Safti-Sured Firestone DeLuxe Champion Tires — the only tires made that are safety-proved on the speedway for your protection on the highway.

You are invited to listen to the Voice of Firestone with Richard Crooks, Margaret Speaks and the Firestone Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Alfred Wallenstein, Monday evenings, over N. B. C. Red Network

Firestone ONE-STOP SERVICE

SAVES YOUR TIRES . . . SAVES YOUR CAR SAVES YOUR MONEY!

In every community there is a Firestone Dealer or Store that will gladly perform these services without one cent of cost to you.

INSPECT YOUR TIRES AND CHECK THEM FOR CORRECT INFLATION

Your tires will be properly inflated free at any time. Nails, glass or other objects are removed from the tread. Breaks in the tire body are located so that they may be repaired before damage occurs. These simple precautions increase tire mileage.

TEST YOUR BRAKES WITH THE MOST ACCURATE MACHINES

Balanced brakes prolong tire life. Firestone electric brake machines scientifically balance each wheel. Your Firestone Dealer or Store will gladly test your brakes free.

CHECK YOUR WHEEL ALIGNMENT WITH MOST MODERN EQUIPMENT

Pigeon-toed wheels that waste so much rubber and gasoline can be quickly aligned. Your car should be checked regularly for alignment — another free Firestone Service.

INSPECT AND TEST YOUR BATTERY

Your Firestone Dealer or Store will gladly test the battery free upon request. And their efficient equipment will tell the exact condition of each cell so that you may avoid annoying road delays.

TEST YOUR SPARK PLUGS

Unless your spark plugs have full firing power they waste gasoline. Your motor will fire unevenly and cause increased wear on running parts. Have your Firestone Dealer or Store test your plugs every 4,000 miles. There is no charge!

SAVE RUBBER BY RETREADING YOUR SMOOTH, WORN TIRES

If your smooth tire has a safe body, a rugged, tough, long-wearing, non-skid Firestone New-Tread can be applied at amazingly low cost, which will give up to 80% of the mileage built into the original tread. This is one of the best ways to save rubber.

Modern streamlined war may have changed the arms and methods of Uncle Sam's soldiers, but it hasn't changed the Army man's smoking preference. For more than 20 years Camels have been the Army man's favorite cigarette. Today, actual sales records show Camels not only are the favorite with men in the Army, but with men in the Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard as well. With men in the service giving cigarettes first place in the gift line-up, it's natural that local tobacco dealers are featuring "Send a Carton of Camels" as the ideal gift for the service men from the folks back home.—Adv.

HOLT WEEKLY NEWS

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor — Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Oct. 10, 1941. — Volume 31, Number 24

Partridge Season Opens Sat.

With the ruffed grouse population nearing the peak of its ten-year cycle, a plentiful supply of that species is indicated when hunters enter the fields Saturday (October 11) for the opening of 20 days of shooting.

The season on sharptail grouse and prairie chickens also will be opened Saturday in the northeastern zone, to continue through October 18.

The ruffed grouse population reaches a high point at ten-year intervals, studies by the Department of Conservation have revealed, a cycle which apparently operates independent of hunting harvests. The grouse may be taken through October 30 in virtually the entire northern half of the state, excepting only the western tier of counties and a few central Minnesota counties.

The open area is bounded by highways, and lies east and north of a line running roughly south from the Cananian border thru Roseau, Thief River Falls, and Detroit Lakes; southeast through Wadena, Little Falls, and St. Cloud and east to Taylor Falls.

The bag limit for ruffed grouse is five daily, ten in possession.

Shooting time is 7 a. m. to 4 p. m.

Chicken and sharptailed grouse are is Cook, Lake and most of St. Louis counties.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Hanson and Mrs. V. E. Oakey made a trip to Stewartville, Minn., last week where Mrs. Oakey attended the wedding of her brother. Mr. and Mrs. Hanson went from there to Milwaukee, Wisc. They all returned home Sunday evening.

Keep 1941 License Plates

Eldon Rowe, chief of the Minnesota Highway Patrol, today issued a warning to Minnesota motorists to keep 1941 lincense plates on their cars and trucks until the end of this year.

"Despite the repeated warnings of press and radio," he said, "patrolmen have detected many cars already displaying the new 1942 plates. The revised motor vehicle registration law, according to the ruling of Attorney-General J. A. A. Burnquist, demands the retention of 1941 plates until December 31st, with 1942 plates being required January 1st."

"If you are stopped on the highway," Chief Rowe said, "and your car already has 1942 license plates, you will be required to remove them and replace them with proper 1941 plates. If you have destroyed this year's plates, it will necessitate your obtaining duplicate plates at the regular fee for this service. So, to save yourself this inconvenience and expense, please abide by the law and keep your 1941 plates on your car until December, 31st."

George W. Karvonen will direct the 1941 Christmas Seal Campaign in this community, according to an announcement received this week from the Minnesota Public Health Association.

The local chairman is one of thousands of volunteer workers who give their time and effort annually without compensation to Minnesota's fight against tuberculosis.

The local campaign is part of the state and national movement to eradicate tuberculosis.

Building Up New Farm

Another young farmer, who has shown his faith in this community by wanting to stay here, is Oscar Reierson. He has recently purchased an 80-acre tract of land east of the old P. N. Pederson farm southwest of town and has bought the lumber for a new house and barn which he is having put up on the land at once. He is at present occupying the Pederson farm which he has been renting, and which has according to reports been sold to another local farmer.

Sagstuen-Ranum Wedding

Miss Clarice Sagstuen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carsten Sagstuen, became the bride of Mr. Sidney Ranum of Viking. The vows were spoken at the Mission church parsonage at Viking with Rev. Franklin Duerre officiating, on Saturday of last week. Attendants were Miss Phyllis Prestby and Mr. Raymond Rupprecht of Thief River Falls.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lorentson, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden, Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Fricker, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Karvonen, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Sabo, Miss Otis, Miss Lee and Miss Sandberg were among those who attended the Parents-Teachers meeting at Newfolden on Friday evening.

Side roads have become so thoroughly soaked up that it is almost impossible to get thru them even with Model A Fords. Some of the main roads are not much better and the heavy buses are having quite a time plowing thru the deep ruts.

Thief Lake Development

Tentative plans for large-scale development of the 16,000 acre Thief Lake Public Hunting Grounds project in Marshall county under a $128,000 Pittman-Robertson federal aid project were disclosed this week by the Department of Conservation.

Frank D. Blair, State Supervisor of Game, said the project, if approved by federal authorities, would cover five years and will develop Thief Lake into the most efficient state owned public hunting grounds in the nation.

Major points of the proposed developement program:

1. Planting 6,000 acres with thousands of trees, shrubs and vines as food and cover for wildlife.
2. Planting of 10,000 acres to aquatic and semi-aquatic food plants for waterfowl.
3. Operation of aquatic ponds for production of aquatic plants on the area, and the northwestern portion of the State.
4. Construction of fences, bridges and road culverts.
5. Construction of firebreaks through the area.
6. To remove five sets of farm buildings and fences from the refuge.
7. Remodeling of a farmer-caretaker's house.
8. Fencing around portions of the refuge.
9. Landscaping large portions of the area.

Drained at the turn of the century to provide farm lands, Thief Lake was abandoned after agriculture proved unsuccessful. In 1933 the Department of Conservation restored the area with a dam on the Thief River. At present it is widely patronized public hunting ground.

RUSSIA:
Adding Machines

While Berlin had been making its adding machines ring out to them joyous accounting of the utter Soviet collapse of resistance to the south, asserting that 665,000 prisoners had been taken, and "some 300,000" had been slain, the Russians still painted a different picture.

Berlin had announced that "Russia has been all but knocked out of the war and the real turning point has come."

At the same time Russia had reported a sort of "inland Dunquerque" on the southern front, claiming that Marshal Semeon Budenny had succeeded in withdrawing considerable of his army, and that of 15 Russian divisions admittedly trapped in the Kiev battle, 10 divisions had escaped, and the other five "were in a position to give a good account of themselves."

Two towns had been named by the Russians as the critical points, one Achtyrka, and the other Kontstantinograd, where Marshal Timoshenko had been reported as attempting to separate the German forces to permit trapped troops to escape.

MARSHAL TIMOSHENKO
A tough job for the marshal.

Two of the divisions the Russian communique dated the same as the German had said, had completed their junction with the Timoshenko forces "only that morning."

The Russians admitted the Crimea was cut off from the mainland, but asserted that defense lines had been holding firm both from frontal attacks and from an air-borne invasion from the rear.

In fact the Russians claimed that the positions of her troops in the Crimea and at Odessa constituted a menace to the German right wing which the Nazis were fighting desperately to remove.

The Germans listed, in addition to the Kiev-southern successes, which they had maintained were complete and in the mopping up stage, drastic defeats of Russian naval forces, the "dooming" of Leningrad, and that it was "too late" for effective aid from the United States or Britain.

North American and British help for Russia, said the German statements, ignoring the reports of British planes actually on the front and fighting, "is on paper and will stay there if Russia must depend on transport through Iran and through Arctic seas, or through Siberia.

OIL NEED:
Seen by Reds

The Soviet, declaring that the advent of heavy snows will be a deathblow to Nazi hopes of quick victory, pointed to the all-out German drive toward the Caucasus as a sure sign that Germany needs oil to win the war.

The Moscow News had published an article saying, in part:

"It is only on the east front that winter plays a big part, and on the west front, where Hitler has unsolved problems, the need of oil is terrific.

"He is playing for big stakes in this furious drive toward the Caucasian oil fields.

"Effective action east and west is essential to foil Hitler's attempt to keep his war machine going."

The paper further stated that Germany had used up two-thirds of her oil reserves in the war against Russia.

ITALY:

Italy, according to reports both from Rome and from Alexandria, showing both sides of the picture, had been suffering heavily in late weeks of the war.

It was a "black" sea-month for Italian vessels, said the British African command, claiming that sinkings had totaled more than 200,000 tons, that four liners of more than 20,000 tons each, and each of them capable of carrying 5,000 German troops to Africa, had been put out of commission.

UNREST:
Spreading

Reports of unrest in Italy succeeded to stories of uprisings in most of the occupied countries of Europe, and the latest dispatches along this line came from the London radio describing conditions in Czechoslovakia, second of Europe's countries to be taken over by the Nazis.

It had been announced that Reinhardt Heydrich, former chief of police in Berlin, had been placed in charge of the protectorate of the Czechs, succeeding Baron Von Neurath.

Reports were, it had been stated, that there had been mysterious breakdowns in factories, explosions in munitions plants, train derailments, and that friction between Czechs and the German authorities was becoming "open."

Heydrich, London reported, would immediately set up courts martial with power to mete out death sentences for anti-Nazi activities.

Berlin sources reported an attempted revolt by part of the army in Czechoslovakia had been uncovered and at least 24 persons executed for their part in it.

At the same time Berlin declared that two residents of Germany itself had been condemned to death for listening to foreign radio stations, the first capital penalties exacted for this crime.

Also it had been reported that 22 more executions in occupied countries had been carried out.

A Brussels paper had reported 20 of these in connection with the belief by the authorities that Communists had stolen explosives from a storage place in northern France, and had used them to attack French trains and German army transport trucks.

One of the Germans sentenced for radio listening had been publishing pamphlets against Hitler, it was said, while the other was a Polish woman working for a German doctor. She was accused of using her employer's radio for her nefarious and illegal listening.

PROFITS:
And Patriotism

Profits, or restriction of them, had been linked to patriotic war efforts by Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau in a proposal for a bill for a profit-ceiling of 6 per cent on invested capital.

This had received a warm reception in certain capital circles, and not so warm in others. Senator George of Georgia, head of the senate finance committee, bitterly attacked the proposal on the ground that it would "result in incalculable hardship to legitimate business, would disrupt defense production and crush and kill small business."

SENATOR WALTER GEORGE
"Let the ink dry."

He urged congress to "let the ink dry" on the $3,500,000,000 tax bill before entering into another, larger revenue producer on a basis to take all of the profits of business save 6 per cent.

Most senators and representatives had been slow to comment, contenting themselves with saying they'd like to "think it over," and to "know more about it." It was when the word had gone out that Morgenthau had been drawing up such a bill, and when senators began to believe that it must have White House approval that Senator George launched his attack.

SHIPS:

The launching of 14 ships all on the same day at U. S. shipyards had marked an epoch in American shipbuilding, and was hailed by the President with congratulatory telegrams sent to each launching.

He revealed that this was part of a program that by next spring would see two vessels going down the ways every day, and by the end of 1943 would see the United States having built at least 1,600 merchant vessels to help regain the mastery and freedom of the seas.

Eagles Hunt Wolves

Golden eagles have been trained to hunt wolves. Flying at 100 miles an hour, the eagle drops at lightning speed with talons outstretched when it sights a wolf. The bird relies upon the shocking power of its dive. If he does not strike a vulnerable spot in the wolf, a fierce battle follows. Frequently, the eagle finishes second best.

First Musical Boxes

The prototype of the Nineteenth century musical box first became popular in the Netherlands, says Pathfinder. During the middle of the Fifteenth century, a Flemish organ-builder, Jehan van Steenken, obtained the first letters patent as "master of organs which play of themselves."

The dukes of Burgundy were patrons of inventors of ingenious mechanical boxes such as "organs which play of themselves," and musical clocks, birds, and snuff-boxes. Van Steenken received an annual pension for his invention from his liege lord, Philip the Good.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.
These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

NOTICE OF SALE

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, will meet at School House in said District in the Village of Holt, Minnesota, on Monday, the 27th day of October, 1941, at 8:00 o'clock, P. M., for the purpose of opening, receiving, and considering bids for the purchase of $22,000 Refunding Bonds of said District to be dated December 1, 1941, to bear interest at a rate designated by the successful bidder, but not exceeding 3% per annum, payable semi-annually, and shall mature serially on December 1, in the years and amounts as follows: $1,000 on December 1 in each of the years from 1942 to 1959, both inclusive, $2,000 on December 1, 1960, and $2,000 on December 1, 1961.

Both principal and interest will be payable at The First National Bank & Trust Company, in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota. The District will furnish the printed bonds and the approving legal opinion of Messrs. Fletcher, Dorsey, Barker, Colman & Barber, of Minneapolis, Minnesota, both without cost to the purchaser. All bids must be unconditional and accompanied by a certified check in the amount of at least 5% of the bonds bid for payable to the said District, to be forfeited as liquidated damages in case such bid is accepted and the bidder shall fail to comply therewith. Sealed bids may be mailed to the undersigned, and oral auction bids will be received at said meeting. The District reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to continue the sale as may be deemed expedient.

CCC Announcement for October

Young men between the ages of 17 and 23 are still being accepted for CCC enrollment according to word received from CCC officials. Any young man physically able to do manual work and in need of employment may apply at the Marshall County Welfare office for selection. Most of the young men selected will be forwarded to camp between October 20th and 31st.

Training in handling skilled jobs is a feature of CCC life. Young men wishing to learn a trade while earning money are urged to plan on a six month's CCC enrollment. Board, room and clothing plus $30.00 per month is paid each man. $15.00 per month is sent to a member of the young man's family and the balance is paid to the CCC enrollee. Plenty of vacancies exist according to reports received at this time.

Relatives, friends and neighbors gathered at the J. P. Benitt home on Sunday afternoon and gave Elda Benitt a bridal shower. A large crowd was present and the honor guest received many lovely gifts. A delicious lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hetland and baby visited relatives at Greenbush Sunday.

Dairymen To Meet

A situation that is held to be a serious one confronting the dairy industry today will be fully discussed at the 38th annual meeting of the Red River Valley Dairymen's Association at Thief River Falls on Wednesday, Oct. 22. Some of the members are "up in arms," so to speak, regarding the recent ruling by Paul V. McNutt, national social security administrator, which permits oleomargarine to be colored and flavored in imitation of butter.

The members of all of the various creamery boards in the Red River Valley are asked to attend a special meeting in the city auditorium there at 9:00a.m. This will be followed by a public meeting at 1 o'clock at the Thief River Falls High School Auditorium to which all dairymen are invited. At 6:30 p. m., there will be a banquet at the city auditorium.

Among the speakers at the session will be Congressman Andresson of the Frst District in this state, R. A. Trovatten, commissioner of agriculture, John Brandt, president of the Land O'Lakes; Prof. J. O. Christianson, head of the School of Agriculture, St. Paul, and E. F. Selvig, comptroller of the Midland Cooperative Wholesale.

Mrs. John Olson spent the week end at the Olaf Hagen home.

Basket Social

Don't forget the Basket Social at Sunnyside School, Dist. 59, Friday evening, Oct. 24. 1941. We know you'll have a good time Ladies, please bring baskets.

4-H Club News

Richard Fitzzimons of the Middle River 4-H Club was elected chairman of the Marshall County 4-H leaders council at the annual meeting held last Monday night. Mrs. Allan Grange, leader of the McCrea club was chosen as vice-president and Harold Rosendahl of the Boxville Club was elected as the secretary and treasurer. The leaders council holds monthly meetings on the first Monday of each month at the Argyle High School.

4-H club members from all Marshall County Clubs will celebrate the end of the 4-H year by attending the annual club banquet at Stephen on Saturday evening, October 18th. Festivities will begin with the evening meal at 7 p. m. served in Catholic Church basement. Following the meal the members, parents, and friends will go to the High School Auditorium where a program will be presented. The rest of the evening will be spent playing games and contests that will provide entertainment for both young and old.

There was a very small attendance at the meeting held in the schoolhouse regarding the Cemetery. No definite action could be taken in any manner. However, it was felt that since the present association is very inactive and shows little or no interest, it might be better if some means could be worked out so as to put it in charge of the village, if the village would be in favor of accepting it. A committee consisting of Ludvig F. Larson, Marvin Sandberg and Rev. T. C. L. Hanson was elected to study the matter further and call another Mass meeting later in the fall.

Farmers Pulled Out of Mud

Minnesota farmers are being pulled out of the mud at a rapid rate by the golden flow of automotive tax dollars now being collected from the state's motorists at a record-high level, it was announced today.

The 1940 census of the federal government shows that 10.3 per cent of the farms in this state are located on unimproved dirt roads, as compared with 25.3 per cent in 1930. That certainly shows remarkable progress during the past decade in pulling the farmers of this state out of the mud.

Striking progress also was made in extending hard-surfaced highways into all sections of the state. In 1940, the census shows 9.6 per bent of all the farms in this state were situated on hard-surfaced highways. as compared with only 2.1 per cent in 1930. Most of the farms in Minnesota are now either located on good roads or are within comparatively short distance of such good highways.

Mehrkens-Dierks

Miss Emma Mehrkens, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Mehrkens, and Mr. Bernard Dierks, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm Dierks of Goodhue, Minn., were united in marriage on Saturday at Goodhue with Rev. F. W. Weindorf officiating. Miss Lois Mehrkens was her sisters bridesmaid and Mr. Ernest Dierks, brother of the groom, was best man. They lett immediately for a honeymoon trip and a few days visit at the home of the brides parents here. They will make their home at Goodhue.

Insurance Expire Oct. 31

The attention of all Marshall County farmers, who carry crop insurance on their 1941 wheat crop, is called to note that October 31, 1941 is the expiration date of their insurance.

Due to prevailing weather conditions in the State, it has been deemed advisable to the interest of the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation that time be granted to cover insurance contracts on which the losses could not be determined before. Therefore, if anyone has a loss he must report such to the county office by noon of October 31, 1941.

Friends and Neighbors gathered at the Fred Voth home on Tuesday evening and gave Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Dierks a wedding reception. The Newlyweds were presented with a lovely bed spread, a cash purse and other gifts. Lunch was served.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Carlson attended homecoming at Concordia College, Moorhead, last week end.

Please pay your subscription.

Basket Social

For a good time, come to the Basket Social at Ringbo School, Dist. 58, north east of Holt on Friday, October 17. Ladies please bring baskets.
Aune Niemela, Teacher.

Will Receive Applications

The local office of the Division of Employment and Security in Thief River Falls in charge of C. H. Sjolander has received notice from the Lockeed Aircraft Corporation at Burbank, California that over 7000 more riveters and shop learners are needed for immediate employment. The Employment Office will, therefore, continue to receive applications of young men between the ages of 18 and 32 until further notice. All those who are interested in this type of employment are urged to contact the Employment Office in Thief River Falls at once to file formal application paper and to take the required Lockheed examinations.

So far over 120 young men from Marshall, Kittson, Roseau, Red Lake and Pennington counties have been tentatively accepted for work by the Lockheed or Vega Aircraft companies.

Eleanor Peterson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hj. Peterson, left on Wednesday for California where she expects to go to work.

Basket Social

Basket Social at the Pioneer School on Friday evening, Oct. 31st, Ladies please bring basket with lunch for two.

Come and you may get a free blanket. Games and Surprises.

- Analyze your own expenditures for the past year and you'll be surprised to see how living costs have gone higher . . . yet your electric rates are still low. Money you pay for electricity is one of the smallest parts of your annual budget, but we think you'll agree that it's one of the few items in your budget that hasn't been increased during the last 12 months.
- It is our job to furnish good electric service to you at the lowest possible cost . . . and we have planned year after year for present and future needs . . . which makes possible the present low cost of electricity for you. Even though the cost of living is going up and up we are doing our best to give you good electric service at low rates.

DiMaggio Scores Winning Run in Series

Joe DiMaggio, San Francisco's stellar contribution to "murderer's row," is shown sliding into the home plate with the winning run in the Yank half of the ninth inning of the fourth game of the world series, at Ebbets field, Brooklyn, N. Y. Henrich, who scored before him, stands by as umpire Goetz calls the play. Dodger catcher Owen got the ball too late. In this game the mighty Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers 7 to 4.

Navy Secretary Visits Bermuda Outpost

Secretary of the United States Navy Frank Knox recently visited Bermuda, an important U. S. naval base in the Atlantic. This official navy photo shows the secretary reviewing the sailors aboard the U. S. S. Augusta.

Brawn and Co-ordination for Flying Men

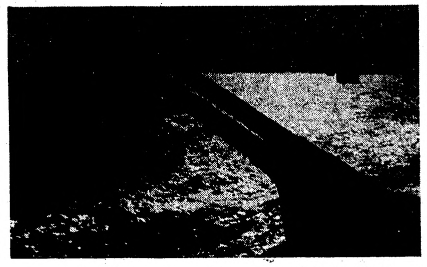
It might be just another physical ed class on another college campus, but this time it's aviation cadets at the "West Point of the Air," Randolph Field, Texas, who are building muscular co-ordination and body control. An hour a day of calisthenics and outdoor games keeps these prospective flying officers in trim.

Guarding the Life Line to British Shores



A striking photo is the above, taken somewhere in the Atlantic, and showing the guns of the British destroyer Holderness on guard over a convoy of British supply ships as they make their way across the sub-infested waters of the Atlantic. These ships with their holds laden with war supplies and food are the lifeline of the British.

Governor Weds

Arthur H. James, 58-year-old governor of Pennsylvania, is shown with his bride, the former Mrs. Emily Radcliffe Case, 48, widow of a member of the Cornell university staff, after their marriage in Doylestown, Pa. Only 150 guests attended, in line with the governor's desire for a quiet, unpretentious ceremony. The Rev. William Steckel of New Ipswich, N. H., married them.

If you have a relative or friend in the service and have any doubts about what to send him as gifts, your problems are over. The service men have solved it for you by naming tobacco as their first choice in gifts. Actual sales records show the favorite cigarette with men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard is Camel. Prince Albert is the popular smoking tobacco. With these preferences in mind, local tobacco dealers feature Camels by the carton and Prince Albert in the pound tin as ideal gifts to the men in the service from the folks back home. —Adv.

Unrest in Nazi Dominated Nations Results in 'Front-Behind-Front'; Hitler's 'Victory' Speech Is Puzzle As Russia Claims Important Gains

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler is shown in the Sportspalast in Berlin as he made his speech to open the annual drive for winter relief. He used the opportunity to tell the German people that his armies on the eastern front have scored great victories and that Russia is "already broken and will never rise again." He again predicted complete Nazi victory. In the seats of honor at the gathering were a number of wounded, seen at the left front in the above picture.

FRONT:
(Behind Front)

The old cliche that "there is nothing new under the sun" was fairly routed by the oddest of all wars when the unrest which had been boiling for months in countries occupied by Nazi Germany had begun to flare into strange and more open warfare.

And it was a queer warfare, with ultimatums flying back and forth, and nations in exile passing decrees on conquered peoples with the threat of "death if we ever get back in our countries again."

It was no laughing matter, either, for the era of mass executions had been reached, with the possibility in some quarters that Germans would be slaughtered wholesale, just as the Nazis were slaughtering victims in other quarters.

In Jugoslavia

Guerilla bands operating in the Serbian mountain districts, swooping down by night, had been capturing small detachments of Nazi soldiers, spiriting them away as captives, until they had amassed somewhere between 600 and 1,000 men, whom they were reported holding prisoners.

Came an ultimatum from guerillas to the Nazi occupational officers to this effect: "Continue to shoot Jugoslav hostages, and we shall execute our prisoners."

The German answer (requiring the use of a considerable force which presumably had been taken from the Russian front) was the reported sending of a panzer division of 12,000 men and to head it toward Belgrade, the former capital of former Jugoslavia to deal summarily with these guerilla bands.

In Norway

King Haakon (in exile in London) signed a decree providing the death penalty for crimes against the Norwegian state.

A counter-attack against this move had come from Josef Terboven, the Reich's commissar in Norway, who said: "Accept Germany's new order and regard Germany's enemies as yours, or face obliteration as a national state, and perhaps starvation."

This ultimatum was backed up, it had been reported, by the fact that more than 2,000 Norwegians were in concentration camps, many of them held as hostages.

The "new order" was the Quisling government, against which an underground and sometimes open revolt had been going on for two months or more.

And against this stood Haakon's decree, held a warning to any "tools" of the Nazis who might exert themselves to help the German authorities that if Norway regains its freedom they will face the death penalty.

In Bulgaria

While not occupied formally or as a result of warfare, Bulgaria was officially considered to be an Axis partner, and reports had emanated from Sofia, in the form of a victory dispatch, that Greek forces which had swooped over the borders into Bulgaria with rifles and machine guns seeking to organize a revolt among the Greek citizens of the country, had been "annihilated."

In Belgium

A bomb explosion, it had been reported, in Brussels, had killed Jean Oederkerke, secretary of the Rexist (Fascist) forces.

In Czecho Slovakia

The wholesale executions in Bohemia and Moravia (home of the Czechs) followed revelations that there had been operating there schools for saboteurs and for learning improved methods of slowing down factory production.

And these evidences of the widespread revolt were in addition to similar events which had resulted in executions in occupied and unoccupied France and in Holland.

BRIEFS:

Berlin: (by radio heard in New York) The world famous broadcaster "Lord Haw-Haw, Nazi-minded Englishman, had been banned from the air."

Capetown, S. A.: Gen. Jan Christian Smuts again had called for America's entry into the war "hands and feet," to insure a quicker victory and save the world from exhaustion.

NEUTRALITY:
Change Expected

Although it was recognized that President Roosevelt's request for changes in or repeal of the neutrality act would meet with determined opposition in senate and house, a poll of the chambers showed definitely that some modification, notably that of permitting arming of American merchant ships, would receive a congressional O. K.

This poll had been taken as Secretary of State Hull warned the Axis powers that American-owned ships (presumably wearing the Panamanian or other flag, were armed and had orders to defend themselves.

This statement itself had closely followed the sinking of a former American tanker 450 miles east of Recife, Brazil, with the loss of several American lives.

The tanker had originally been American, had been transferred to the British service, and was operating under the Panamanian flag with a crew largely composed of American citizens.

Between 12 and 20 such ships had already been armed, Mr. Hull said, and he characterized the sinkings of these vessels or of those of this type as a German effort at "frightfulness designed to drive us out of the Atlantic."

The senate poll showed 29 in favor of repeal or change; 20 opposed to any change, and most of the rest undecided, wanting more time to study, or out of the city and unavailable for comment.

HITLER:
Puzzle

The first formal address by Hitler in 103 days of warfare with Russia rather left the world puzzled—for he claimed a total victory over the Reds at a time when Moscow was claiming the Leningrad push stopped, and continued advances in the center.

Also, the favorable report of the chancellor on the war situation came at a time when unrest behind the lines was assuming the proportions of a front, and at least one whole division had to be sidetracked to take care of one small sector of conquered territory.

Even more puzzling was his statement that he had ordered production of war materials restricted, because the Russians were no longer able to be a menace and that the war was, in effect "in the bag."

This was followed up by a warning in the Berlin Press to British and American mission members in Moscow to get out of the Russian capital because a head-on attack upon Moscow was planned.

It came at a time when Moscow itself was informing the British and Americans that there no longer was doubt that Russia could hold out through the winter, but that quantities of munitions and the machinery of war would be needed next spring.

It was hard to reconcile facts with speech or speech with facts.

It's All Over

Here is George Hopkins, with his parachute, in which he landed from an airplane atop Devil's Tower in Wyoming. After the better part of six days he was rescued by a crew of eight expert mountain climbers. His parachute drop was made to win a $50 wager and as a publicity stunt for a parachute jumping contest. Devil's Tower, a 1,280-foot peak, jutting straight up from the surrounding plain can be seen in the background.

DEATH:
To a Liberal

Louis Dembitz Brandeis, noted liberal jurist, and former Supreme court justice, died in his Washington home just on the night before a new Supreme court was meeting for its first 1941-42 session. He was 84 and had retired from the Supreme court on February 13, 1939, because of ill health. It was suffering from a heart ailment that led him to retire and a severe attack of this trouble that resulted in his death. Named to the high bench by President Wilson in 1916, Brandeis had no experience as a judge before that time but he was widely known for his activity as a lawyer on behalf of labor unions and against "high finance."

SPENDING:
Will Triple

During the first World war, American spending at the height of the struggle reached something like $50,000,000 a day. Great Britain is way past that point now, and the expectation in Washington had been that within this fiscal year America's spending will come to about two billions a month, or about $70,000,000 a day.

That was the figure which U. S. Budget Director Smith estimated, and the bill would be 24 billions in the year, with an income of close to 12 billions from taxes and a deficit of about the same amount.

In this amount was included the lend-lease aid, but not the direct purchases by Britain, Russia, China or other sources.

The difference between the American and British rate of spending, Smith pointed out, was this—that two billions a month is about $135 a year for all the citizens of the nation, whereas Britain's spending constitutes about 40 per cent of the national income.

Smith went on to state that considering better employment conditions and the busy state of the nation, probably more dollars would be left for civilian use than in pre-defense years.

CHURCH:
And the Reds

President Roosevelt had rammed himself into a hornet's nest with his discussion of Article 124 of the Russian constitution, which gave religious freedom guarantees to the people.

Churchmen of several faiths and congressmen took the President to task and later the President qualified his statement or explained it in the light of a hope that movements now on foot would bring religious freedom, under the constitution of Russia to her people.

This put a somewhat new light on the controversy, and the head of the Russian Orthodox church came forward to give the President support and to reveal his opinion that the days of church repression and antagonism in Russia were numbered.

The people were "turning to God" he said, and the government was not planning to prevent this uprising of the spirit in the face of the danger of death in war.

Myron Taylor was back from his visit to the Pope, and more light on the subject of religious freedom was expected from this source.

RUSSIA:
Has 'Dunquerque'

Moscow had published the dramatic report that a large Red army unit reported trapped by the Finns on the shores of Lake Ladoga north of Leningrad had been saved by a "Dunquerque" retreat engineered by lake vessels.

The hero of the escape from the trap was Colonel Bondarev, who, with his men, had been battling for 45 days.

Food For Freedom Campaign

More than 350 farm families of Marshall and Pennington Counties who are borrowers of the Farm Security Administrtion are being urged to participate as much as possible in the "Food for Freedom" campaign launched by the U. S. Department of Agriculture, but to make 100 per cent production of food for home use their foremost goal, Hilding W. Thelander, County FSA Supervisor, said today.

"Many Farm Security borrowers in these counties are now quite ready to step in and do their part for national defense by increasing production of the needed food commodities, but first they will want to assure an adequate year-round supply of food for themselves. just as we have encouraged them to do in our program for the last six years," Thelander asserted.

He made his statement in connection with the "all out" goals for a record 1942 production of dairy products, poultry, eggs, hogs, and vegetables recently announced by Secretary of Agriculture Claude R. Wickard.

"Farmers generally are being asked to increase production of milk and the other needed commodities, not so much by expanding their herds and their facilities but more by intensive feeding and better management. Among Farm Security families we have farm people who have been operating on just that basis for years, following definite farm and home management plans, aimed, above all, at making the farm feed the family and getting improved production by using improved mothods. These families now will be able to make a substantial contribution to the success of the 'Food for Freedom campaign, the FSA supervisor declared.

While 'Food for Freedom' will be the most important program of the Department of Agriculture "for the duration". Thelander said rural rehabilitation, rural sanitation, efforts to improve leasing arrangements between landlords and tenants, medical care, and promotion of farmers' co-operatives would be continued by Farm Security in the interests of "helping small farm operators achieve more of a stake in Democracy."

CCC Announcement for October

The CCC is now conducting a special enrollment of junior applicants. Until Nov. 1, qualified young men between the ages of 17 and 23½, have an opportunity to participate in CCC activities, which include attendance at classes in such defense training as sheet metal, welding, radio, cooking and baking, motor mechanics, and tractor operation.

These classes will open shortly after Nov. 1 in the CCC camps in Minnesota. Wages paid are $30 a a month, plus maintenance.

Complete details can be obtained at the office of the County Welfare board in Warren.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. John Doran, on Monday, a girl.

Market Day and Smoker

Plans have been completed for the Holt Market Day and Smoker to be held here on Saturday, November 1st. A good program has been lined up for the afternoon and there will also be a good program for the evening smoker which will be held at the High School.

The High School and the local Boy Scout Troop No. 112 will have a bingo stand and many other carnival entertainments both in the afternoon and the evening.

The people of this community are welcome to come to Holt and celebrate this fall event with the Holt Business Men who are putting it on.

The Weather

The weather the past week has tried to be nice. Sunday was a cold and blustery day with a light rain. Since then it has dried up pretty fair and late threshing has been going on in full swing.

Beatrice and Evelyn Larson, Marlan Augustine and Rev. Hanson and Glenn Olson of Middle River attended Luther League in Greenbush on Sunday evening.

Saturday night was a very busy night for one gentleman, who was seen carrying wood from Harry Engen's wood pile east of the garage, while other people were enjoying themselves uptown. —Contributed.

Farm Defense Program

At a recent district meeting held at Thief River Falls, Minnesota, members of the Minnesota Agricultural Conservation Committee as well as specialists from the Minnesota Agricultural Extension Service discussed the 1942 Farm Defense Program that is to deal with the national food for defense campaign.

With this information still fresh in our minds and due to the fact that the 1942 Agricultural Conservation sign up will be held this fall, we have scheduled a series of meetings throughout our county to acquaint you with the duties you will be asked to perform in regard to the national defense campaign for an increase in production of certain vital foods, and request that you as a producer attend one of these meetings. The 1942 Crop Insurance Program will be discussed at these meetings as well as the 1942 sign up campaign.

Meetings have been scheduled as follows and will commence at 8:00 p. m.
Friday, Oct. 24, Grygla and Gatzke
Monday, Oct. 27, Holt

County-wide Tuberculin Test

The County Agents office at Warren has just received a notification from W. C. Bromoghim, assistant secretary of the Minnesota Livestock Sanitary Board, that beginning the latter part of November there will be a complete tuberculin test of all cattle in Masrhall County. The extension office has been requested to employ assistants who will act as drivers for the veterinarians who will conduct the area test. The last area test was conducted in this county in the summer of 1936, and the law requires that in order for a county to stay on the modified accredited list cattle must be tested every six years. Further information will be published in the county newspapers as soon as complete details are received from the Livestock Sanitary Board.

Ladies Aid Sale

Friday evening, November 7, is the date set for the Annual Auction Sale of fancy work held annually by the Nazareth Ladies Aid. This year, some very fine pieces of work have been made. The circles have made woolen quilts, pillow slips, several sets of dish towels and other articles to numerous to list. According to reports, individual members are also donating a piece of fancy work each. A bazaar will be held in the afternoon and auction in the evening.

20 Years Ago This Week

Culled from News Files

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Voth attended the National Dairy Show in Minneapolis.

J. M. Jahr was building a big new barn on his farm in Mud Lake.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson, a girl.

Five people from here took Civil Service examination at Thief River Falls for postmaster at Holt.

A potato growers association was organized here with C. H. Gunheim as president.

It became necessary to make certain changes in the local mail route due to bad roads and many patrons were cut off from daily service. Editor's note: They should do the same now, as many who request good service never fix a mud hole near their farm nor cut the weeds and brush along the "trail".

Ole Hanson, young Ringbo farmer, was found to be mentally deranged and was committed to the state hospital at Fergus Falls..

Selfishness is the source of nearly all the crime committed. "Satan always finds some work for idle hands to do." That's because he is alway's on the job.

Buy Your FARM HOME Now!

Mr. and Mrs. Tenant Farmer:

You and your family have no doubt planned on some day owning your own farm home. You probably have been on the verge of purchasing a farm a number of times in the past, only to wonder if it were the proper time to take this important step.

You have been paying out considerable sums of money year after year as rent, and working and improving the farms you have occupied, without advancing your own future security. In a good many cases the farms are then sold and you are again forced to move. Had you owned a farm home, the careful work and planning that you have done and are doing, plus part of the money you now pay as rent, would have gone directly to the benefit of your own family.

Now is the time to buy your future home. Farm produce prices are now at the highest point in many years, and with the defense program in full swing, the outlook for continued satisfactory prices to the farmer is bright. While this Department has sold 3500 farms since January 1, 1939, we still have a limited number of good farms available for sale.

Do not hesitate longer in making up your mind about buying a farm. Rural Credit farms are reasonably priced, our terms are fair, interest at 4%, with twenty years in which to pay for your home.

For full information call at or write to one of our District Offices located at Brainerd, Detroit Lakes, Thief River Falls and St. Paul, Minnesota.

Yours very truly,

THE DEPARTMENT OF RURAL CREDIT

Practical Job Hunters Teach Selves Shorthand

Skilled Applicant Is Favored

THE girl who gets a job is the girl who prepares for one. When an employer asks if she knows shorthand, she can say "yes" and, in a test, prove it! The unskilled just wait . . . and wait.

But, as many people teach themselves shorthand at home, there's no reason why you should wait among the untrained. The principles are simple to master.

• • •

Our 32-page booklet gives you 18 step-by-step lessons in Pitman shorthand which you can study at home. Has exercises and short forms. Daily practice should fit you for nicely paid work. Send your order to:

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Methods of Providing Aid to Russia Before Nazis Win Complete Victory Is Big Problem for U. S. and Britain; Japanese Move Again in Indo-China

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Disconsolate Russian prisoners are shown marching through an unnamed town on their way to a prison camp behind the German lines, reads the caption accompanying this picture from Berlin. The caption further states that this is a part of the huge bag of prisoners taken on the far-flung Russian front.

RUSSIANS:
Deep Trouble

As the Nazi blitz moved into high gear on the central and south fronts of the great battle of the east front, the question began to be seriously asked whether Russia, like France, Greece and so many other nations, was going to be forced out of the war as a combatant, wilting before the heat and ferocity of the Nazi war machine.

Indeed, when the German spearheads had been announced 65 miles away from Moscow, the stories of peace and truce offers began to come over the cables, and one of them even declared that Stalin was considering an armistice.

However, these rumors were promptly denied from Berlin, Italy, London and Moscow, the Axis denials stating that objectives were far from being reached, and London and Moscow sources declaring the Russians were still able to fight.

Be that as it may, it was obvious that the crisis was being reached, and that once again the great manpower of Russia must decide if it were better to give in to the Nazi, or to battle it out as the Chinese did against the Japs.

Few believed that Germany or any group of European powers could finally defeat Russia with the backing of England and the United States, provided Russia were willing to fight the sort of rear-guard action that China used with such success.

But whether the willingness was there, or the philosophical temperament needed for such a defense was a question.

Harriman, American envoy to the U. S. mission to Moscow, answered it this way:

"I believe the leaders of Russia will lead the people to fight on." Beaverbrook felt the same way.

MATERIAL AID:
But How?

The Soviet crisis left the lease-lend ideas of Britain and this country very much "out on a limb."

That both countries were dispatching aid was apparent. But how much and how long were difficult problems.

"Barkis was willin'," but the Iranian railway from the head of the Persian gulf to the shores of the Caspian sea, thence into boats and again to Russian railways and roads in the Caucasus seemed the only practicable route.

Britain had material to give and was giving it—not only planes but squadrons and pilots and gunners. Much of this was of the heavier types which could be flown direct to the scene of service, put into action and, if surviving an eventual Russian defeat, presumably could be saved.

But much of it, such as tanks and guns, had to be shipped in. The British took the attitude that they were not only willing to give of their own store, but of the American lease-lend store. They said, in effect:

"We get it from the United States this way, and we shall do for Russia what the United States is doing for us."

Britain felt that the Americans should give what they could, but the task they wanted this country to take over, the keeping of Soviet's "Burma road" open seemed a task that it was a little dubious how we could accomplish.

LEASE-LEND:
Second Edition

Everyone had expected the second lease-lend bill of six billions of dollars to pass the house, but the vote, 328-67, was considerable of a surprise to the anti-interventionists, who had made part of the fight a battle against aid to Russia.

The smashing victory for the proponents of the President's lease lend policy, and for implementing it with a huge sum was repeated in the defeat of the no-aid-to-Russia amendment.

NAVY:
Takes Prisoners

The United States came its closest to actual participation in the war when the navy announced that it had taken prisoner about 20 "Nazis," whether actual German citizens or Norwegians under German domination was not immediately clear.

The American naval patrol, including Iceland and Greenland in its orbit, was searching the coastline of the latter island for an alleged German submarine base when it came upon a small Norwegian vessel.

The ship was stopped, questions were put to its crew and the vessel was thoroughly searched. Not only did the navy announce that it was determined that the men were Nazi agents under the direction of the Gestapo, but the questioning led to the finding of a radio station set up on the mainland of Greenland.

This station, apparently, was being set up by the Germans, the report had stated, for the purpose of broadcasting weather information to the Nazis.

The purpose might have been for the flights of planes that had been "strafing" shipping in the north Atlantic; it might have been for guidance of submarines; it might have been to give locations of lease-lend ships to surface raiders, planes or U-boats.

At all events ship, crew and radio station were all taken over by the navy, which announced that all were on their way to the United States.

It had been the first move of this type since President Roosevelt had issued the "shoot on sight" order.

JAPAN:
Moves Again

Considerable alarm about the Pacific situation was caused when Tokyo made another move associated with her expansion into Indo China.

The Japanese demanded control of the Indo Chinese railway system. They also had demanded the right to control customs collections and postal censorship.

At the same time the Japanese demanded the arsenal at Saigon, and this was considered highly significant because at this arsenal the French had set up what was regarded as the most powerful radio direction-finding outfits in the Orient.

The Japanese armed forces in Indo China were continuing their maneuvers along the Thailand frontier, back of which, and in Malaya, there were heavy concentrations of British troops.

The Saigon moves, the British said, were being closely watched, because of the likelihood that if any plane attacks were to be made against Singapore or Manila, Saigon would be the proper hopping-off spot.

VIERECK:
Revelations

What many believed to be true, that Nazi agents in the United States were using the non-interventionists, the isolationists and other enemies of the President's foreign policy for their own ends was declared to be a fact by George Sylvester Viereck, author, poet and registered Nazi agent.

Viereck was being tried in Washington on charges that he had not told the state department the whole story about his activities.

It was perhaps a joke, but at all events a sensation when, at the outset of his trial, he was asked to "name his associates" and he listed two assistants of Secretary Hull, Joseph Davies, former ambassador to Russia, and William Phillips, now ambassador to Rome.

The nub of the case against Viereck was that he listed his activities only as an employee of the German library of information; as correspondent for a Munich newspaper. The library had been closed down by the government for alleged improper activities.

As might he expected since Camel cigarettes are America's favorite, the induction into service of thousands of selectees and volunteers has only emphasized the service man's preference for Camels. Actual sales records from service stores show Camel is the favorite with men in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard. Prince Albert is another big favorite with men in camp or on ships. Since service men have indicated in all surveys to date that tobacco ranks first in the gift line-up with them, it is natural that local tobacco dealers are featuring cartons of Camels and pound tins of Prince Albert as ideal gifts for the men in the service from the folks back home.—Adv.

The witness hesitated a time, then slowly replied, "Well, yes, there was."

"Ah!" exclaimed the barrister triumphantly, "Now tell the court what it was."

"A locomotive," replied the witness blandly.

Watch Your Kidneys!
Help Them Cleanse the Blood of Harmful Body Waste

Your kidneys are constantly filtering waste matter from the blood stream. But kidneys sometimes lag in their work—do not act as Nature intended—fail to remove impurities that, if retained, may poison the system and upset the whole body machinery.

Symptoms may be nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—a feeling of nervous anxiety and loss of pep and strength.

Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

There should be no doubt that prompt treatment is wiser than neglect. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have been winning new friends for more than forty years. They have a nation-wide reputation. Are recommended by grateful people the country over. Ask your neighbor!

With Ike and Mike

A few years ago television was a distant prospect. Today it has emerged from the realm of the maybe and is an accomplished fact, with regular programs on the air daily. The television camera is known as "Ike" while the familiar microphone is "Mike" in television parlance. "Ike" handles the scene; "Mike" the sound. These pictures take you to the Columbia Broadcasting system's television studio in New York.

View of the control panel where television programs are directed and monitored out to the transmitter atop the Chrysler tower, then sent through the ether.

Here you see a television cameraman in action, with a "dollyman" assisting. The "dolly" is used to work the camera into any desired position.

Telecast of a children's hour at the studio finds Lydia Perera telling the story to little Ann Francis as John Rupe (left) illustrates the story with drawings. The story here was "Jack and the Beanstalk."

This is Toy and Wing in action before "Ike and Mike." They are performing one of the ballroom dances that made them famous. In the foreground is a roller skating act awaiting its turn before the cameras.

And here is a typical scene in a home equipped with a television receiver. The family sits around and enjoys its own little theater.

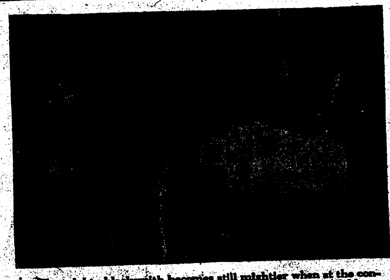
Private funeral services were conducted at the Ridge Cemetery on Monday afternoon for Baby Boy Skoglund, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Algot Skoglund. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated. The infant was born on Saturday and was dead at birth. Latest reports are that the mother is doing well.



The mighty blacksmith becomes still mightier when at the controls of a giant steam hammer. Here, under 4,000-pound blows, he is forging a main rod for a Great Northern locomotive. His was one of some 20,000 jobs which were necessary last year to run the railroad.

One Man's Job

One man with a wheelbarrow and a path can furnish transportation—and for the job at hand it may be the best and cheapest method.

But for moving crops and livestock, and other heavy, bulky commodities which require long distance transportation, the wheelbarrow gives way to cars and locomotives, while the path becomes substantial roadbeds, steel tracks, bridges and tunnels.

And the operation of these more complex facilities requires depots, shops, machinery, offices and equipment, materials and supplies, and working capital.

Behind every person employed by the Great Northern in 1940 was an average investment, in round figures, of $30,000 per employe.

The traffic handled with this $30,000 worth of facilities and equipment per employe was equivalent to transporting more than one-half million tons of freight and nearly 13,000 passengers a distance of one mile.

The average charge to the users of the railroad for moving each ton of freight per mile was less than one cent. For hauling each passenger per mile, the average charge was one and two-thirds cents.

Each employe plus $30,000 worth of facilities and equipment, earned, on an average, a little more than $5,000 for the railroad.

About 90 percent of this $5,000 had to be paid out for various expenses—wages (nearly $2,000 per employe), taxes (more than $600 per employe), replacements, materials, supplies, and interest on borrowed capital.

Approximately $500 per employe was left for improvements, reduction of indebtedness, offsetting deficits incurred during depression years, and for dividends to stockholders.

Of the upwards of $5,000 earned for the Company by each employe and the $30,000 investment in his job, only $63 was paid out in dividends to the stockholders (the owners) of the railroad.

Patrons of the railroad, it will be observed, were furnished essential transportation services at near-cost; of what they paid the railroad for these services, its employes received about 40 per cent; the tax collectors took 12 per cent, while the investor who, under our American way, makes possible the transportation services, the jobs and the taxes, can only hope that the abnormally heavy traffic for which a national emergency is responsible, will afford him something like a fair return on his investment this year.

Million Red Cross Volunteers Aid Defense Program

Washington, D. C.—Behind the front lines of U. S. defenses more than 1,200,000 Red Cross volunteers are on the job—making surgical dressings, knitting sweaters and giving comfort articles, learning the rudiments of emergency mass feeding and scores of other duties in an all-out effort for national defense.

The largest defense task now being undertaken by Red Cross volunteers is the production of 40,000,000 surgical dressings for the Army and Navy, according to Mrs. Dwight F. Davis, national director of Volunteer Special Services.

Home Service volunteers and Gray Ladies, whose duties are directly concerned with the man in uniform also are expanding their programs, Mrs. Davis said.

As a preparedness measure, thousands of women throughout the country are learning mass feeding and nutrition as members of the Red Cross Canteen Corps. Added thousands are being trained in the Motor Corps to serve as emergency drivers.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

St. Paul, Minn.—North Dakota and Pennsylvania reports of finding the virus of equine encephalomyelities (horse sleeping sickness) in pinnated grouse and pheasant, respectively, have not been confirmed in Minnesota investigations thus far.

A number of the two upland game species, taken in Polk, Ottertail and Pope counties, were studied by the Minnesota Wildlife Disease Investigation in cooperation with the Department of Conservation, but no instance of infection with the disease was found.

Sleeping sickness in humans reached near-epidemic proportions in sections of North Dakota and Minnesota and caused a number a deaths.

Ladies Aid Sale

Friday evening, November 7, is the date set for the Annual Auction Sale of fancy work held annually by the Nazareth Ladies Aid. This year, some very fine pieces of work have been made. The circles have made woolen quilts, pillow slips, several sets of dish towels and other articles to numerous to list. According to reports, individual members are also donating a piece of fancy work each. A bazaar will be held in the afternoon and auction in the evening.

Benitt-Knutson Wedding

The Lutheran parsonage in Holt was the scene of a pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, October 22, at 2 p. m. when Miss Elda Benitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Benitt, became the bride of Mr. Clinton Knutson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Knutson of Grygla. The single ring ceremony was officiated by Rev. T. C. L. Hanson.

The brides attendant was her sister Miss JoAnn Benitt. The groom was attended by his brother Mr. Thomas Knutson Jr. of Grygla.

The bride was attired in a Royal blue alpaca crepe street dress with a corsage of sweet peas and roses. Miss Benitt was dressed in a soldier blue alpaca crepe street dress and wore a corsage of sweet peas and asters.

A wedding dinner was given at the home of the brides parents at 5 o'clock where about 40 guests were present. The table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake made by the brides mother.

Serving as waitresses were Mrs. Oscar Fosholm and Miss Doris Larson.

The newly-weds will make their home at Grygla.

Carl Johnson took his daughter Joyce to Fargo to consult her doctor and check the progress of the healing of her hip ailment. Mrs. Victor Johnson and son and daughter accompanied them to Fargo.

Market Day and Smoker

Plans have been completed for the Holt Market Day and Smoker to be held here on Saturday, November 1st. A good program has been lined up for the afternoon and there will also be a good program for the evening smoker which will be held at the High School.

The High School and the local Boy Scout Troop No. 112 will have a bingo stand and many other carnival entertainments both in the afternoon and the evening.

The people of this community are welcome to come to Holt and celebrate this fall event with the Holt Business Men who are putting it on.

Miss Inez Anderson has been chosen as a member of the properties staff for the first college play "Giants in the Earth" which will be presented Nov. 28, at Concordia college, Moorhead. She is a Junior this year. Miss Anderson is a member of the Lutheran Daughters of the Reformation.

Facts and Figures of Interest

Facts and figures that may be of interest to the patrons and tax payers of the Holt Consolidated School District and the Village of Holt have been drawn to the attention of the writer during the past few weeks. These are put forth here primarily due to the fact that too often our officials, namely the Board of Education and the Village Council, are not given credit for their efforts. This lack of appreciation is mainly due to the fact that patrons are not aware of what is being accomplished.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education on Monday evening this Board made final arrangements for the revamping of the bonded indebtedness situation of the school district. The new arrangement that was adopted will reduce the future debt obligation by more than $17000 Of this $2000 results from retiring that amount of bonds; the other $15,000 represents the saving that will result in the amount of interest to be paid in the future. In brief the board is retiring $2000, thereby, reducing the indebtedness to $22000. These $22,000 in bonds are being called in and sold to another party at a reduced rate of interest, from 4½% to 3%. At the same time the maturity of these bonds will be changed so that the last bond will become payable in 1961 rather than 1976, as was true under the old series. The reduction in interest and time will result in the above mentioned saving of $15,000 without increasing the annual payments. In fact it will be possible to reduce the bond and interest levy in the near future.

A study of the debt situation of the school district and the village during the past few years gives one a great deal of satisfaction, if not community pride. It is difficult for one to realize that the figures are correct as they seem almost impossible. The figures indicate that the village has made a financial gain of of approximately $12,700 from 1934 to the present. The school district has realized a gain of approximately $18,300 during the same years. Thus making a total gain of approximately $31,000 for our small community during the last seven years. This has been accompanied with some reduction in local tax levies during these years.

As taxpayers let us express our appreciation to these men that devote their time as members of the Board of Education and Village Council. Many of them serve on both bodies. They have done well by us and deserve our consideration.

George W. Karvonen

Miss A. Fosmark, Dwight, N. Dak., Missionary from China, was the speaker at the L. D. R. banquet held at the Lutheran church at Middle River Wednesday evening. Those who attended from Holt were: Dorothy and Lois Hanson, Marian Backlund, Irene Ness, Geraldine Larson, Betty Lou Lorentson, Seima Neimla, Delores Engen, Betty Johnson, Mrs. S. Lorentson and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson.

Opal Sanoden, student at Bemidji Teachers' College, spent the week end at her home here.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of a great variety. Over the week end it was nice until late Sunday when the teperature dropped to freezing. Monday morning we had 7 above zero and the ground stayed frozen since then. Wednesday we had a two inch snow fall and that white blanket is still here as we go to press early Thursday.

West Coast CCC Camps

Young men interested in CCC work this week were given an opportunity to enroll for service at camps in California, Oregon and Washington, or Montana, Idaho, Utah and Nevada, according to an announcement made Wednesday by C. S. Rondesvedt, Minnesota's supervisor of CCC selection, after he had received telegraphic advice from the Seventh Corps headquarters in Omaha.

If enough boys express a desire to go to one of these western camps, Mr. Rondesvedt said, efforts will be made to arrange a group transfer about November 10.

Courses in defense training will be given at the camps to which Minnesota boys are assigned.

Details can be obtained at the County office of the County Welfare Board at Warren, or at the nearest employment office of the Employment-Security Division.

Bill Larson made a business trip to St. Paul last week.

U. S. Destroyer Torpedoed on Patrol

View in Brooklyn navy yard when the U. S. destroyer, Kearny, was commissioned, under command of Lieut. Commander A. L. Danis. The destroyer was torpedoed while on patrol duty, about 350 miles southwest of Iceland. The ship continued on its course, under its own power, to an unnamed port, with 11 members of the crew missing and 10 injured, two of them seriously. The navy department stated that the attack on the Kearny was undoubtedly made by a German submarine. The Kearny was launched in March, 1940, at Kearny, N. J., and had a complement of 13 officers and 177 men.

Beloved Singer Pleaded For Mercy, Not Justice

The beloved Madame Schumann-Heink was a woman of rare charm and geniality. She was the first to make fun of her own shortcomings, and was often heard to comment good-humoredly on her decidedly matronly figure.

On one occasion, a fashionable portrait painter asked her to sit for her portrait. The plump opera star hesitated for a long while before making her decision.

"Don't be afraid, Madame," said the artist teasingly. "I'll do you justice."

"Ah," replied the prima donna, "it isn't justice I ask at your hands; it is mercy!"

U. S. Destroyer Kearny Makes Port Under Own Power After Torpedoing; 11 Crew Members Reported Missing; Japanese Form Militaristic Cabinet

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

KEARNY:
Major Incident:

Impact of the torpedoing of the destroyer Kearny near Iceland had been terrific. First reports of the incident indicated no loss of life but when the ship made port (under its own power) 11 crew members were listed as "missing" and 10 more as seriously injured.

The full report of Commander Danis had been awaited with eagerness, particularly after Nazi sources called the entire story a "flat lie" and stated that the Kearny had probably run into an American mine.

The denial had been expected, and the senatorial and congressional comment had been along expected lines. Nye said it was just the sort of thing the country could have looked for, in following the administration's foreign policy.

Most members of congress, however, took an extremely serious view of the situation, many permitting themselves to be quoted that "this might well be the spark needed to explode us into war."

The incident occurred when the house was debating the ship-arming bill, but was not believed to have had any particular effect on the debate, and the passage of the measure had been a foregone conclusion.

LT. COMMANDER A. L. DANIS

Chief among reactions to the torpedoing of the Kearny had been surprise in all quarters that the Nazis should want to provoke the country with an incident which might result in this nation becoming a more active and positive enemy.

RUSSIA:
A Defense

Though the defenders of Moscow had been putting up a brilliant and tenacious battle, it had become evident that only a military miracle could save the city.

Perhaps a weather miracle might, but though there was snow on the battlefields, and more was falling from time to time, there seemed no diminution in the ferocity of the German assault, or the man and machine power with which it had been delivered.

Of special interest to men interested in military maneuvering was the Nazi method, aided by its marvelously mechanized forces, in shifting the pressure suddenly from one front to another.

Moscow was assailed from three—from the northwest, along the road from Leningrad; from the west, along the historic "Napoleonic highway," and from the southwest, following the route from Orel.

Discounting wild rumors (there even had been one report that the Russians had recaptured Orel and Kalinin, two vital points lost at least a week before) it was apparent that the Germans had been able to make two lines out of the three—roughly called the right and left wings of the assault.

There could be little question that the cost to the invaders in men and material was heavy, but also there was little doubt that the retreat of the Red armies had of necessity been swift and a heavy drain on the Soviet material.

Grandiloquent Nazi claims of the smashing of Timoshenko's "eight armies" and the collapse of Russian resistance were perforce discounted as wishful thinking on the part of the Germans as daily gains dropped from a score of miles to a matter of hundreds of yards.

The Russian defenders on one day would be calling on their reserves to battle smashing assaults on the right, and then just as suddenly, be compelled to meet the same sort of action from the left.

Diplomats moved out of the city; the report was circulated that the government had moved to Kazan.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet spokesman, asking for a complete pooling of British and Red resources, pledged the nation to fight on "regardless of . . . Moscow"—showing that the "we need a miracle" spirit was paramount even in the highest circles.

TOJO:
A New Regime

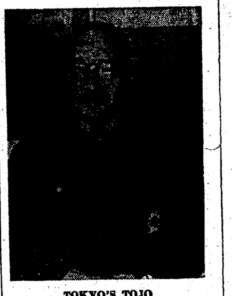
Another blow of shocking impact had been the sudden resignation of the Prince Fumimaro Konoye cabinet in Tokyo, and the prince's replacement by General Tojo, thus forming a frankly militaristic government.

It had been reliably reported that the Konoye resignation had been on a basis of "this government is unwilling to accept responsibility for a severe breach between the United States and Japan."



TOKYO'S TOJO
Outlook was gloomy.

Japan's terms admittedly had been received, studied in Washington. Washington admittedly had been discouraged at the prospects of agreement. It may or may not be that this attitude had been conveyed to Konoye through the Japanese ambassador.

At all events, it was plain that the prince must himself have believed that agreement on the Pacific with the United States was impossible—and hence his resignation.

His successor—General Tojo. And one of his first utterances had been that his cabinet would make early and final "decision" as to what measures to take to end the crisis.

Coupled with this had been a strong and unequivocal affirmation of Japan's complete loyalty to the Axis.

Most observers had been watching Nazi Germany whipping Tokyo into action in the Pacific, obviously to create a new front, to divide the U. S. fleet, to lessen our aid to Britain, and to involve in a near-at-hand struggle the powerful continent of Australia.

These seemed plain facts and watching the developments, those who wished to avoid war with Japan were becoming gloomy indeed.

SUPPLY RACE:
In North Africa

British and German armies faced each other on the relatively quiet desert front, and military correspondents believed each was afraid to start a general attack unless the reserves of supplies guaranteed a fairly certain success.

Therefore, back of the front lines a race had developed, and trained watchers believed it might be weeks or months before one side or the other would gain a sufficient lead.

General Auchinleck commanded the British, while General Rommel was the German commander. It had been four months since the last real battle on the desert front, wrote one correspondent.

The British are receiving enormous quantities of goods via American ships calling at Suez. They were said to be arriving faster than they could be handled.

The British now have, it was said, thousands of motor trucks, and enough light, fast tanks to make several motorized units. There are hundreds of new fighters and bombers of the latest types.

These developments, it was felt, would, within a few weeks, or a couple of months, be reflected in a terrific British drive in North Africa.

But the Germans and Italians are not idle, and the British Mediterranean fleet, harassed constantly from the air and by submarines, has been hard put to it to make a serious dent in the shipping lines from Europe to Africa, constantly laden with military supplies for Rommel's forces.

PANAMA:
Takes Step

The expected aftermath of the abdication and overthrow of President Arnulfo Arias of Panama followed when the little country in which hundreds of American-owned ships are registered, decided to permit the arming of merchant vessels.

This putting of ships in Panamian registry was a device used by this country because of the neutrality act which forbids the vessels to enter belligerent ports.

PATTERNS
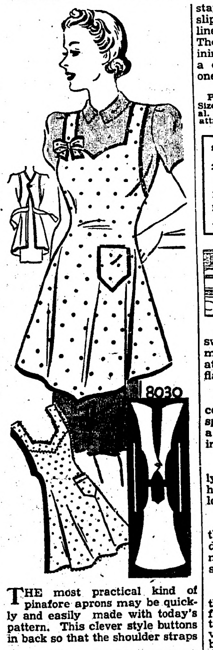
SEWING CIRCLE



THE most practical kind of pinafore aprons may be quickly and easily made with today's pattern. This clever style buttons in back so that the shoulder straps stay firmly in place and never slip. It ties smoothly at the waistline with sashes attached at sides. The bow at the shoulder is a feminine touch which gives this apron a daintiness which will make it one of your favorites.

Don't worry about what to send the man in Uncle Sam's services for Christmas. He's told the country himself in any number of surveys. Cigarettes and smoking tobacco top the list of what he wants first of all from the folks back home—and first of all is Camel Cigarettes. Actual sales records from service men's stores—in the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard—show Camels the largest-selling brand, with Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco a standout favorite. Local dealers are featuring Camels in a handsomely wrapped carton and in a novel Christmas package of four "flat fifties"—either way you give 200 cigarettes. Prince Albert is featured in the pound tin and pound glass humidor all Christmas gift wrapped.—Adv.

And what a meeting—after a hard day's work to have your wife greet you with a soothing, refreshing bottle of beer. Many happy homes are kept happy by the sensible use of a moderate beverage that brings relaxation from the day's strains and worries.

Dr. H. W. Haggard of Yale University says: "Our findings indicate that beer in reasonable amounts is essentially non-intoxicating". This opinion is shared by many other leading doctors, such as Dr. Henderson of Yale, Drs. Waddell and Haag of Virginia University and Dr. Carlson of the University of Chicago.

The "Brewing of Beer" is also one of Minnesota's leading industries, giving employment to approximately 35,000 people in Minnesota; this includes its manufacture, distribution and sale. In addition, the millions of dollars paid to Municipal, State and Federal Governments serve to lighten your tax burden.

American Red Cross

Tuesday, Nov. 11, ushers in the 25th annual Roll Call of the American Red Cross. The challenge to humanity and the freedom of the peoples throughout the world, intensified in wargare in 1941, brought into play all the forces of mercy through the Amesican Red Cross. Service in War and Peace is the chartered responsibility of the Red Cross, the nation's volunteer relief agency. It is chartered by Congress and is a semi-governmental agency. Its president is the President of the United States, the Hon. Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Last year, another great record of service and charity to humanity was rendered by this organization. There were Military and Naval Welfare Service workers in all stations and hospitals. 100,000 men in military service or their dependents, were aided. Disaster Relief were given 166,000 in 122 disasters. Great work was done in Water Safety and First Aid. 270,000 Water Safety certificates were awarded which means that a Red Cross approved Life Guard is "tops". 2, 816 Highway First Aid Stations and 3,558 accident mobile units saw its beginning last year. There were also 650 Red Cross Public Health nurses on duty last year.

For War Relief in Europe and the Orient, the Red Cross was there on its Mission of Mercy. $22,000,000 for War Relief was contributed by the public. 19,900,000 surgical dressings and 7,700,000 garments were made by the chapters. $35,000,000 worth of supplies were shipped to the war torn countries last year. Recognizing the great work and its need, the U. S. Government appropriated $5,000,000 for this fine work.

The 1941 quata for Holt village is only $40.00, according to Rev. T. C. L. Hanson, local chairman. The membership fee is $1.00 or more. This entitles the donor to a membership card, a button and a window emblem. Those giving a dollar or more should wear their button and display the window emblem showing your pride in being along in this worthwhile cause and encouraging others to do the same. Amounts of less than $1.00 is accepted as contributions but is not considered as enrollment. A group of four girls serving as volunteer workers will begin to canvass the whole village some day next week. If you are not at home, they will call again so as to give every one an opportunity to take part in the enrollment.

Does it strike a soft spot in our hearts that we who live in the land of peace and plenty should help the unfortunate brethren in lands of war, death disease, starvation and other calamities? Do your patriotic duty, ENROLL NOW!

Card of Thanks

In the confusion of moving and sickness, we come with our thanks and words of appreciation late. Will you kindly accept our belated thanks and gratitude for the fine farewell party given in our honor on Sept. 28? We also thank you all for the many kind acts of courtesy and love shown us all the years we lived in the Holt community.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Anderson and Inez.

Farm Defense Program

The Farm Defense Program for 1942 will have as one of its main objectives the increased production of certain foods such as milk and cheese, poultry products, pork and lard.

Meetings have been held in different communities explaining the 1941 Farm Defense program. These meetings will be followed by individual farm sign up by the AAA committee men. Each Farmes will be asked to increase his production in the above mentioned foods.

In order to assist farmers in attaining their goals two committees are being set up in each community, one which will be responsible for increased dairy production and one for increased poultry production. The personnell of each of these committeess will consist of an AAA coummunity committeeman, a farmer or a farm women interested in dairying or poultry and an adult 4H club leader.

These committees will be asked to attend leaders training meetings conducted by the extension division of the University of Minnesota, where they will obtain informaiton as to how best to increase production in order that the production goals may be reached. These leaders will conduct similar meetings, on a discussion basis in their various communities.

The Leaders Training Meetings will be held for Marshall county as follows:

Meeting for poultry leaders November 14th at 10 a. m. to 3 p. m.

Meeting for dairy leaders on December 12 at 10 a. m.

Information as to the place of meeting and the names of persons of the two committees will be announced when the organization is completed.

Ladies Aid Sale Tonight

Friday evening, November 7, is the date set for the Annual Auction Sale of fancy work held annually by the Nazareth Ladies Aid. This year, some very fine pieces of work have been made. The circles have made woolen quilts, pillow slips, several sets of dish towels and other articles to numerous to list. According to reports, individual members are also donating a piece of fancy work each. A bazaar will be held in the afternoon and auction in the evening.

Moving Feldspar Mill

The feldspar mill at Warroad, started many years ago by William Rader, is being dismantled, and the machinery is being shipped to Newfoundland, where it will be used for grinding talc for the British war industry. The feldspar used in the mill came from Northwest Angle, and it was found impractical to transport by water because of storms on the lake.

Changed Turkey Buying Dates

Farmers who are selling their Turkeys on the Thanksgiving market will kindly notice that the time for taking in birds has been set back from Nov. 7 thru the 14 to Nov. 5th thru Nov. 11. This was so ordered by the Land O'Lakes Creameries Inc., stated Mr. Larson, manager of Farmers Coop. Creamery here, because Thanksgiving was set for Nov. 20th this year.

KEYNOTES RED CROSS APPEAL

Frances Fedden, attractive Bronxville, N. Y., artist's model, is the 1941 Red Cross poster girl. Thousands of posters like the one pictured above have been distributed throughout the country calling attention to this year's Roll Call membership appeal. Painted by Bradshaw Crandell, prominent New York illustrator, the poster carries a national defense theme, portraying the active part being taken by the Red Cross in serving the armed forces.

Simple Rules For "Flu"

Flu constitutes a grave challenge to medical science, according to today's bulletin from the Minnesota State Medical Association's Committee on Public Health Education.

The prospect of war-time epidemics on a country-wide, if not a world-wide scale, are not to be dismissed lightly, according to the doctors; and, in spite of continous research since the last war no satisfactory immunization process has been developed that can be relied upon to protect against a virulent surge of the disease. The thing for individuals to remember, the bulletin says, is that a few simple rules of hygiene go a long way toward protecting against bad after effects which cause the most trouble to flu patients.

The first is: go home and go to bed right away if you feel exhausted and feverish, even if you don't seem to have much of a cold.

The second is: stay in bed after you think the worst is past and you might as well get up.

The third is: call a doctor especially if you have a fever or cough.

The fourth applies to all year round prevention of trouble. A good all round diet including milk, eggs, meat, vegetables, fruit and whole grain cereals and plenty of sleep will mitigate the effects of most infections, especially flu, the doctors say. Also it's very important to avoid people who are coming down with colds, if possible, and to be especially careful to wash thoroughly before eating.

To Speak at Mens Club

Major Gustav Schilbred, retired Inspector for the U. S. Immigration Service and also Commander of the American Legion Post at Thief River Falls, has been secured for a speaker at Men's Club on Monday evening. This promises to be one of the best meetings of the year. Major Schilbred is an interesting speaker and has had many and varied experiences. The meeting has been moved up to Monday evening, instead of the usual Tuesday evening. A large group of men is expected and all the men of the community are cordially invited to attend.

Roy Hanson, who has spent several years as head mechanic at the CCC Camp at Thief Lake, left last week for Newfoundland where he will operate a special kind of Deisel Dredge for the American Government on their outpost fortification of that place Mrs. Hanson remained here at the home of her mother Mrs. V. E. Oakey.

Richard Martin Hetlan, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hetland was baptised in the parsonage on Sunday afternoon with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiating. He was born on September 19 and his sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Dovre of Thief River Falls and Mrs. Millie Short and Miss Bernice Hetland of Greenbush.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Ness who have been renting the Dr. Bratrud farm a mile south of Holt have now moved unto the Clarence Hall farm north of Rosewood.

Large Crowd Here Saturday

A very large and enthusiastic crowd came here Saturday for the Prize Day and Smoker. The weather that day was warm with nice sunshine for the afternoon and everybody had a lot of fun watching the many races and sports put on outside. After the drawing for prizes was over many saw a free movie while others spent their time visiting.

Mrs. J. P. Benitt won the $10.00. cash prize and Mrs. G. Sanoden won the $15.00. To top of a perfect day Orris Johnson who was to be married that evening, won the grand prize of the day of $25.00.

A crowd that filled the school house to overflowing came in for the smoker and carnival in the evening. According to all reports everybody had a good time.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Larson and family who have for several years been making their home on the old Arnevik farm owned by Wm. Paskewitz, moved on Saturday to their new farm home two miles southwest of Holt.

Lewis Announces Coal Strike

John L. Lewis, head of the C.I.O.'s United Mine Workers Union of America, announced that 53,000 workers in coal mines owned by the major steel companies would strike. Lewis told a press conference that he had sent a letter to the President notifying him that the miners could not renew their truce with the steel companies, and that production would be halted forthwith. In the letter, Lewis advised the President the miners were willing to negotiate in the hopes that "no substantial loss of production" would be incurred. Photo shows John L. Lewis as he gave out his statement to members of the press.

WRITE A LAST LINE TO THIS JINGLE

"Said Tweedledum to Tweedledee:
Raleighs are the smoke for me.
Better-tasting. Milder, too.
— — — — — — — — — —"

HERE'S WHAT YOU DO

It's simple. It's fun. Just think up a last line to this jingle. Make sure it rhymes with the word "too."

Write your last line of the jingle on the reverse side of a Raleigh package wrapper (or a facsimile thereof), sign it with your full name and address, and mail it to Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., P. O. Box 180, Louisville, Kentucky, postmarked not later than midnight, November 10, 1941.

You may enter as many last lines as you wish, if they are all written on separate Raleigh package wrappers (or facsimiles).

Prizes will be awarded on the originality and aptness of the line you write. Judges' decisions must be accepted as final. In case of ties, duplicate prizes will be awarded. Winners will be notified by mail.

Anyone may enter (except employees of Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corp., their advertising agents, or their families). All entries and ideas therein become the property of Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation.

HERE'S WHAT YOU WIN

You have 133 chances to win. If you send in more than one entry, your chances of winning will be that much better. Don't delay. Start thinking right now.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD
Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of worldwide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.
These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.
If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.
Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.
Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!
DOAN'S PILLS

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

U. S. Policy of 'Delivering the Goods' In Effort to Aid Foes of Hitlerism Is Nation's Objective, Says President; Nazis Pound Russians on Three Fronts

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

POLICY:
Defined by FDR

On the same day as the senate opened its debate on the historic measure aimed at stripping the neutrality act of all restrictions on American shipping, the President delivered his Navy day address in which he declared that the U. S. foreign policy was one of "delivering the goods" to friends of democracy.

He said that despite U. S. efforts to avoid it, "the shooting has started." Bristling with challenges to the Nazis, his speech pledged his administration to a policy of destroying Hitlerism and assisting in establishing a peace which will make a better world.

In writing to the Foreign Policy association an exposition of his own foreign policy, President Roosevelt had said that it was so simple a child could understand it.

The cardinal principle, he asserted, was the destruction of the "Hitler menace" and the protection of the American way of life from a system that would destroy it.

He admitted that there were those in this nation who would lull the people into a sense of false security, but warned that this action had preceded the fall of every country now occupied by Axis forces.

This and his Navy day address served the purpose of clarifying the situation as regarded the road the United States was prepared to travel in following the administration's leadership.

The President expressed himself as confident that his aims were the popular aims of the nation, and that the people would be ready with such sacrifices as would be necessary to carry them out.

SOVIET DEFENSE:
Last Ditch

What was called the "last all-out" attack possible for the Germans to launch had been touched off on all three of the major Soviet fronts, and there were indications that the defenders were reaching their last ditch.

The "military miracle" was happening before the eyes of the world, as the Red troops had apparently halted the full fury of the Nazi advance, had kept their defense lines intact, and were putting up what even Berlin admitted was a magnificent defense.

But whether they could continue to hold or not remained the latter part of the needed miracle. Germany announced the fall of Kharkov, Donets basin industrial center, a city of 850,000 souls, of 12-story industrial buildings, dubbed the Pittsburgh of Russia.

These are three women of the crew of the Russian freighter Petrovski which docked in the U. S. recently—the first Russian vessel to arrive here since the outbreak of the Russo-German war. The women sailors, photographed under the Red banner are (left to right): Maria Antonovna Bondarenko, Klavdia Sergena Borovik and Valentina Stutzerenko.

Fantastic stories were told of the losses on each side.

Strange was the report from Moscow, telling of Stalin in personal command, of the removal of Budenny and Voroshilov from command, to take charge of the forming of new armies, and of the placing of Timoshenko in actual command of the defense of the capital.

'BUTCHERIES':
Continuing

Prime Minister Churchill, President Roosevelt and General DeGaulle all had their say about what they called the "Nazi butcheries" of hostages which were continuing all over occupied Europe.

Resentful people were taking pot shots at high Nazi officers, and each time one of these hit a vital mark, scores of persons connected only distantly with the crime were being executed.

DEFIANCE:
By Miners

Following a 40-day period in which the National Mediation board had sought vainly for a peaceful settlement, and in which finally President Roosevelt himself had attempted to take a hand, a strike of 35,000 coal miners in seven vital mines had been called by John L. Lewis.

The headlines made the issue plain. Lewis Defies Roosevelt. Once an enthusiastic partisan of the administration, a man who had seen his C.I.O. grow to enormous stature under the broadly liberal labor laws passed under the Roosevelt administration, Lewis openly defied the President's personal request for "no strike."

The mines were the captive mines of the steel companies, and from them the coal and coke vital to steel-making were drawn, the steel firms contracting for the mines' entire output.

The strike was seen to hit at the very heart of the national defense.

Out of it, the friends of the labor movement frankly feared, would come the signing by the President of a long-dreaded "work or fight" order which would draft all defense strikers summarily into the army.

The strike was being watched with keen anxiety in dozens of important quarters.

KNOX:
And Japan

Secretary Knox of the navy, in an address, had stated that some sort of clash of a military and naval nature with Japan was "inevitable" and for once Tokyo seemed willing to agree with one of his utterances.

From Tokyo comes this picture of a Japanese aviator described by the caption as "about to take off" in fighting the Chinese. Note the Japanese flag being tied about his head.

The Domei news service, and the Times Advertiser, both authoritative, predicted that a special session of the diet would be called for the direct purpose of discussing Japanese-American relations.

They were both gloomy over the outlook for the lasting peace in the Pacific that the United States desired, and Japan was apparently fighting for—provided it would be a peace dominated by Nippon.

The American formula for peace was this: Withdrawal from China and Indo-China of Japanese, Americans and British. Recognition of the United States of the puppet government of Manchukuo. Guarantees of inviolability of territory to the "status quo" of governments.

And all recognized that Japan was far from willing to sign any such treaty.

KEARNY:
A Diary Story

The widow of a London doctor, only passenger on a recent convoy from Britain to the United States, kept a brief daily diary of her trip, and from it readers were able to glean more facts about the Kearny's torpedoing than they had from naval reports.

The torpedoing occurred two days after the convoy left Iceland, two days after the ships had been joined by the Kearny and "another U. S. destroyer."

Though the diarist's vessel was some distance from the naval ships, she wrote of the shattering impact of the depth bombs discharged by the Kearny when a submarine was reported .

She wrote:

"Our ship trembled like a leaf at each discharge. I thought surely we had been hit."

The Kearny and the other destroyer left the convoy, and were not seen again, she continued. Two days later she heard the Kearny had been torpedoed.

This gave the public a picture of the incident, and showed that in all probability the Kearny, after dropping depth bombs, must have followed the trail of the submarine. and finally was hit by a torpedo during the pursuit.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

1296-B

IT IS just like big sister's, that is why this jerkin, skirt and blouse outfit will be so dear to the heart of your teen-age daughter! She'll enjoy starting off to school in it—the jerkin buttoned down the side, the skirt smoothly flaring and the blouse fresh and clean! Pattern No. 1296-B is the kind you know you can't go wrong with. You can make the skirt and jerkin in a long wearing corduroy, tweed, plaid wool or gabardine and make up a set of blouses in washable cottons (and one in wool jersey, for extra warmth).

The jerkin can also be made to contrast with odd skirts, the skirt to go with sweaters and jackets and the blouse to be worn with suits and jumpers.

Women Are Cooler

Women are usually cooler than men not only because of their lighter-weight clothing but also because of their lower metabolic rate, says Collier's. A recent series of scientific experiments reveals that, on the average, women's limbs are three degrees cooler, their arms four degrees cooler and their hands and feet five degrees cooler than those of men.

"WIFE MEETS HUSBAND"

And what a meeting—after a hard day's work to have your wife greet you with a soothing, refreshing bottle of beer. Many happy homes are kept happy by the sensible use of a moderate beverage that brings relaxation from the day's strains and worries.

Dr. H. W. Haggard of Yale University says: "Our findings indicate that beer in reasonable amounts is essentially non-intoxicating". This opinion is shared by many other leading doctors, such as Dr. Henderson of Yale, Drs. Waddell and Haag of Virginia University and Dr. Carlson of the University of Chicago.

The "Brewing of Beer" is also one of Minnesota's leading industries, giving employment to approximately 35,000 people in Minnesota; this includes its manufacture, distribution and sale. In addition, the millions of dollars paid to Municipal, State and Federal Governments serve to lighten your tax burden.

Issued Weekly From The Home Of The Biggest Co-operative Creamery In Marshall County

H. O. Hanson, Publisher; Mrs. Mabel Hanson, Editor | Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Nov. 14, 1941. | Volume 31, Number 29

Many Turkeys Bought Here

The local creamery done a big turkey business here for the Thanksgiving Pool. Mr. Larson, manager of the creamery, states that they handled some over 27,000 pounds of birds here. According to his figures the birds averaged close to 12 pounds each and this would bring the pound total to about 2250 turkeys handled at the plant. Of this amount 1800 birds were dressed at the plant here, while the remainder of the birds were home dressed and delivered here.

Mr. Larson stated that most of the turkeys were of top quality and that this was due to the fact that they went right out to the farms and took in only the birds that were ready for market instead of having a patron bring in their whole flock and grade out the poorer birds after the were all dressed. The creamery used a large pick-up truck with a new turkey crate on it for the transportation.

Marvin Sandberg brought in the largest flock for the Thanksgiving pool with a 190 birds to his credit. Many others had well over a hundred birds. It is believed that there are as many birds left for the Christmas market as they took in for Thanksgiving from this area.

Mrs. Henry Nohre visited Mrs. H. O. Hanson Monday evening.

Ladies Aid Sale Tonight

Free Mission Ladies Aid Sale tonight. Lovely pieces of fancy work can be bought at your own price. Come and buy articles to give for Christmas gifts.

Many friends here of Mrs. Racine Olson of Thief River Falls were glad to see that she won the office of City Treasurer of the city of Thief River Falls at their election there last week.

Sawmills Run Full Capacity

Virtually every sawmill in the northern part of the state is operating to capacity to fill national defense demands for lumber, the Division of Forestry reported this week.

In fact, the demand is considerably greater than the supply of lumber. This is due partially to the fact that above-normal rains in August and September made many secondary roads impassable and slowed up cutting operations.

It appears that production for the coming season will be limited only by the supply of labor available for this type of work.

Approximately 450,000 Christmas trees will be cut from state lands this year.

These trees are taken from stagnant swamps where growth is extremely slow. The average age of the trees cut is 85 years, and none has reached a diameter of more than two and one-half inches. They never would reach size suitable for pulpwood.

Approximately 10 per cent of the black spruce trees growing in these swamps are cut for the Christmas trade, leaving 90 per per cent for ground cover.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of the fair variety. It has been sort of cloudy but not too cold and the farmers have had a chance to fix many small things around their places for the winter. We have also noticed that many of the village people have been putting paper around their houses and done some banking up around the buildings. So far, no snow.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre visited at the Ole Larson home Sunday evening.

Ease for your Eyes, too!

If You Want Real Relaxation—

Put a smart Certified I.E.S. Lamp beside your easy chair and settle back in comfort with that generous soft light that makes reading a pleasure and reduces eye strain. It takes less energy to read with good light than with inadequate light. Rest while you read with an I.E.S. Lamp.

An I.E.S. Lamp helps keep the woman of your heart looking lovely. It prevents telltale "crow's feet" in the corners of the eyes caused by squinting. There is no need to squint with a soft light from an I.E.S. Lamp.

Don't overlook the simple way to make home work easier for your children. Certified I.E.S. Lamps provide generous eye-protecting light that helps youngsters sail through studies in jig time.

RED CROSS AIDS ARMY MORALE

Red Cross workers are on the job in all Army and Navy camps and stations throughout the country to assist in the important task of maintaining morale. Above, an Army flier leaves unfinished personal matters for the Red Cross field director to take care of while he embarks on an emergency flight across country. The Red Cross is the official means of communication between service men and their families back home.

Olson-Johnson Wedding

Miss Marian Olson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Olson, and Mr. Orris Johnson, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Johnson, were united in marriage at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, November 1, at the Lutheran parsonage with Rev. Hanson officiating using the single ring ceremony.

The bride wore a formal of aqua blue. Her only jewelry was a gold locket, a gift from the bridegroom. Her attendant, Miss Mildred Odie, was dressed in a baby blue formal. She wore a double strand of pearls, a gift of the bride. Orlin Ness was the best man.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was given at the home of the bride's parents.

On Wednesday evening the newlyweds were given a reception at the Nazareth church parlors, which was filled to capacity with relatives and friends. They received many lovely gifts and a cash purse. They will make their home at Thief River Falls where the groom is employed.

In Memoriam

In memory of Ernest Wayne who passed away Nov. 18, 1939.

From this land of pain and sorrow,
To the land of peace and rest;
God has taken you, dearest Ernest
Where you have found eternal rest,
Some day we hope to meet you,
Some day, we know not when;
To clasp your hand in a better land
Never to part again.
You are gone but not forgotten,
And as dawns another year;
In our lonely hours of thinking
Thoughts of you are always near.
Days of sadness will come o'er us,
Friends may think the wound is healed
But they little know the sorrow,
That lies within the heart concealed.

Start to save all your scrap paper NOW. It won't be long until we will need it all for defense. There will come a time when it will have to be traded in for News Print in order to have any Newspapers. Paper is going up in price and becoming a very scarce item on the market.

The local Boy Scout Troop will begin collecting scrap paper on Saturday, so have it ready when they call.

Nelson-Knutson Wedding

Miss Sybil Nelson and Mr. Raymond Knutson were married at the Lutheran parsonage in Holt on Monday afternoon, November 10th. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated using the single ring ceremony. Their attendants were Miss Edith Nelson of Grand Forks and Mr. Harlan Knutsen, sister and brother of the bride and groom respectively. The bride is the daughter of Mr. Christ Nelson and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Knutson, both families living northeast of Thief River Falls.

Peterson-Magnuson Wedding

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Peterson announce the marriage of their daughter Eleanor to Pvt. Malcolm Magnuson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Magnuson of Thief River Falls. The wedding took place in the Eden Lutheran church at Riverside, California, on Saturday afternoon, November 1st. Rev. Philip Johnson of that church performed the ceremony. Pvt. Magnuson is stationed at March Field, Calif.

Word has been received here that Miss Clara Engebretson, daughter of Mrs. Iver Engebretson of Thief River Falls, and Arthur O. Sundfor, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. G. Sundfor of Fargo were married on Sunday, August 10 at the Nazareth Lutheran Church in Chicago, by Rev. Kohn They are making their home in Chicago where Mr. Sundfor is attending the Northern Illinois College of Optometry and is employed in the office of Dr. N. R. Nelson.

John Morkassel, a member of the McCrea 4H Club, was selected as winner of a trip to the Annual meeting and Exhibit of the state Horticultural Society.

In making this announcement, Mr. A. J. Kittelson, State Club Agent, said that John was selected because of his fine record in the garden and small fruit project. This is the first time a Marshall County member has won this award and we can be sure that John will find it well worth while. The meeting was held on Wednesday and Thursday this week at Minneapolis.

Ten Weeks Training Course

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 19, the Nazareth Lutheran Church will begin a 10 week study of "Christian Truth and Religious Delusions." After Wednesday evening, it will be held usually on Friday evenings. Five sessions will be held before Christmas and five after Christmas. Registrations will be only for those who desire to complete their Standard Lutheran Teachers Training Certificate. But the Studies on true and false religions will be given so as to be of general interest to all. Rev. Casper B. Nervig's book will be used as a text. The first lecture will be the "Evangelcal Lutheran Church", then will follow in order the Catholic Curches; Reformed Churches, and a certain sect for each lecture such as Adventism, Russelism, Mormonism and many others. These will not only be lectures but also questions may be asked and discussed. All the members and friends of the congregation and community are invited to attend.

About 50 men were in attendance at Men's Club on Monday evening when they listened to a very interesting address by Major Gustav Scinlbred of Thief River Falls.

Mrs. Walter Peterson spent a few days at the home of her parente, Mr. and Mrs. George Leslie, last week. Her mother had fallen and was injured.

World War I Draftees

The number of men in the United States who answered the first three registrations at the time of the World war was 24,234,000. Some 337,640 persons were listed as draft deserters, of which 163,738 were apprehended. Of those who registered, 64,693 claimed non-combatant classification and, according to army records, 56,830 of these claims were recognized.

As Army Takes Over Air Plant

With an armed soldier standing by, machinists are shown at work in the Bendix plant of Air Associates, Inc., Bendix, N. J., the defense plant taken over by the U. S. army on orders from President Roosevelt. The army rehired workers "as Americans," disregarding their previous status in the dispute which had kept the vital defense plant idle. Col. Roy M. Jones, military commander of the plant, stands behind the sentry. More than $5,000,000 in defense contracts are held by the plant, which manufactures airplane parts.

They're Ready for Anything

Members of a volunteer parachute troop, in training at an R.A.F. station, rush to "attack position" after discarding their 'chutes. Their work calls for skill and daring, as they may some day be called upon, if Britain invades German-occupied territory, to drop behind the lines, much as Nazi parachutists have done.

IT'S difficult to write calmly and critically about Walt Disney's "Dumbo"—in fact, it's practically impossible. This story of the baby elephant with the over-size ears, who's born into a circus and made miserable by the other animals because of those same ears, is completely enchanting. There's Timothy Mouse, successor to Jiminey Cricket; there's the band of black crows, there's the squealing circus engine—and there's the really lovely sequence in which pink elephants dance. Every moment of this hour-long picture is delightful—no two ways about it, you'll have to see "Dumbo."

Jean Phillips, once Jean Harlow's stand-in, had moved from a bit to a co-starring role in just two pictures—she's the first stand-in since Adrienne Ames to become a leading woman, which is bad news for girls who hope to climb to stardom by that route. Her first break came when she was cast in "Among the Living"; that performance earned her the second lead in "The Morning After." Now she's co-starred with Macdonald Carey in "Dr. Broadway." Her resemblance to Ginger Rogers blocked her career when she first went to Hollywood.

Remember the parting of the Red sea in C. B. DeMille's "The Ten Commandments"—or the chariot race in "Ben Hur"—or the earthquake in "San Francisco"? Mr. DeMille thinks he's added a memorable sequence to that list—the squid fight in "Reap the Wild Wind." Ray Milland and John Wayne, in diving suits, are exploring the hull of a wrecked vessel in a search for Susan Hayward when they encounter the sea monster. Mr. DeMille donned a diving suit and directed the scenes, in a huge tank. For other scenes in the picture he descended 20 feet into the Pacific, to the ocean floor. Said it was the only way he could get the eerie realism that he required.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS

● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.

● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.

● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

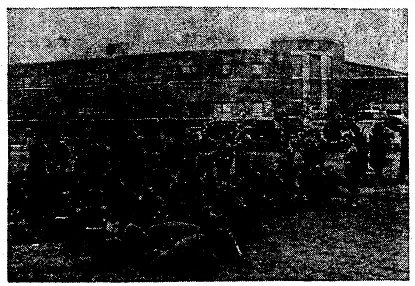
WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Army, Navy and Commercial Airlines Suffer in Series of Plane Crashes; 'Reuben James' Sinking, F.D.R. Speech Draw Formal Statement From Hitler

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



Troops who took over the Bendix, N. J., plant of Air Associates, at the command of President Roosevelt are shown camping in a field near the plant. The order for the plant's occupation came in the interests of "national defense" according to official sources as Air Associates holds millions of dollars' worth of defense contracts for various kinds of aviation equipment. Production had been held up because of difficulty between the company and union leaders, but work got under way soon after the troops moved in.

FIRST LOSS:
Sinking of 'James'

First American naval loss of the war was the Reuben James, 1,000-ton destroyer, 20 years old, sent to the bottom of the Atlantic with an undetermined loss of life somewhere west of Iceland.

Details were shrouded with greatest secrecy by the navy, who finally disclosed that 44 men, apparently all enlisted men, were saved. Whether more would later be rescued was problematical.

She carried about 120 officers and men. Whether she had previously encountered and battled successfully with submarines was a matter of conjecture.

One news service had obtained a purported letter from one of the sailors on the Reuben James which stated that the vessel had sunk two submarines, "maybe more."

The writer was Leonidas C. Dickerson, a seaman, who wrote to his aunt in Danville, Va.:

"We've been at sea for 42 consecutive days, and I've lost lots of sleep. I'll be glad when we're through with this job and I can get some sleep again."

The letter, written several weeks before the sinking, said:

"We have gotten two subs, maybe more. I have lots to tell you when I see you."

Another letter told of a submarine attack on the James. It had been written by Harold James Orange to his mother, Mrs. Marie Orange, in Chicago. He said:

"I was up on the crow's nest on watch when we were nearing Iceland and I saw a torpedo. It was coming right for us. I gave the alarm and we started zig-zagging. It missed us, sped right by. I saw not one, but several submarines."

REACTION:
In Many Quarters

Following the sinking of the Reuben James the reactions followed swiftly, drawing certain powerful figures closer to the President's foreign policy, and bringing from Hitler's headquarters no other statement than that "people foolish enough to walk down a railroad track may expect to be run over."

Berlin issued a lengthy formal statement from Hitler, most of which was devoted to answering the President's Navy day address.

He reiterated his statements that the South American map and the document purporting to reveal a Nazi plan to do away with all religion as "nonsensical" and "crude forgeries." He categorically denied that the Reich government had created either of these items.

The wording of the declarations from the German leader was scanned carefully by foreign correspondents, who saw in it the typical Nazi line of argument that their vessels had been attacked; that Germany was being attacked by the United States, that the U. S. was stamping itself as the aggressor.

These words were believed significant in that it was the usual German terminology preceding an open break between the Reich and another nation. It was pointed out that treaties between Germany and her Axis partners called for help in case any member of the three is attacked.

'Declaration'?

Hitler, it was believed by the correspondents, was simply laying the usual groundwork for a definite hostile declaration against this country and its policies.

He said: "Herr Roosevelt has been placed before the tribunal for world judgment of his acts."

The declaration attacked the truth of Roosevelt's statements that the Greer and the Kearny had been attacked by the Germans, and stamped both vessels as the attackers.

PLANES:
Keep Crashing

Started off by the crashing of five army pursuit planes, this disaster seemed the signal for a series of tragic losses, which had reached a new record for American aviation.

A Northwest Airlines plane dropped to earth in a fog, killing 14 persons and hurling the pilot clear. Within 24 hours a 21-passenger American Airlines plane, carrying 20 persons, plummeted to earth in a rainstorm near St. Thomas, Can., and burst into flames. All lost their lives.

Less than 48 hours later an army bomber, with five air corps men aboard, fell out of misty clouds into a cornfield near Findlay, Ohio, and burst into flames.

The five men were instantly killed.

Then it was the navy's turn to announce a disaster. This was the crash of a huge bomber at sea with the loss of 12 lives. The plane was "operating in the Atlantic ocean area."

At nearly the same time a 22-year-old American of German extraction was arrested at the Glenn L. Martin plant in Baltimore, and confessed to be a saboteur of planes, having cut electrical wires in such a way that contacts would be broken at some later date.

His deeds had affected more than a hundred planes, though most, if not all of them, had been discovered. So cleverly did he hide his work that suspicion had been thrown on hundreds of other employees. It took the FBI agents from July until late October to catch him.

REDS:
'Reservoirs'

Although the defense lines around Moscow had been bending now and then, the break had not come, and enormous reserves from "manpower reservoirs" in Siberia and other parts of the vast country were reported as having been hurled into the fray.

The United States heard that the first American planes had gone into battle, and had bombed Berlin, a fact which Berlin promptly denied.

It was an unquestioned fact that the Reds had, however, some of the newest and largest American bombing planes, easily capable of flights over Berlin and back.

The Nazis had broken through into the Crimea, however, and the fall of the whole peninsula, thus opening one narrow and difficult road to the Caucasus, was believed certain.

NEUTRALITY:
Battle

With even its opponents admitting that victory was sure, and anti-administration editorial writers regarding it editorially as a fait accompli, there still was bitter fighting over the measure on the floor of the senate.

A notable acquisition of support, however, came when Senator Bridges of New Hampshire, long a foe of the administration's policy, switched over and spoke in behalf of the bill which would remove from the Neutrality act those measures which would prevent arming of merchant vessels, and would open all ports to the American flag ships.

Another indication of support was the agreement in the senate to push forward action on the bill. This had followed the sinking of the Reuben James.

Senator Ball of Minnesota, a Republican, held that freedom of the seas was necessary for the preservation of our liberties; while Senator Clark of Missouri was attacking the President, and daring him to ask for a formal declaration of war.

Clark said the measure was "intended to be and can only be an authorization for a state of war."

Entirely New Principles Employed in Coal Heater

Will Heat All Day and All Night in Coldest Weather Without Refueling.

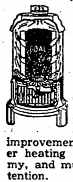
MANY improvements in furnaces, both oil and coal burning types, have been reported in late years, but little change, until recently, has been noted in the coal heating stove, which still is depended upon in millions of homes for warmth and comfort. A late development in this field has brought out an improved coal burning heater. It employs a radically new design in firebox and heating flues, advanced ideas in combustion engineering and other improvements that result in greater heating efficiency, fuel economy, and much less operating attention.



A desirable feature of this coal heater is that it may be loaded with 100 pounds of coal at one time. The coal, stored in the magazine, gradually feeds semi-automatically of its own weight to the bottom firebed, the heat making coke of the upper coal layers, when bituminous coal is used. The gases formed in this coking process escape through newly designed flues in the firebox and are consumed by the flames which travel up outside the fuel chamber. Even the gases released on top of the fuel bed burn as the flames pass over the top. The coal, or coke into which it is transformed, slowly works to the bottom firebed where it is consumed, leaving a fine ash and no clinkers.

Because of its large fuel capacity and the advanced construction principles employed, it will heat all day and all night in coldest weather without refueling. In mild weather this heater will hold fire for several days. All with very little attention. Users generally need to start a fire but once a season.

Regulation of heat is governed by a simple adjustment of drafts. Because it holds fire so well and so long, the home where it is used is warm every morning. Because of this feature the stove has been named Warm Morning.

Along with the standard models which hold 100 pounds of coal, there is a larger heater with nearly 200 lb. coal capacity made especially for heating schools, churches, lodge halls and warehouses.—Adv.

When McKinley Turned And 'Brought Up' Mother

A short while after her son had assumed the presidency, Mrs. McKinley was interviewed.

"What would you consider most important in raising a child to be President?" asked one reporter.

"That's a difficult question," replied Mrs. McKinley. "There are so many things to teach boys. They should be taught to be honest, reliable, fair." Then she added: "But I didn't really bring my boy up to be President. I brought him up to be a good man. That's all any mother can do. First thing I know my son turned around and began bringing me up to be the mother of a President!"

When the shopping list is long, and the purse none too full, cigarettes and smoking tobacco come to the front as ideal gifts for the holiday season. The welcome they get from any smoker is all out of proportion to their modest cost. That's why Camel—America's favorite cigarette, and Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco—the National Joy Smoke—rank as leading gifts on the Christmas shopping lists. Dealers are featuring the Camel carton—ten packs of "20's"—and a novel Camel package of four "flat fifties," also Prince Albert in the pound tin and the pound glass humidor—all specially gift packaged.—Adv.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

FALL sewing will be taken up with renewed interest when this pattern comes into your house! This two piecer is a style of many uses to be interpreted in various materials! It is smart, wonderfully comfortable and, as every woman knows, kind to the figure. Pattern No. 1473-B is especially successful as it offers the new longer top, with darts fitting it smoothly through the waistline. There are three buttons closing the top and four patch pockets.

This new length jacket fits well down over the hips and the skirt follows a gently flaring line below. It's a frock to make now in plaid wools, it will be suit-like in gabardine or corduroy, especially when worn with the crisp white dickey.

Ready For Winter

There's a tidy, cozy air about the farm these late autumn days. The fields, save where the corn is uncut, lie orderly in plowed neatness or their stubbled trimness. Cribs overflow with big yellow ears and fodder, stacked high near the barn, serves as windbreak for the stock. A pile of straw stands conveniently near. The loft bulges with hay.

Already the coats of cattle grow shaggy against the cold. Turkeys, unaware of what their heaviness portends, stroll sedately about. Horses, putting on weight after the harsh work of summer, have a contended look. Pigs grunt in wonder at the plentitude of their fare.

Men go briskly at their work, mending fences or picking corn—stopping now and then to gaze proudly at their fattening steers.

In the house, too, there is unhurried busyness. Mincemeat must be made and the last of the canning finished. In basement or root cellar the garden's plunder is hidden from the frost—pumpkins, squash, turnips, carrots, a corner full of potatoes, a heap of cabbage. Kraut jars stand ready and in a cask cider turns slowly to vinigar.

The farmer, surrounded by the harvest of his land, faces winter confidently and knows his life is good.

The members of the Nazrreth Lutheran Church Council and their wives were entertained at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre on Monday evening, the occasion being a meeting of the Council Those attending were: Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Holst, Mr. and Mrs. G. Sanoden, Rev. and Mrs. Hanson and son Harold, Mr. and Mrs. Ole M. Larson, Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Sandberg and Delores, Mrs. O. J. Backlund and Hjalmer Peterson.

Hens Help Farm Income

Marshall County hens are doing their part to assist the national farm income to the highest level in 12 years. Estimates indicate that the farmers' gross income in 1941 will exceed eleven billion dollars for the first time since 1929, up two billion over 1940.

Coupling heavy production with a favorable market condition means that income from eggs alone should exceed $600,000,000. The nations' hens are expected to produce forty billion eggs this year, on the basis of production figures to date assembled at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Heavy defense buying and sales promotion activities were prime reasons for the higher price structure. Chain stores which last year purchased 40 per cent of the eggs produced in Minnesota, report consnmption holding rather well, aided by higher national income and mass distribution methods which reduce the spread between producer and consumer prices.

The favorable price situation is illustrated by the fact that in the flush production period this year it took only 6.87 dozen eggs to buy 100 pounds of poultry ration, compared with 8.27 in the same period last year.

The equivalent of nearly 120,000,000 dozen in shell, frozen and powdered form, has been purchased since the lend-lease bill was passed.

Quality campaigns, resultiug in a better grade of eggs in Minnesota brought about increased purchasing by the mass distributors. One chain, the A&P, reported it bought 10,600,000

Production in the state is expected to exceed 165,967,000 dozen eggs, with Marshall County contributing more than 1,160,000 dozen of this total.

Jean Sorum of Grand Forks was a Holt visitor over the week end.

Bovine Tuberculosis Test

Beginning Monday, November 24, thirty state veterinarians will start testing cattle of Marshall County for Bovine Tucerculosis. This test is necessary in order that Marshall County may remain as a modified Accredited Tuberculosis free area. The last test was conducted in 1936 and the law specifically provided that in order to be reaccredited an area test must be conducted every six years.

All cattle will be tested. There will be no direct expense either to the farmer or to the county. The expenses are borne by the State as provided for by the co-operative agreement executed with the board of county commissioners.

The test will take two weeks and will be completed on Saturday, December 6. Farmers will receive notice of the date and honr when their herd will be tested, and in order not to delay the work farmers are requested to have their cattle in the barn at the time veterinarians call to make the test. If farmers fail to cooperate it will delay the work and will disappoint farmers who have been notified that their herds are to be tested at a later hour on the same day.

Thirty men have been appointed to act as assistants to the veterinarians during this test. These assistants will meet at the Court House in Warren on Sunday for a conference with veterinarians and instructions as to which herds to test.

Mrs. Mike Leiran was given a farewell party at her home east of Thief River Falls on Sunday afternoon. Those present from here were Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Leiran and Marcella, Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen and Dorothy, and Mr. and Mrs. O. L. Johnson and Gloria. Mrs. Leiran left on Monday to make her home in Minneapolis.

Better Diets For People

Nutrition, or Better Diets for Stronger People, has become one of the most important sectors to the "Food for Freedom" campaign of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, according to Dorothy F. Rau, home management supervisor of Marshall and Pennington Counties for the Farm Security Administration.

With a Nutrition unit organized in every county in the nation, the Farm Securiuy Administration is pledged to take part in the program, and will work in Marshall and Pennington Counties in cooperation with other agencies.

"Every effort will be made," said Miss Rau, "to enrich the diets to the low-income families on our program. Although this campaign has become a national movement, we feel that a special obligation rests upon the Farm Security Administration."

Contrary to the general opinion that rural families have better diets than other families, studies show that this is not the case. An alarming number of rural youth are found to be unfit for military service because of dietary defiencies.

"Farm Security's garden program is right in line with the 1942 production goals set by the Department of Agriculture," Miss Rau continued, "and we will continue to place emphasis not only on the quantity of garden products but on the variety as well. Garden seed bought cooperatively by FSA borrowers in many counties last year helped increase the amount of vegetables raised, canned, and stored. The plan also helped put variety in diets by introducing new vegtables in gardens. Most FSA borrowers now have a year around supply of canned goods."

Miss Rau said that FSA will work to see that diets of FSA families measure up to the nutritional 'Gold Standard', which includes: One pint of milk a day for an adult and one quart for a child; a serving of meat; one egg two vegetables, one of which should be green or yellow; two fruits, one of which shall be rich in Vitamin C which is found abundantly in citrus fruits and tomatoes; some butter, breads, flour and cereal, most preferably all whole wheat grain or enriched.

"THE WINNING GOAL"

Here in Minnesota we take our football seriously. The Football fever hits us along in the first cool days of autumn; but it only results in a pleasant, wholesome quickening of the pulse that lasts through the colorful autumn days. We surge with pride over our Minnesota championship teams manned by home town boys from Faribault, Austin, Marshall; Milaca, International Falls, Brainerd, Bemidji, Slayton, St. Cloud, Eveleth, Chisholm, Luverne and numerous other towns.

After the game many followers of football gather to discuss the game and relax taut nerves; over a bottle of wholesome beer. One of the winning goals in life is to live happily and temperately, and the Brewers of Minnesota are proud to supply the fans with a beverage of moderation that "hits the spot" following the game. Why not try a bottle of delicious, relaxing beer after seeing or hearing the next game?

'They Got Me Covered' Is Funniest Book of Year

A NEW all-around champion has been crowned . . . in the entertainment world. He is Bob Hope. Not satisfied with being rated tops on the radio, Number One in screen box office receipts, he is author of one of the nation's best sellers, which just about nails down this triple crown for Bob. "They Got Me Covered," Hope's autobiography, has been claimed by critics and readers alike as one of the year's funniest books. It is a hilarious story, in narrative form, of Bob Hope's life, generously illustrated with photographs, in addition to having cartoons depicting scenes from his life.

The book is now available at drug and department stores throughout America at 10 cents per copy with the purchase of a Pepsodent product. This low price is possible because the sale of the book has been sponsored by the Pepsodent Company.—Adv.

ASK ME ANOTHER?

A General Quiz

The Questions

1. What country was known in olden times as Cathay?
2. Which is said to be the world's most beautiful harbor?
3. Where is the phrase "diminished fifth" most likely to be encountered?
4. The name metropolis is derived from a Greek word meaning what?
5. Approximately how tall is a male giraffe?
6. "Brother Jonathan" is a nickname once given to what country?
7. What is the estimated Jewish population of the world?
8. Why is the bow on a man's hat always worn on the left?
9. Who wrote the words of the song "My Country 'Tis of Thee"?
10. How came the down stroke to be used as an English shilling sign?

The Answers

1. China.
2. Rio de Janeiro.
3. In music.
4. Mother city.
5. Eighteen feet.
6. United States.
7. In 1939, 15,748,901, according to the American Jewish committee.
8. The bow on a man's hat is a link with the days when men wore long drooping plumes, and also carried swords. The long plumes were always worn on the left of the headgear, to keep them clear of the sword arm. When the plume gave way to a long ribbon bow, that remained on the left. Our conservatism has kept the neat bow of today on the same side.
9. Samuel F. Smith.
10. In earlier English printing and writing the letter "s" was shaped much like our present "f." In those days, therefore, a price would be shown as, say, 5f. The stroke now used is merely a simplified form of that long "s."

Duty to Neighbor

There is an idea abroad among moral people that they should make their neighbors good. One person I have to make good: myself. But my duty to my neighbor is much more nearly expressed by saying that I have to make him happy if I may.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Stalin Sees Nazi Collapse Within Year As Hitler Challenges British Invasion; Japanese Get Warning From Churchill Against Involvement in War With U. S.

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

After a lengthy debate in the senate, that body passed the bill authorizing the arming of U. S. merchant vessels and following the 50-37 vote, the photographer got this picture. It shows left to right Sen. Millard Tydings, against the bill; Allen W. Barkley for the bill; Tom Connally, for the bill and Bennett Champ Clark who was against the bill.

HITLER:

Talks Boldly

Adolf Hitler, exuding confidence with the passing of another of the anniversaries of the "beer cellar putsch," and having been congratulated on his excellent health and appearance, had made another address to his backers in which he defied the world.

The "Fuehrer" declared that he had created a united European front against communism, that the eastern front's successes were assured, and he dared England to attempt an invasion from the west.

"I have made such preparations in the west," he declared, "that the British can step up at any time.

"If the English choose to undertake an offensive, whether it is in Norway, on our German coast or in Holland, Belgium or France, we can only say "step up, you will leave faster than you came."

Two years ago a bomb had wrecked the hall minutes after Hitler walked out of it. The assembled crowd did not know until the last minute this time whether he would appear or not.

He scorned direct reference to the might the United States was hurling into the picture, saying his orders had increased many fold the armament potential of Germany since the start of the war.

The speech ignored the unrest in Europe, the halting of the blitzkrieg in front of Moscow and Leningrad, the announced intention of the Finns to quit the war on Russia soon, the passage of the neutrality act revision bill by the senate, the recent utterances of Roosevelt and of Churchill.

There was no reference to the enormous German losses as outlined by Josef Stalin, nor to the growingly heavy attacks on the Reich by the Royal Air force of Britain.

He boldly declared his armies could defend Germany and all of occupied Europe, "despite American threats and plans for gigantic armament." He was cheered to the echo.

STALIN:

Celebrates

The anniversary of the October revolution was celebrated in Moscow with Stalin himself reviewing troops in front of the grim walls of the Kremlin, with hordes of Russian fighting planes wheeling overhead and less than 50 miles away the Red armies battling to hold back the Nazi hordes.

The Germans had boasted that the Russians would have been beaten to their knees long before the annual great Soviet holiday. Instead Stalin was in his country's capital city, reviewing the troops in the customary fashion, despite the war.

He declared that the Germans had lost 4,500,000 men in killed, wounded and captured since the start of the invasion of Russia, admitted that much territory had been lost while "Russia stood alone" against the invader, but promised his people that Germany was beaten and within a year would collapse under the weight of "its crimes."

There was a bitter note in Stalin's talk as to the lack of full British cooperation, though he did give thanks for the aid that had been received.

Yet there was a great deal of calm confidence, and he expressed his nation's willingness to fight on, come what may, until the collapse of Germany, regarded by him as inevitable, would take place.

PICTURE:

Red Front

The ever-dubious picture of the Red front against the Nazis had begun to clarify itself somewhat, the general view being that the Russian armies were somewhat in jeopardy on the southern sector, though rapidly assuming the offensive in the north and central portions.

Attacks by the Red armies were cited at Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of Moscow; at Volokolamsk, 65 miles outside the city; at Mozhaisk, and at Maloyaroslavets.

CHURCHILL:

And Roosevelt

As Hitler and Stalin were celebrating anniversaries, and each predicting the future with confidence, each from his own standpoint, Churchill hailed that "glorious warrior Stalin," told Britons that the entry of the U. S. naval vessels into the war left Britain no longer alone, and predicted that England had been rendered, by this aid, "once more masters of our own fate."

In another statement he warned that should the U. S. be forced into war with Japan, Britain would join in the fight against Nippon "within the hour."

Roosevelt, beset by strikes and threats of labor troubles, also meeting a determined challenge of his policy in the senate debate on the neutrality act revision, issued an appeal to labor to work for the national defense, and to place labor quarrels to one side.

There had been a momentary lull in sea-losses, though the dead in the Reuben James disaster had risen to 101. This loss stood as a silent speech-maker in the senate halls during the neutrality act debate, and was being used to show the people the all-out necessity of naval aid to America in "delivering the goods" where needed.

NEUTRALITY:

New Phase

The relatively close senate action on the neutrality act revision did not change the situation as regarded the outcome, which meant the death of the final two parts of the measure placed in it at the beginning of the war at the insistence of the isolationists.

Their final fortresses had now fallen, and with the navy's range extended to every port in the world, and with American merchant vessels ready to move, armed for their own protection, into those same ports, the de facto complete entry of this country into the naval battle was considered a certainty.

Representative Bloom indicated that the full authority of the bill might not be used at once, might never be used. He said:

"The situation is tense throughout the world. This is true both on the Atlantic and the Pacific. It is better to have the power which the repeal gives the President and not to need it, than to need it and not to have it."

This seemed to be the attitude of many members of congress who were not anxious to see American ships in danger-laden and belligerent ports, but who deeply felt the need of an all-out American effort and the means to make it so if necessary.

PACIFIC:

Threat Closer

The Clipper flight of special envoy Kurusu to the United States apparently to make a final effort to "clarify" the Japanese position on the Pacific brought only gloomy predictions in Washington as to the mission's probable outcome.

Japanese position in the Orient and the British-American stand seemed poles apart, and little likelihood of betterment in the situation.

In fact, there had been a report "on excellent" authority that plans were well advanced for joint British and American action in the East.

There was sudden talk of "appeasement" when it was announced that the United States would withdraw its marines from the Orient, yet this had been promptly scotched by Secretary Hull, who stated that this was a long-considered policy and had nothing whatever to do with Japanese-American relations.

Both Britain and the United States had placed Japan on notice that neither nation would stand for any further expansion of the Japanese domain, and this apparently went for Siberia as well as for Indo-China.

Carpenter, who bears the distinction of being the oldest World War I veteran, was feted on his centenary of birth by his fellow Legionnaires.*

COSTLY:

British Raid

The biggest British raid on Germany had been carried out with a terrific cost of 37 of the newest bombers, and an estimated 200 fliers.

The ships lost included the new four-motored Stirlings and Halifaxes, the report said. The Germans claimed 14 more, thus putting the maximum loss at 51 planes in 24 hours.

The British reported that much of the loss might be attributed to bad weather conditions, thunderstorms and icing being found over the Reich and the German fighters being forced to keep the ground because of these facts.

It was regarded as the supreme R.A.F. offensive of the war, and was aimed at reducing the pressure on the Moscow and Leningrad fronts, at least from the air.

Hour after hour, even following the original loss of 37 bombers, the newest ships shot over the channel in a steady stream, fighting weather, German fighters, and hurling death and destruction not only on the Reich but on key points in Italy.

STRIKES:

And Threats

Despite the truce in the steel strike and the personal victory for President Roosevelt in the express strike, in which the men agreed to return to work at his request, there were many labor troubles looming, chief among them the December 5 deadline for railway labor negotiations.

The strike of the teamsters union in Detroit was tied up with what was claimed to be a refusal of the railway clerks' union to submit to arbitration. It was one of the difficult jurisdictional questions out of which some of the most bitter strikes had come.

At the same time the congress, which had refused to include wage ceilings in its price control bill, was watching the strike situation, also the opening of the Canadian price-fixing act, which included wage ceilings based on a system of bonuses to cover increases in the cost of living.

COMMANDOS:

New Shock Troops

The British Commandos (an old South African word meaning small, speedy bands of desperate troops) which for a long time had been reported to be carrying out successful raids on Italy and the occupied French and Norwegian coasts, are to be stressed and made larger in the future, the British had revealed.

They are being composed mostly, it is reported, by men who have lost everything that life holds dear, and who have left to them only a burning hatred for the enemy and a desire for vengeance.

They include Polish pilots who are so willing to die that they will drive their fighter planes head-on into German bombers and pursuit planes.

They also include men of every nationality that has felt the Nazi heel, including Englishmen, whose loved ones have been blown to bits during German bombings of British cities.

It was revealed that they have been attacking along the Mediterranean coast with terrific results.

MISCELLANY:

Washington: Army high officers revealed that the 1,500,000 American men now in the army would eat 750 tons of turkey Thanksgiving day.

* * *

Berlin: It was reported that the Germans jailed a Roman Catholic priest who had been accused of offering prayers for Jews against whom the government had initiated a new and intensive campaign.

Holt, Marshall County, Minnesota, Friday, Nov. 28, 1941.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of the changing kind. It started in wintery like over the week end with a light snow and cold. This soon broke and this week so far we have had mild days with bright sunshine.

The E. R. Evans graveling crew tied up for the winter on Sunday evening when they completed a job in the northeastern part of the county.

Extracts of Minutes of Meeting of School Board of School District No. 35 Marshall County, Minnesota, held October 27, 1941.

Pursuant to due notice of call thereof a special meeting of the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County Minnesota, was duly held at the School House in said District at Holt, Minnesota, on the 27th day of October, 1941, at 8:00 o'clock P. M.

The following members were present: Sam Lorentson, Gilbert Sanoden, Geo. Fricker, O. T. Ness, Hilmer Moberg O. H. Nohre and the following were absent:

The chairman announced that the meeting was open for the consideration of bids for the purchase of $22,000 Refunding Bonds in accordance with a resolution adopted by the School Board on October 6, 1941.

The Clerk presented an affidavit showing publication of notice of sale of said bonds two weeks in the official newspaper, which was examined and found satisfactory, and ordered placed on file. The Chairman then called for bids for said bonds. No sealed bids were received. Bidders then presented certified checks and offered to submit oral auction bids. After all bidding had ceased the highest and best bid of each bidder was found to be as follows:

| Name of Bidder | Amount of Bid |
|---|---|
| Park-Shaughnessy & Co.St. Paul, Minn. | $22,000--3% |

After consideration of said bids, Member Geo. Fricker introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLUTION
A RESOLUTION SELLING $22,000 REFUNDING BONDS

BE IT RESOLVED by the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, that the bid of Park-Shaughnessy & Co. to purchase $22,000 Refunding Bonds in accordance with the resolution adopted October 6, 1941, and the notice of sale is hereby accepted, said bid being to purchase said bonds bearing interest at the rate of 3% per annum at a price of $22,000, and the purchaser shall not be obliged to see to the application of the purchase price.

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Chairman and Clerk sign a contract for the sale of said bonds with the successful bidder and that the certified check of such bidder be retained until the bonds are taken up and paid for and all other certified checks shall be returned.

The motion for the adoption of the foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Member O. T. Ness, and upon vote being taken thereon the following voted in favor thereof: Gilbert Sanoden, Geo. Fricker, O. T. Ness, Hilmer Moberg, O. H. Nohre and the following voted against same: None, whereupon said resolution was declared duly passed and adopted.

There being no further business a motion was made by Fricker and seconded by Ness that the said meeting be adjourned.

Sam Lorentson, Pres. of Board.
Gilbert Sanoden, Clerk.

Life of Ole Davidson

Funeral services were held from the Free Mission church on Friday afternoon for Ole Davidson who passed away at his home in East Valley township Tuesday morning at 3 a. m. after a lingering illness of seven months. Ole Davidson passed away at the age of 78 years, 8 months and 24 days.

Give Gifts for "Little Norway"

The officers and members of the Program Committee of the Men's Club and some of the local members of the American Legion met at the parsonage on Monday evening. It was decided to have a special program at the School House on Thursday evening, December 11th, when funds will be raised to send a little Christmas gift to the boys who are in the Royal Norwegian Air Force at Camp "Little Norway", near Toronto. The boys located there are training in the Air Corps. Nearly all have escaped from Norway since the Invasion and are training for service overseas. They are not allowed any communication from the homeland. It has been felt by so many in the community that a little reminder of Christmas in a new land would be fitting. So there will be the opportunity at this time. There is a special request for Norwegian books and any one having some Norwegian books, novels, fiction, religions, ect. may make good use of them by sending them to the boys in "Little Norway". You may bring them to the parsonage at Holt, to Ludvig F. Larson or to the program on Dec. 11.

Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiated at the wedding of Miss Hilda Hvidsten and Stanton Thorson in 1st Lutheran Church at Stephen on Thanksgiving Day. Mr. Thorson is a former Milan boy and a close friend of the Hansons.

Thanksgiving Day guests at the Mrs. Paul Olson home were: Mr. and Mrs. Theo. Olson, Lucille and Norman of Spooner, Mrs. Hazel Olson and sons of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. Olaf Erickson and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Olson.

Mrs. Jenny Jesme returned to her home at Skime, Minn. Thursday after spending two weeks at the Ole Davidson home.

Pvt. Willie E. Paetznick, son of Mrs. Mary Paetznick, left Sunday after being home on a furlough to return to Camp San Luis. Obispo, Calif.

Minnesota Corn Champion

DeKalb, Ill.—George Sturm of Mankato, Minnesota, has won the Minnesota state championship for the biggest corn yield in the annual 1941 National DeKalb hybrid corn growing contest.

His yield was 157.01 bushels per acre.

The national champion this year is Evan Sanderson, Flora, Ind., who had 173.03 bushels per acre.

Last year William Mentjes of Minnesota was national champion with a 157.69 bushels per acre yield. Sturm's record was over five times the average acre yield for the entire nation. Over 10,000 farmers in the 13 principal corn raising states competed in the contest.

His five acre competition plot of corn was grown under ordinary farming conditions from hybrid seed.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nohre entertained the following at dinner on Thanksgiving day: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Nohre of Pembina, N. D., Mr. Lufkin and daughter Harriet of Thief River Falls, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Nohre, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Peterson and Rev. and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson and son Harold.

Mrs. Ida Wagner and sons and daughter Alma and Leslie Paetznick called at the Mrs. Paetznick and Herman Severts home Friday evening.

Annual Church Meeting

The Annual meetings of the Nazareth Lutheran Church and the Nazareth Ladies Aid will be held in the Church and Church Parlors respectively on Thursday evening, December 4th, at 3:00 p. m. Election of officers will take place in both organizations and the usual business that comes before them annually. Free lunch will be served the by the ladies following the meetings. All members are urged to attend.

Rev. and Mrs. Hanson attended the Installation Services of Rev R. M. Fjelstad as President of the Northern Minnesota District at Trinity Lutheran Church at Thief River Falls on Sunday. Dr. J. A. Aasgaard, President of the Norwegian Lutheran Church of America officiated.

Nels Ness and family who have for the past many years farmed the old Oscar Hanson farm southwest of Holt, have now moved unto the Dr. Bratrud farm south of town. The Oscar Hanson farm, which belonged to the Rural Credit of Minnesota was purchased last spring by Oscar Hagglund of International Falls and he expects to start to improve the place.

Clayton Gunheim, who is an instructor in the Mapleton high school, spent Thanksgiving at his home here.

STAGE SCREEN RADIO

By VIRGINIA VALE

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

PERHAPS it's Shirley Temple's glowing health that inspired the British Ministry of Foods to ask Walt Disney for help. Studio experts say that in all the years that she was making pictures for 20th Century-Fox she never suffered from the numerous ailments children usually have, and now that she's approaching 13 making sub-deb pictures for Metro she's still the wonder of the studios because she's so well. That means a lot in Hollywood, where a star's illness can be so expensive for a studio.

Well, Shirley's diet has always included plenty of vitamins and minerals. And—Walt Disney has created three new characters—Doctor Carrot, Clara Carrot and Carroty George, to be used in a drive to get the people of England to eat more carrots!

SHIRLEY TEMPLE

*

Young women workers in the nation's Capitol are about to be glorified on the screen; evidently the same idea hit several studios at once. Paramount's version of the life and times of the young ladies will be called "Washington Escapade." Metro bought a story called "White House Girl," by Ruth Finney, wife of a newspaper man.

*

Every so often somebody has to screen Rex Beach's "The Spoilers." It was done in 1925 with William Farnum and Tom Sanchey staging the fist fight that made it famous. Paramount did it in 1930 with Gary Cooper. Now Universal will make it once again—this time with Randolph Scott and John Wayne in the he-man roles, and Marlene Dietrich as the heroine.

*

Another re-make scheduled for the near future is "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," which was last made by Paramount, in 1934, with W. C. Fields, Pauline Lord and Virginia Weidler. This time little Carolyn Lee will be the child lead.

*

That won't be just gibberish that you hear the actors speaking in RKO's "Valley of the Sun"; it's really Apache. Producer Graham Baker hired Chief Chris Willowbird to make phonograph records in which each speech was spoken first in English, then in Apache. Then James Craig, Antonio Moreno, Tom Tyler and other members of the cast settled down to study the records.

*

Elizabeth Bergner, one of the most famous European actresses to work in Hollywood, has just completed the first of her films to be made. It's "Paris Calling," a story of the betrayal and fall of France. Miss Bergner's European pictures include "Catherine the Great," "Escape Me Never," and "Dreaming Lips." She became famous as one of Europe's leading stage figures before she made pictures.

*

The movies are an old story to Frances Robinson; at the age of four she played Lillian Gish as a child in "Orphans of the Storm." More recently, she appeared in "Smiling Through." Now she's left pictures for the radio; she's the giddy debutante in the air's version of the delightful "My Man Godfrey."

*

A 19-year-old girl is in Alexandria, Va., getting background material for a murder trial. She's the daughter of Jane Crusinberry, who writes radio's "The Story of Mary Marlin," now in its eighth year. Mrs. Crusinberry is a stickler for accuracy, and the dramatized trial takes place in Alexandria, so young Jane was sent off with a candid camera and a notebook to help her mother out.

*

ODDS AND ENDS—Bob Hope has been away from home so much, making personal appearances, that he swears that his children haven't the slightest idea who he is . . . Jean Arthur, Cary Grant and Ronald Colman will head the cast of Columbia's "Mr. Twilight" . . . Phillipe de Lacey, famous not so many years ago as a child star of the movies, is now producing commercial pictures for the March of Time company . . . Alice Faye will portray Helen Morgan in the picture based on the singer's life . . . Though they don't have night clubs in Iceland, Sonja Henie may be shown running one in her next Fox picture, which will probably play down her skating.

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS By Edward C. Wayne

Strike Situation and Japanese Crisis Prove Washington's Toughest Problems; Winter Closes In on Eastern Front As Russia Reports Taking Offensive

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

STRIKES:
At Showdown

Congressional passage of the Neutrality act changes was a victory for the administration in that President Roosevelt stood his ground on his labor position, declining to meet a growing demand for legislation outlawing strikes, and laws setting a ceiling on wages.

Yet the narrow margin in the house (20 votes) also was considered a severe rebuke to the President for his attitude; and there were signs in the press and in congress that legislators and editors were getting ready to kick over the traces.

Crucial situations had faced the President both over the strikes in captive coal mines owned by steel companies, largely occupied in defense work, and in the threatened railroad strike.

There had been little evidence that the White House was getting anywhere in either struggle, though the President had made manful efforts to dissuade John L. Lewis and his U.M.W. from going overboard.

It was this situation more than any other which had caused the defection of many administration supporters during the Neutrality act voting.

JOHN L. LEWIS
The President made manful efforts.

The "closed shop" issue in the mine strike, never very popular in circles not closely allied with labor unions, caused the outburst of anti-strike feeling to be particularly severe.

RUSSIANS:
On Warpath

Long on the defensive, and having lost many thousands of square miles of territory, Russia had assumed the offensive all along the vast front. Moscow was reporting considerable success against the Nazis, and reported that the Germans had been suffering from frostbite, that they were exhausted and discouraged, but admitted that back of the front there were evidences that another offensive was being formed.

Those who believed Hitler would order any withdrawal because of the weather were having to revise their opinions. The Russian drive against the Germans was meeting with the same rugged resistance the Reds themselves had offered against the Nazis.

Successes were reported in the far north, where Kuibyshev dispatches declared 20 German transports had been sunk in what was to have been a major invasion attempt in the Murmansk sector.

Also 2,500 Italians had been reported "eliminated" in the Crimean sector, and victories also were claimed by Russia in the Donets basin area.

The Finns were being hurled back in front of Leningrad, and the general Russian tone was one of confidence, yet watchfulness, the latter being stressed because Red headquarters figured the Germans still had at least one more huge attack up their sleeves.

VICHY:
To Join Hitler

Hardly unexpected at this time, and with the hostage-shooting matter being what it was, had come the report that Vichy was planning to "go the whole hog" and throw in with Hitler's "new order."

It had been known for a long time where the sympathies of Darlan and Laval had been, but Petain was supposed to have been more or less on the fence.

History one day might recount, observers felt, that there was some strange and mysterious connection between the fatal plane crash which killed General Huntziger and the decision to join the Axis.

Huntziger, minister of war, had just been to Africa, presumably conferring with Mystery Man Weygand and was on his way back home to a momentous meeting of the government when his plane fell and he was killed.

Many wondered what bearing this would have on the situation in Nazi-Vichy relations.

KURUSU:
Last Try?

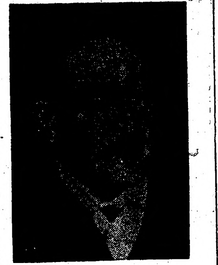
Most observers of the situation in the Pacific believed that with the arrival of Saburo Kurusu in Washington the last stage of the difficult effort of Japan and the United States to avoid war had been reached.

During his plane trip to this country there had been little of encouraging press comment, and the state department had again and again repeated its gloomy outlook.

Officials of the cabinet, particularly Secretary Knox of the Navy, had expressed this same view of depression over any chance of a peaceful settlement.



SABURO KURUSU
"A gloomy outlook."

Still Kurusu had arrived, had been greeted with smiles by American diplomats, and the conversations were on.

Basic difficulty of solving an equation where Japan was at war with China and both Britain and America had declared this war an act of aggression and had been giving and promising aid to China was openly apparent.

Japan was urging the United States:

"Leave us alone in China!"

The United States was demanding of Japan:

"You let China alone!"

These points were poles apart.

ARK ROYAL:
Finally Sunk

Most famous of the British aircraft carriers, Ark Royal, sunk several times according to Berlin dispatches, finally has been sent to the bottom, and it was London, not Berlin, which announced it.

It sank 25 miles off Gibraltar, while in tow of other warships after a U-boat had torn a terrific hole in her side. Pumps were unavailing to repair the damage, and practically all of the 1,600 aboard her had been removed save just enough men to handle the towing lines.

Finally, when she was nearing shallow water at last, she suddenly turned over on her side like a "tired child" and went to the bottom. Only one man of her crew was reported lost.

It was regarded as probable that many of her planes had been able to fly ashore and make port. Thus went to the bottom of the Mediterranean the third aircraft carrier Britain had lost, the largest and newest, launched in 1938, of 22,000 tons.

TURKEY:
An Offer

Axis sources were reported to have made Turkey an offer of Thrace as a last inducement to get the Turks to join the triple alliance.

The sudden interest in Turkey on the part of Germany, as borne out in reports from both Berlin and Bern was rather a puzzle to some, while others saw in it the possibility that Germany might, now that she was somewhat bogged down in Russia, be seeking a Turkish route to Russian oil wells.

Three possibilities were seen—that Turkey had already decided to throw in with the Axis—that increased pressure would be brought to bear on Turkey (in line with Bern's view of the situation) and third, that Germany might be satisfied to have Turkey neutral and aloof but fearing that American and British pressure from the south might turn her from her neutral course to a pro-British stand.

LIFE:

A picture of what life was like in Serbia following the collapse of resistance against the southward plunge of the Nazi war machine was painted by the refugee Jugoslav government.

Reports reaching it were that about 8,100 hostages, including intellectuals, priests and students, had been executed in three villages.

The executions had been maintained, said Premier General Simovic, had been carried out at the rate of 100 to 1, in retaliation.

LaGuardia, Penniless, Came to the Right Place

A few years back, Fiorello LaGuardia, New York's peppery mayor, was addressing a group of Salvation Army workers before a large audience. The mayor gave a long and fiery speech in praise of the organization. At the finish, the plate was passed. When it came to LaGuardia, he reached into his pocket for money. A blank look came into his face when he could not find any. He fumbled desperately in all pockets.

Sensing his predicament, the commissioner of the Army said in a loud voice: "That's all right, the Salvation Army is the right place to come to when a man hasn't a nickel!"

Lincoln's Wit

Lincoln didn't like the tone of a business letter inquiring about a man he knew. His reply was short, pointed:

"Yours of the 10th received. First of all, he has a wife and baby; together they ought to be worth $500,000 to any man. Secondly, he has an office in which there is a table worth $1.50 and three chairs worth, say $1. Last of all, there is in one corner a large rat-hole, which will bear looking into."

Costly Guard

The war department has spent large sums of money to maintain guards at the graves of Presidents and ex-Presidents until their mausoleums were completed and civilian watchmen provided by a memorial association, says Collier's. The military guard, consisting of one officer and twenty-five enlisted men, that watched over the temporary tomb of the late President Harding for almost five years, cost the government nearly $135,000.

EXTRACTS OF MINUTES OF MEETING OF SCHOOL BOARD OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 35, MARSHALL COUNTY, MINNESOTA, HELD OCTOBER 6, 1941.

Pursuant to due notice of call thereof a regular meeting of the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, was duly held at School House in said District at Holt, Minnesota, on the 6th day of October, 1941 at 8:00 o'clock P. M.

The following members were present: Sam Lorentson, Gilbert Sanoden, Geo. Fricker, Hilmar Moberg, O. T. Ness and O. H. Nohre; and the following were absent: None.

The Board proceeded to consider the matter of refunding outstanding bonds of said District issued under date of December 1, 1933 which were callable at the option of the District at par and accrued interest on December 1, 1941.

Thereupon, O. T. Ness, a member of said Board introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLUTION

Whereas, this District did under date of December 1, 1933 duly and legally issue its bonds in the amount of $27,000 for the purpose of refunding a like principal amount of bonded indebtedness then existing, which bonds were to mature serially and were callable at the option of the District on any interest payment date at par and acrued interest, and

WHEREAS, There are now outstanding $24,500 of said bonds and the District has cash on hand to pay $500 maturing December 1, 1941 and to call in and pay an additional $2,000 of said bonds, and it appears that a saving in interest can be effected by calling the remaining $22,000 of such bonds and issuing refunding bonds to provide the funds therefore,

NOW, THEREFORE, Be it RESOLVED by the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, as follows:

(1) That this Board hereby determines to exercise its right to prepay bonds Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 of its Refunding Bonds dated December 1, 1933, and that the Clerk be and he hereby is authorized and directed to give due notice to the first National Bank and Trust Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota of its intention to so prepay said bonds on December 1, 1941.

(2) That in the judgment of this Board it is advisable, expedient and necessary to issue and there are hereby authorized and directed to be issued the negotiable coupon bonds of said District in the aggregate principal amount of $22,000 for the purpose of refunding a like amount of the Refunding Bonds of said District issued December 1, 1933, which bonds are callable at the option of the District at par and accrued interest on October 1, 1941, said bonds to be known as "Refunding Bonds", being dated December 1, 1941, being in the denomination of $1,000 each, to mature in the order of their numbers, lowest numbers first, $1,000 on December 1 in each of the years from 1942 to 1959, both inclusive, $2,000 on December 1, 1960, and $2,000 on December 1, 1961, to bear interest at a rate not exceeding 3%, payable semiannually on the First days of June and December in each year, and to be payable as to both principal and semi-annual interest at the First National Bank & Trust Company in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and the School District agrees to pay the reasonable and usual charges of such paying agent for receipt and disbursement of the principal and interest moneys.

(3) That this Board will meet on the 27th day of October, 1941, at 8:00 o'clock P. M. at the School house in said District in the Village of Holt, Minnesota, for the purpose of receiving and considering bids for said $22,000 Refunding Bonds, each bid being accompanied by a certified check in the amount of 5% of the bonds bid for, and the Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to give due notice thereof by publishing a notice thereof one in each week for two successive weeks in The Weekly News, a legal newspaper published in the Village of Holt, Minnesota.

(4) The bonds and the coupons to be thereto attached shall be in substantially the following form:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF MARSHALL
Consolidated School District No. 35
REFUNDING BOND

No. ............ $1000

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS that Consolidated School District No. 35 of Marshall County, a public school Corporation at Holt, Minnesota, acknowledges itself to be indebted and for value received promises to pay to beaeter on the First day of December, 19......, without option of prior payment, the sum of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and to pay interest thereon from the date hereof until paid at the rate of.......................................... per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the First day of June and the First day of December in each year, interest to maturity being payable in accordance with and upon presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached as they severally become due; both principal and interest are payable at the First National Band & Trust Company, in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota, in any coin or currency of the United States of America, which on the date of payment is legal tender for public and private debts, and for the prompt and full payment of such principal and interest as the same become due, the full faith, credit, and taxing powers of the District have been and are hereby irrevocably pledged.

This bond is one of an issue of bonds in the aggregate principal amount of $22,000, all of like date and tenor except as to maturity, all issued by said District for the purpose of refunding a like principal amount of outstanding valid bonded indebtedness and is issued pursuant to resolutions of the School Board and pursuant to and in full conformity with the Constitution and Laws of the State of Minnesota thereunto enabling.

It is hereby certified and recited that all acts, conditions, and things required by the Constitution and Laws of the State of Minnesota to be done, to happen, and to be performed precedent to and in the issuance of this bond, have been done, have happened, and have been performed in regular and due form, time and manner as required by law; that prior to the issuance hereof a direct, annual, irrepealable, ad valorem tax has been duly levied upon all of the taxable property in said District in the years and amounts as required by law, and additional taxes may be levied on all the said property within the limitations prescribed by law; and that the issuance of this bond did not cause the outstanding indebtedness of the District to exceed any constitutional or statutory limitation, nor did the indebtedness refunded hereby exceed any such limitation on the date the same was incurred.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, Consolidated School District No. 35 of Marshall County, Minnesota, by its School Board, has caused this bond to be executed in its behalf by the signature of the Chairman of the School Board, countersigned by the Treasurer and attested by the Clerk, the District having no corporate seal, and has caused the attached interest coupons to be executed and authenticated by the facsimile signatures of said Chairman and Clerk, all as of October 6th, 1941.

(5) Said bonds shall be prepared under the direction of the Clerk and when so prepared shall be executed on behalf of the District by the signature of the Chairman of the School Board, countersigned by the Treasurer and attested by the Clerk, the District having no corporate seal, and the interest coupons shall be executed and authenticated by the printed, engraved or lithographed facsimile signatures of said Chairman and Clerk. The Clerk and Treasurer of the District are hereby authorized and directed to give notice of call for the redemption on December 1, 1941, of each and all the outstanding $22,000 bonds of the District in the manner prescribed in said bonds, and the proceedings under which they were issued. The Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to deliver said Refunding Bonds to the purchaser thereof upon receipt of the agreed purchase price on December 1, 1941, and to use the proceeds thereof to pay and redeem a like principal amount of the presently outstanding bonds called for payment on that date; provided, however, that the Treasurer is hereby authorized to take up, pay, and retire any of said presently outstanding bonds upon their surrender prior to December 1, 1941, and to pay therefor the par value and accrued interest on said old bonds to the date of such payment, and the Treasurer is hereby authorized to issue and deliver to the purchaser of the Refunding Bonds, a like amount of such Refunding Bonds simultaneously with such payment of the old bonds.

(6) The officers of the District are hereby authorized and directed to prepare and furnish to the purchaser of said bonds, and the attorneys approving the same, certified copies of all proceedings and records of the District relating to said bonds and to the bonds to be Refunded and to the financial affairs of the District, and such other certificates as may be required to show the facts within their knowledge or as shown by the books and records under their custody and control, and such certified copies and certificates shall be deemed representations of the District as to the facts stated therein.

(7) There is hereby created a sinking fund for said Refunding Bonds, which fund shall be held by the Treasurer of the District and shall be used for no other purpose than to pay principal and interest on said bonds; provided, however, that if any payment of principal or interest shall become due when there is not sufficient money in said fund to pay the same, the Treasurer may pay such principal or interest from the General Fund of the District, and such fund shall be reimbursed for such advances out of the proceeds of taxes herein levied. Into said fund shall be paid all of the proceeds of the taxes hereinafter levied.

(8) There is hereby levied upon all of the taxable property in the School District a direct, annual irrepealable, ad valorem tax which shall be spread upon the tax rolls and collected with and as part of other general taxes of the District, which tax is in the years and amounts as follows:

| Year | For Principal | For Interest | For Delinquency | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|---|

Species of Salmon

There are only five species of salmon in North America, although many are the names of the salmon fish. The five species are chinook, silver, sockeye, dog and humpback. Under the chinook specie are the king, chinook, tyee, spring and blackmouth. Jack salmon is a young male salmon of any species which matures a year earlier than normal. It is only found as a chinook, a silver salmon or a sockeye. A Blueback is generally accepted as another name for sockeye, although it has different local meanings. Coho is another name for silver salmon.

Expediting heavy freight and passenger trains across the Rocky Mountains is the job of this new three-unit Diesel-electric engine. Its 4,050 horsepower is assurance against "bottlenecks" in the Rockies.

That "Bottleneck" Scare

The Defense Effort, as everyone knows, has been slowed down in spots by "bottlenecks".

As was to be expected, the peace-time production of a peace-minded Nation couldn't be adjusted overnight to the mass production of the implements of modern warfare.

But today wheels are whirling—men are working—"bottlenecks" are being blasted! American Sweat, American Genius, and American Capital are on the job!

Railroads were not called upon to fashion a new product as were many other industries. Their job was to produce more transportation—to carry a bigger load than ever before.

Besides providing for the normal requirements of the country, they were called upon—almost overnight—to transport unprecedented quantities of vital Defense materials. Upon their ability "to deliver" depended the success of the whole Defense program.

Yes, there were those who said the railroads couldn't do it. There were some, of course, who hoped the railroads couldn't do it.

But the railroads did do it—they are still doing it—and nothing short of denying them what they need to maintain and operate their facilities will prevent them from continuing to do it.

In the pursuits of normal business, or in defense industries, not a single hour of production has been lost through any failure of the Great Northern Railway.

Said Congressman Clarence F. Lea, Chairman of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce, speaking recently in the House of Representatives:

"In all the world, no job is being better done today than by the American Railroads."

Reelected on Farm Board

John Brandt of Litchfield and Minneapolis, Minnesota, nationally known dairyman and cooperative leader, has been re-elected as a member of the Farm Credit Board of St. Paul, by a poll of approximately 300 farmers' cooperatives in Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesata and North Dakota. Announcement of his election has just come from the Farm Credit Administration headquarters in Washington, where the votes were tabulated. With 16 candidates in the running, Mr. Brandt received more than all the others put together.

As member of the Farm Credit Board. Mr. Brandt will be exofficio a director of the St. Paul Bank for Cooperatives, the Federal Land Bank of St. Paul, and the Production Credit Corporation of St. Paul. His new term of offiice will be for 3 years beginning January 1. This is his third term as a director, his selection in each case having been made by the cooperatives that are borrowers, and therefore are voting stockholders, of the bank for cooperatives.

Mr. Brandt is most widely known as president and manager of Land O'Lakes, Inc., the largest cooperative dairy marketing organization in the world. He has for years been the manager of this organization, which comprises cooperative creameries in several states, and handles the marketing of large quantities of milk, butter, cheese, turkeys and poultry for its constituent members. In addition to marketing for its members, the Land O'Lakes association also purchases and grades poultry, especially turkeys for the Thanksgiving and Christmas trade, which are distributed to many parts of the United States.

Mr. Brandt is a farmer and operates a farm near Litchfield, where he finishes beef cattle and hogs and carries on a dairy and general farming business. Mr. Brandt is a member of the local national farm loan association. He has always been active in local cooperative circles and is president of the Litchfield Cooperative creamery and secretary of the local livestock shipping association. He is also president of the National Cooperative Milk Producers Federation.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our beloved wife, mother and grandmother, who passed away Dec. 5, 1940:

In our hearts, your memory lingers,
Sweetly, tender, fond and true.
There is not a day, dear mother,
That we do not think of you.
You have gone across deaths river
To the shores of evergreen.
And our hearts for you are longing,
But the river flows between.
And our aching hearts are calling
Through the shadows dark and gray.
To the dear one who has left us
Just one year ago today.
Sleep on dear mother and take your rest;
God called you home, he thought it best.
In silence you suffered,
In patience you bore,
'Till God called you home to suffer no more.

Sell Your Scrap Iron Now

In answer to last week's appeal to farmers to market scrap iron immediately as an aid to the nation's defense program, many Marshall county farmers have called or written the conservation office Warren offering their iron, Chas. Kranz, chairman of the Marshall County U. S. D. A. Defense Board stated.

"However," Mr. Kranz emphasized, "farmers and others who have scrap iron should sell direct to the various dealers operating throughout the country and not to the defense board as they have no way of handling the iron."

Dealers throughout the county are offering good prices for scrap metal of all kinds, and metals, especially iron and steel are needed in the manufacture of new steel for defense purposes. The dealers have the proper connections so that the iron will be quickly dispatched to the proper channels so that the goverment will receive the metals at the earliest possible time, Mr. Kranz pointed out. Sell your iron now.

Farmer-Labor Conference

The Marshall County Farmer-Labor Association will hold a conference meeting and annual election at Middle River on Dec. 10. The conference meeting will stort at 1 p. m. and the annual election of officers will be held at 3 p. m.

The conference meeting will be open to the public. Considering the gains made by the Liberals at the last election it seems reasonable to believe that the membership of the Farmer-Labor Association should be increased considerably this coming year.

Arnold Dahlin, Secy.

Given Reception

Friends and relatives of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Swenson gave them a wedding reception at the Gullick Swenson home on Sunday. The newly wedded couple were receipients of many lovely gifts.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been of the finest December weather that has ever been here according to old timers. It broke out with a real warm day on Monday and has stayed that way since. Most of the nights have been holding out at 42 above zero and on Tuesday and Wednesday afternoons we had 56 and 58 above. This makes it fine for the stock and also cuts the fuel bill for the winter.

John Tangreen of Baudette, owner of the Tangreen Lumber Company here was a business caller here on Wednesday. Mr. Tangreen was looking for several men to go to work in his lumber camps. He has about a hundred men out cutting now.

Mrs. V. E. Oakey left by the Empire Builder of the Great Northern from Grand Forks on Wednesday for Oakland, Calif., to spend a few weeks visiting with her husband.

Rev. and Mrs. T. C. L. Hanson and Harold drove to Greenbush on Sunday evening where they were dinner guests at the home of Rev. and Mrs. E. E. Tollefson. Later in the evening, Rev. Hanson addressed a Parish Men's Brotherhood Rally held in Bethel Lutheran Church.

Hovrud's Move Back Here

Mr. and Mrs. I. A. Hovrud of Mount Angel, Oregon, arrived here with their household goods loaded on a trailer last week and will take over their farm southeast of Holt. They have spent several years out west where Mr. Hovrud has worked in a tow mill. Their many friends and relatives here bid them welcome back to Minnesota.

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Johnson and family, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Johnson and family, Mr. and Mrs. George Dovre and son, Mrs C. Wilson and sons, Mrs. C. Sagstuen and family, Mrs. Ole Christenson and Oscar Johnson gathered at the Carl Johnson home Friday evening to help Mr. Johnson celebrate his birthday.

The Local Editor Sits Down

An evangelist in a small village church asked all present to stand who made a practice of paying their debts. All but one man stood up and the evangelist asked him if he dident pay his debts and he replied that he couldnent. When the evangelist asked him to explain he replied as follows:

I am the Editor of the local paper and nearly all of these people who have just stood up here are owing me for their subscription.

Christ Bjerk Passed Away

Funeral services were conducted at Nazareth Lutheran Church on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 27, for the late Christ Bjerk of Bemidji. Mr. Bjerk was a former resident of this community about 25 or 30 years ago. He passed away on Sunday, Nov. 23. at the Fosston hospital followin a brief illness. He was 80 years old.

Many farmers report that they could have plowed all this week if it had not been for the fact that the ground is too wet and sticky when it thaws out.

And They Said It Couldn't Be Done

It is a thrill of a lifetime, motorists say, to drive one's own car up the smooth, broad highway leading to the summit of Pikes Peak, nearly three miles in the air.

Some people shook their heads afew years ago and said such a road could never be built. Pessemists are always shaking their heads, about every new project man proposes. And then the man with the idea and the perseverance goes out and does the "impossible."

Before Miners Accepted President's Terms

Flanked by district leaders William Hynes (left) and Patrick J. Fagan (right), United Mine workers' chief John L. Lewis is shown after leaving the deadlocked "peace conference" with steel officials. Their failure to agree on closed shop issue was the signal for a general strike in "captive coal mines." Later, the miners agreed to submit the dispute to mediation and the strike ended.

End of a Canadian Corvette

The Canadian censor has released these photos showing the sinking of the first Canadian corvette to be lost by enemy action. The ship (shown above) was H.M.S. Levis, and was torpedoed somewhere in the Atlantic with a loss of 18 men. Part of her bow was blown away. Shown are two views of the ship in her final plunge, and crew members in lifeboat.

'Rail Strike Still On'

When the President called a conference of rail executives in an attempt to stave off the general railroad strike set for December 7, heads of unions departed saying, "the strike is still on." Photo shows the group leaving White House. L. to R., J. J. Pelly (American Association of Railroads); A. ## Barnum Had Plugged Holes And Was in the Money

When P. T. Barnum, as a young man, left Danbury, Conn., to make his way in the world, he left numerous unpaid bills behind him. To one creditor the imaginative showman said with great intensity: "I'll pay you what I owe you as soon as I get rich."

The other laughed and eyed the youth disdainfully.

"That will be when a sieve holds water," he jeered.

But in a few years the master showman was well on the road to success, and with great satisfaction wrote the man the following note:

"Dear Sir: I have fixed that sieve."

THESE conversation chairs so much at home in a Victorian setting would be just as smart in a modern room. They are comfortable too, and any man who can nail together a box of one-inch pine boards can make a frame for one. The lady with needle and thread then takes over. If ready made spring cushions are used it is best to buy them first and then plan the box base to fit. The dimensions in the diagram tilt the back and seat at comfortable angles. Domes of silence at the four corners of the base make the chair easy to move.

MOROLINE 5¢ WHITE PETROLEUM JELLY

Christmas givers who want to be sure their gift is well received have been turning more and more to cigarettes and smoking tobacco as gifts most appreciated by any smoker. Their welcome is always far greater than the modest cost involved. Naturally, Camels, as America's favorite cigarette, and Prince Albert, the world's largest-selling pipe tobacco, head the smoker's gift list. Camels have two gift packages—the carton of ten packages of "20's" specially wrapped, and a gay package containing four "flat fifties." Prince Albert is featured in the pound tin and the pound glass humidor, both handsomely Christmas packed.—Adv.

Drive of British Troops Into Libya Forces Axis to Fight on Two Fronts; Peace Comes Again to U. S. Coal Fields As Miners Accept Plan for Mediation

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

BRITISH:

Open Second Front

The long-awaited, bitterly demanded "second front" in North Africa has finally been opened by the British with a surprise attack of surprising power and terrific impact upon the combined German-Italian forces in Libya.

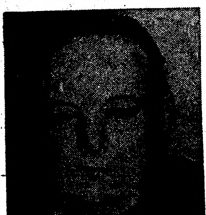
The severity of the military blow drew for a time all interest from the magnificent stand the Russians were making, and presented Hitler's generals with the difficult problem of either conceding the Royal Air force complete mastery of the African skies or the withdrawal of many hundreds of planes from Germany or from the Russian front.

Rapidly the British drive went 50, 60, 80 miles into Libya, and a glance at the maps had been sufficient to show that the typical Nazi blitz tactic was being employed.

Instead of a frontal attack against the Axis forces the British moved to the south and shoved tank spearheads in an enveloping action which reached Tobruk's garrison, that had rushed out into a sortie and were practically able to join hands with their advancing comrades in arms from the south.

This trapped what the British reckoned as half the German tank forces, (reckoned at two divisions) in a triangular space bounded by Tobruk, Bardia and the Mediterranean coast.

On this triangle the British were pouring all their fire, by land, sea and air, and battles were developing which might turn out to be the forced surrender of all the Axis forces in the trap, or a debacle similar to those which Germany had forced on weaker opponents.



WINSTON CHURCHILL

That it could be another Dunquerque was impossible, for the Axis forces had no possibility of escape by sea. It was stand and fight against forces at least equal to their own.

Of especial interest to Americans were the reports which told of feats performed by American-made equipment, particularly airplanes and tanks. One-fourth of the British tanks were said to have been built either in the U. S. or in Canada.

Objectives of the British attack in North Africa were twofold—the destruction of every Axis weapon of war in the territory; the knocking of Italy out of the war.

The first of these, Churchill said, would be half accomplished when the battle of the Tobruk triangle had resulted in a British victory. The second half would follow immediately, he added, indicating that there would be no slowing down of the drive.

As to the second objective, it was not so obvious what the British plans were. Some felt certain that the British, once in undisputed possession of all North Africa save French territory, would launch an expeditionary invasion against Sicily, and then use it as a base for further invasion.

Others felt sure that Britain's only idea was to hold its gains, and with the Mediterranean free of menace, to launch air attacks on all of Italy from the nearest points in Libya and Tripoli, and so to discourage Italians with the war that they would rise against it.

The British felt sure that this would cause the Germans to attack Italy, just as the Germans turned against Russia, and that thus another problem of occupying a hostile country would arise to plague the Nazis.

ROSTOV:

Berlin Claim

The important and strategic city of Rostov on the Don river was claimed as a German capture in dispatches from Berlin, and on the same day the Russians admitted that the Nazi advance had been resumed.

The sixth month of the Russian war found the Germans renewing an attack against Moscow at Mozhaisk, according to the Reds, who admitted that their troops had been forced to give ground.

TOKYO:

Tinder Box

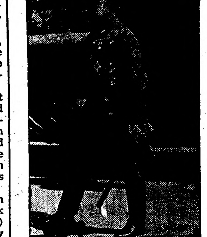
Oddest of all the potential volcanoes in the world had been the Far East situation, with Tokyo hard pressed by the Nazis to plunge actively into the war on the theory that it would create a new front for the British and American navies to cope with.

But Kurusu had found Secretary Hull not at all frightened at the prospect, and with the exploratory talks quite in their midst, the head of the American state department had called a conference of the ABCD nations' (American, British, Chinese and Dutch) representatives from which the Chinese ambassador had emerged with a broad smile.



EMPEROR HIROHITO
Japan prepared for the worst.

Coincidentally the British had renewed their blunt warnings to Japan not to plunge another area of the world into a "blood-bath," but to reflect that the personnel of the British navy had expanded 300 per cent, and that the navy now was in position to divert considerable of its forces to the Pacific.

At the same time it was evident that Tokyo itself was preparing its people for the worst. That Japanese leaders were badly frightened over the spot they were in was evident, yet few of them could see a way out without war.

STRIKE:

Sixth Appeal

The sudden end of the coal strike, and the answer of John L. Lewis that he was willing to accede to President Roosevelt's sixth appeal for labor peace in the captive coal mines brought a question to the fore in the strike crisis—who was the winner in this bitter battle, the President or Lewis?

Some reporters described the sudden ending of the strike as a distinct victory for the President, in that Lewis had agreed to "binding arbitration" of the strike, something he had held out against since the fall-down of mediation board efforts to end it.

But when the personnel of the deciding committee became known, the matter of the President's victory became dubious, because the committee included Dr. John R. Steelman, head of the conciliation service of the department of labor, representing the public; Mr. Lewis himself, representing the strikers; and Benjamin F. Fairless, president of U. S. Steel, representing the mine owners.

There was little question about the stand that Lewis would take in the fight for a closed shop contract for his members. That was a foregone conclusion. As to the other two, Dr. Steelman was generally given credit by labor for having won them the closed shop in commercial mines.

Looking at Mr. Fairless, it was generally believed by the union workers, and so stated by Lewis more than once that Mr. Fairless, during other conferences, had apparently been the only steel man willing to give in. In fact Lewis put the blame for the failure of previous negotiations squarely upon Eugene G. Grace of Bethlehem Steel.

Lewis had declared that he faced the decision of the committee with the utmost confidence in the outcome. The ending of the strike was dramatic. The union policy committee of 200 waited 2½ hours for its meeting. They didn't know the reason but Lewis did. He was waiting for a letter from the President of the United States.

It was delivered. Lewis took it into his private office. He read it, came out again with his thumbs in the armholes of his vest and descended into the cellar meeting hall. He posed for pictures, asked reporters to leave, and the meeting opened. Fifteen minutes later the "end strike" call was sounded.

Lewis had submitted to arbitration—an arbitration he was confident could only end in victory for his union. For the President? Perhaps, because his letter had ended the strike. For Lewis? At least Lewis thought so.

PENETRO FOR COLDS' COUGHS

PENETRO

Cigarettes and smoking tobacco have moved rapidly to the forefront as ideal Christmas gifts with Camels as America's favorite cigarette and Prince Albert Smoking Tobacco, the world's largest-selling smoking tobacco, well to the fore. The beauty of these gifts for smokers lies in the fact that their cost is modest and their welcome always assured. Local dealers have been featuring Camels in the carton of ten packs of "20's" and a special gift of four "flat fifties." Prince Albert is available in the humidor specially wrapped for Christmas giving.—Adv.

EXTRACTS OF MINUTES OF MEETING OF SCHOOL BOARD OF SCHOOL DISTRICT NO. 35, MARSHALL COUNTY, MINNESOTA, HELD OCTOBER 6, 1941.

Pursuant to due notice of call thereof a regular meeting of the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, was duly held at School House in said District at Holt, Minnesota, on the 6th day of October, 1941, at 8:00 o'clock P. M.

The following members were present: Sam Lorentson, Gilbert Sanoden, Geo. Fricker, Hilmar Moberg, O. T. Ness and O. H. Nohre; and the following were absent: None.

The Board proceeded to consider the matter of refunding outstanding bonds of said District issued under date of December 1, 1933 which were callable at the option of the District at par and accrued interest on December 1, 1941.

Thereupon, O. T. Ness, a member of said Board introduced the following resolution and moved its adoption:

RESOLUTION

Whereas, this District did under date of December 1, 1933 duly and legally issue its bonds in the amount of $27,000 for the purpose of refunding a like principal amount of bonded indebtedness then existing, which bonds were to mature serially and were callable at the option of the District on any interest payment date at par and acrued interest, and

WHEREAS, There are now outstanding $24,500 of said bonds and the District has cash on hand to pay $500 maturing December 1, 1941 and to call in and pay an additional $2,000 of said bonds, and it appears that a saving in interest can be effected by calling the remaining $22,000 of such bonds and issuing refunding bonds to provide the funds therefore,

NOW, THEREFORE, Be it RESOLVED by the School Board of Consolidated School District No. 35, Marshall County, Minnesota, as follows:

(1) That this Board hereby determines to exercise its right to prepay bonds Nos. 7, 8, 9 and 10 of its Refunding Bonds dated December 1, 1933, and that the Clerk be and he hereby is authorized and directed to give due notice to the first National Bank and Trust Company of Minneapolis, Minnesota of its intention to so prepay said bonds on December 1, 1941.

(2) That in the judgment of this Board it is advisable, expedient and necessary to issue and there are hereby authorised and directed to be issued the negotiable coupon bonds of said District in the aggregate principal amount of $22,000 for the purpose of refunding a like amount of the Refunding Bonds of said District issued December 1, 1933, which bonds are callable at the option of the District at par and accrued interest on October 1, 1941, said bonds to be known as "Refunding Bonds", being dated December 1, 1941, being in the denomination of $1,000 each, to mature in the order of their numbers, lowest numbers first, $1,000 on December 1 in each of the years from 1942 to 1959, both inclusive, $2,000 on December 1, 1960, and $2,000 on December 1, 1961, to bear interest at a rate not exceeding 3%, payable semi-annually on the First days of June and December in each year, and to be payable as to both principal and semi-annual interest at the First National Bank & Trust Company in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota, and the School District agrees to pay the reasonable and usual charges of such paying agent for receipt and disbursement of the principal and interest moneys.

(3) That this Board will meet on the 27th day of October, 1941, at 8:00 o'clock P. M. at the School house in said District in the Village of Holt, Minnesota, for the purpose of receiving and considering bids for said $22,000 Refunding Bonds, each bid being accompanied by a certified check in the amount of 5% of the bonds bid for, and the Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to give due notice thereof by publishing a notice thereof one in each week for two successive weeks in The Weekly News, a legal newspaper published in the Village of Holt, Minnesota.

(4) The bonds and the coupons to be thereto attached shall be in substantially the following form:

UNITED STATES OF AMERICA
STATE OF MINNESOTA
COUNTY OF MARSHALL
Consolidated School District No. 35
REFUNDING BOND
No. ........ $1000

KNOW ALL MEN BY THESE PRESENTS that Consolidated School District No. 35 of Marshall County, a public school Corporation at Holt, Minnesota, acknowledges itself to be indebted and for value received promises to pay to bearer on the First day of December, 19......, without option of prior payment, the sum of ONE THOUSAND DOLLARS, and to pay interest thereon from the date hereof until paid at the rate of ....... ........... per cent per annum, payable semi-annually on the First day of June and the First day of December in each year, interest to maturity, being payable in accordance with and upon presentation and surrender of the interest coupons hereto attached as they severally become due; both principal and interest are payable at the First National Band & Trust Company, in the City of Minneapolis, Minnesota, in any coin or currency of the United States of America, which on the date of payment is legal tender for public and private debts, and for the prompt and full payment of such principal and interest as the same become due, the full faith, credit, and taxing powers of the District have been and are hereby irrevocably pledged.

This bond is one of an issue of bonds in the aggregate principal amount of $22,000, all of like date and tenor except as to maturity, all issued by said School District for the purpose of refunding a like principal amount of outstanding valid bonded indebtedness and is issued pursuant to resolutions of the School Board and pursuant to and in full conformity with the Constitution and Laws of the State of Minnesota thereunto enabling.

It is hereby certified and recited that all acts, conditions, and things required by the Constitution and Laws of the State of Minnesota to be done, to happen, and to be performed precedent to and in the issuance of this bond, have been done, have happened, and have been performed in regular and due form, time and manner as required by law; that prior to the issuance hereof a direct, annual, irrepealable, ad valorem tax has been duly levied upon all of the taxable property in said District in the years and amounts as required by law, and additional taxes may be levied on all the said property within the limitations prescribed by law; and that the issuance of this bond did not cause the outstanding indebtedness of the District to exceed any constitutional or statutory limitation, nor did the indebtedness refunded hereby exceed any such limitation on the date the same was incurred.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, Consolidated School District No. 35 of Marshall County, Minnesota, by its School Board, has caused this bond to be executed in its behalf by the signature of the Chairman of the School Board, countersigned by the Treasurer and attested by the Clerk, the District having no corporate seal, and has caused the attached interest coupons to be executed and authenticated by the facsimile signatures of said Chairman and Clerk, all as of October 6th, 1941.

(5) Said bonds shall be prepared under the direction of the Clerk and when so prepared shall be executed on behalf of the District by the signature of the Chairman of the School Board, countersigned by the Treasurer and attested by the Clerk, the District having no corporate seal, and the interest coupons shall be executed and authenticated by the printed, engraved or lithographed facsimile signatures of said Chairman and Clerk. The Clerk and Treasurer of the District are hereby authorized and directed to give notice of call for the redemption on December 1, 1941, of each and all the outstanding $22,000 bonds of the District in the manner prescribed in said bonds, and the proceedings under which they were issued. The Treasurer is hereby authorized and directed to deliver said Refunding Bonds to the purchaser thereof upon receipt of the agreed purchase price on December 1, 1941, and to use the proceeds thereof to pay and redeem a like principal amount of the presently outstanding bonds called for payment on that date; provided, however, that the Treasurer is hereby authorized to take up, pay, and retire any of said presently outstanding bonds upon their surrender prior to December 1, 1941, and to pay therefor the par value and accrued interest on said old bonds to the date of such payment, and the Treasurer is hereby authorized to issue and deliver to the purchaser of the Refunding Bonds, a like amount of such Refunding Bonds simultaneously with such payment of the old bonds.

(6) The officers of the District are hereby authorized and directed to prepare and furnish to the purchaser of said bonds, and the attorneys approving the same, certified copies of all proceedings and records of the District relating to said bonds and to the bonds to be Refunded and to the financial affairs of the District, and such other certificates as may be required to show the facts within their knowledge or as shown by the books and records under their custody and control, and such certified copies and certificates shall be deemed representations of the District as to the facts stated therein.

(7) There is hereby created a sinking fund for said Refunding Bonds, which fund shall be held by the Treasurer of the District and shall be used for no other purpose than to pay principal and interest on said bonds; provided, however, that if any payment of principal or interest shall become due when there is not sufficient money in said fund to pay the same, the Treasurer may pay such principal or interest from the General Fund of the District, and such fund shall be reimbursed for such advances out of the proceeds of taxes herein levied. Into said fund shall be paid all of the proceeds of the taxes hereinafter levied.

(8) There is hereby levied upon all of the taxable property in the School District a direct, annual irrepealable, ad valorem tax which shall be spread upon the tax rolls and collected with and as part of other general taxes of the District, which tax is in the years and amounts as follows:

| Year | For Principal | For Interest | For Delinquency | TOTAL |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 1941 | $1,000 | $990 | $100 | $2,090 |

Said tax levy shall be irrepealable so long as said bonds are outstanding and unpaid provided sometime prior to October 15th in each year the Treasurer shall certify to the County Auditor of Marshall County the amount then available in the Sinking Fund for payment of interest or principal during the ensuing year and the levy for said year shall be reduced by the amount so certified.

(9) The Clerk of the District is hereby authorized and directed to file with the County Auditor of Marshall County a certified copy of this resolution, together with such other information as the County Auditor may require, and to obtain from the County Auditor a certificate that such tax has been levied and the bonds have been entered upon his bond register.

The motion for the adoption of the foregoing resolution was duly seconded by Member O. H. Nohre, and upon vote being taken thereon the following voted in favor thereof: O. T. Ness, O. H. Nohre, Hilmar Moberg, Gilbert Sanoden and Geo. Fricker, and the following voted against the same: None; whereupon said resolution was declared duly passed and adopted.

There being no further business a motion was made by Fricker and seconded by Ness that said meeting adjourn.

Annual Church Meeting Held

The Annual meetings of the Nazareth Lutheran Congregation and Ladies Aid held on last Thursday evening was a fine success with good attendance at both meetings.

The congregation's Treasury showed a fine balance with an increase over last year. There were 110 contributors to the congregation which is the largest in many years. The congregation's pastor was given a bonus for the year. The congregation expressed the feeling of a successful year with good attendance at church services, active organizations, willing givers and workers in the congregation. The following officers were elected: President, Henry Nohre (re-elected); Vice President, Alf Movik; Secretary Gilbert Sanoden, (re-elected); Treasurer, Hjalmer Peterson, (re-elected); Trustee for 3 years O. H. Nohre; Deacon, Alfred Anderson, (re-elected); Ushers, Reuben Benitt, Myron Johnson, Lowell Larson and Myron Gunheim.

A fine, new membership list was received by the congregation, comprising of 7 families or units for a total of 20 souls. They were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Voth and family, Mr. and Mrs. Ingvard M. Peterson and daughter, Carmen, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Hetland and son Richard, Ole Maakstad, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Karvonen and children, Louis Sagstuen and Mr. and Mrs. Ludvig Sagstuen and family. The Pastors Pension Plan was discussed and unanimously adopted.

The Ladies Aid meeting was brief and successful. The Circles and Ladies aid showed fine reports due to the willingness of its members to work and give. The following officers were elected; Mrs. O. J. Backlund was reelected president; Mrs. Hjalmer Johnson, Vice president; Mrs. Iver Larson, Secretary and Mrs. Henry Nohre, Treasurer. The Ladies Aid decided to finance the cost of remodelling the heating plant. This will consist mainly in constructing a large cold air vent in the back of the church and drawing the cold air under the floor. This will eliminate all drafts along the floor and circulate the hot air faster. There will be another register constructed on the furnace in the church parlors so it can be heated with the furnace. Besides this, a blower or a large fan will be installed in the furnace to force the air, making it easier and faster to heat besides a saving on fuel.

The other business was largely routine.

Free lunch was served by the ladies present, after which a social time was enjoyed by all in the spirit of friendship and good will.

The Weather

The nice weather we have had here for a long time sort of tapered off a little over the week end. On Sunday we had a light snow and on Monday a little more was added. Since then it has been cold.

Red Cross Roll Conducted

In a world crying out for mercy due to bombings of innocent people, refugees, floods, earthquakes, sickness and other calamaties, the more fortunate people have the opportunities to lend their hands to help through the medium of the Red Cross. This was the attitude of the people of the village of Holt when they responded so generously to the Red Cross Roll conducted last month. The following were enrolled with the contribution of one dollar:

Marjorie Otos, Melvin Sabo, Mrs. Lawrence Haglund, A. P. Thompson, Farmers Co'op Creamery, Mrs. V. E. Oakey, Iver Larson, Rev. T. C. L. Hanson, Mrs. O. J. Backlund, O. T. Ness, Geo. Fricker, Marshall County State Bank, Caroline Aspelin, G. W. Karvonen, Marguerite Lee, Mrs. R. M. Nyhus, Sam Lorentson, Frank Horien, Hjalmer Peterson L. M. Miller, A. B. Anderson, Orlin Ness, Walter Peterson and Murnet Johnson.

Along with the above, the following contributed to the Red Cross: Mrs. Inga O. Berget, Hilmer Erickson, Saima Niemela, C. O. Saastad, Gilbert Sanoden, Mrs. John Hagberg, Mrs. C. L. Sandberg, Marvin Sandberg, Hartley Peterson, Martin Hetland, Eddie Henning, A. Bennes O. B. Johnson, Margaret Sandberg and Oscar Fosholm.

The amount collected in the village was nearly $30.00. Misses Geraldine Larson, Dorothy Hanson, Marian Backlund and Irene Ness solicited the village. Rev. T. C. L. Hanson served as local chapter chairman.

Many Fateful Sundays

Sunday in the last quarter-century has been a historic day many times:

Sunday, June 28, 1914—Archduke Franz Ferdinand of Austria assassinated in the move lauching World war.

Sunday, Aug. 2, 1914—German troops invade France and Belgium, actually beginning World war.

Sunday, September 3, 1939—Britian and France declare war on Germany.

Sunday, Oct. 27, 1940—Italy invades Greece.

Sunday, June 22, 1941 — Germany begins was against Russia.

And, curiously, it was just four years ago on Sunday, December 22, when a lesser crisis than that precipitated last Sunday arose between the United States and Japan. On that day a Japanese warplane attacked the U. S. Gunboat Panay on the upper Yangtse river, killing three and wounding 15.

Mr. and Mrs. Hjalmer Johnson and Mr. and Mrs. H. O. Hanson made a trip to Baudette and the north country on Saturday. Mr. Johnson went out to locate some timber to cut this winter. It was the first time that Mrs. Johnson had been back to Baudette in 24 years. At that time she made her home on a homestead south of there and also lived in Spooner for two years where they had a lovely little home. Mrs. Johnson was surprised to see how much the country had changed in a quarter of a century.

U. S. Forced Into War

The United States was forced into war with Japan on Sunday when that nation made a sneak attack on the Phillippine Islands and Hawaii as well as several other Pacific outposts. The United States declared war on Japan on Monday. England and many other countries also declared war on Japan. A few U. S., British and Japanese battleships have been sunk in the first fights. The Japs have used suicide squads in their first attacks which has cost them heavy in men and equipment.

As we go to press, reports come that Germany and Italy have declared war on the United States.

88 Years of U. S., Japanese Relations

1853—Commodore Perry, USN, opens Japan to foreign intercourse.

1858—Townsend Harris, United States consul, concludes western world's first treaty of amity and commerce with Japan.

1894-5 Japan conquers China, seizes Formosa, begins an overseas empire.

1898—United States defeats Spain, acquires the Phillippines, annexes Hawaii, becomes Pacific ocean power.

1899—Japan subscribes to the American doctrine of the open door in China

1900—United States and Japan cooperate (with other nations) in ending Boxer rising in China.

1904-1905—Americans generally sympathise with Japan in her war with Russia; Japanese war loans floated in United States; President Roosevelt brings about the peace treaty of Portsmouth.

1905-1911—Japanese immigration becomes a friction point; exclusion agitation arises on the Pacific coast; Japan in "gentlemen's agreements" undertakes to keep her people out of the United States.

1914—Japan enters war on Allied side; seizes Tsingtao in China and German Pacific islands.

1915—United States condemns Japans 21 demands on China.

1917-19—United States becomes associate of Japan in the World war; both powers send expeditions to Siberia where friction arises.

1918-1922—United States and Japan engage in great Naval race.

1919—At Versailles peace conference Japan wins over United States on Shantung issue; loses on racial equality.

1922—Naval race ended by treaties in Washington, in which powers also pledge hands off China.

1924—United States Congress passes Asiatic exclusion act; Japan offended.

1930—Japan adhering to London naval treaty, agrees to extend naval truce, but this proves her last act of cooperation in keepinp the peace.

1931-32—Japan invades Manchuria; United States proclaims non-recognition of this conquest; this proves turning point in U.S.-Japan relation.

1933—Japan quits League of Nation; turns back on peace-keepin efforts.

1935—Japan denounces the Washington naval treaty. Naval race resumed with its termination at the end of 1936.

1936—Japan forms her first Axis tie, the anti-comintern pact signed at that time with Nazi Germany.

1937—Japan makes war on China; United States harmed; Panay sunk.

1939—European war begins, opens new fields for Japanese expansion; United States denounces commerce treaty with Japan.

1940—Hitler crushes France; Japan moves into French Indo-China, proclaims her "greater East Asia" program. Japan becomes ally of the Axis with the treaty of Berlin, aimed at the United States.

1941—United States extends lend-lease aid to China and Russia; Japan tightens grip on Indo-China; United States, with Britain and The Netherlands, freezes Japanese credits, halts war exports to Japan; Japan feels the pinch; cries out against economic strangulation and military encirclement, sends Saburo Kurusu to Washington, D. C. in a final effort to prevent a break; these negotiations cloud widespread preparations for war on United States; Sunday, Dec. 7, Japanese navy struck Phillippines and Hawaii.

Production Records Forecast

All time production records for eggs and milk products were forecast for 1942 by Charles W. Stickney, chairman of the Minnesota AAA and chief of the U. S. D. A. Defense Board. The forecast was based on summaries of the "farm to farm" food for defense survey made during the past six weeks by farmer-elected county and community committemen.

Although all of the county summaries have not been received in the state AAA office, Mr. Stickney said that returns from 80 counties indicated production of eggs, milk, pork, and vegetables will be the greatest in many years with some products reaching new production peaks.

"The sharp increases in production of foods needed in national defense will mean thousands of dollars in additional income to Minnesota and Northwest farmers," Mr. Stickney said.

Survey summaries indicate a tremendous increase in the production of eggs. Some counties show farmers anticipating increases as high as 41 percent over 1941. Egg production for the state will probably average 28 percent higher. This means a total production of 206,934,000 dozen eggs as compared to 161,667,000 dozens, the estimated production for 1941. Minnesota's 1942 goal is 181,667,000 dozens.

Milk production lagged behind the sharp inorease for eggs, but was substantially above the estimated production of 8,451, 000, 000 pounds for 1941. Summaries indicate an increased production of about 11 percent over 1941, or 9,397,000,000 pounds. It must be remembered that before this increase was asked, Minnesota milk production was at the highest peak in history.

Pork production will be sharply higher, summaries indicating farmers will market about 25 percent more hogs in 1942 as compared to 1941. The goal for the state was a 12 percent increase for 1942.

In line with the request by the United States Department of Agriculture for increased plantings of vegetables, Minnesota farmers reported to AAA community committeemen that plantings of vegetables both for home use and for commercial canneries would be substantially increased in 1942. This is especially true regarding tomatoes, string beans dried beans, and sweet corn. The increase in soybean plantings will be large.

Where Are The Deer?

We wish that Billy Noonan Baudette, Lake of the Woods Co. would get someone out to scare up all those deer they have been advertising in that part of the country that could be seen. If they aren't any thicker than what we saw after traveling thru that country all day Saturday and then took an evening drive down that famous Highway 72 to Kelliher in order to catch a gleaming eye in the headlights, we would say that there is very little danger of the herd starving to death. We did not even see a fresh track near the big bog south of Baudette to say nothing about not seeing one deer. Then we took the road home across the Red Lake reservation and the same thing there. Not one deer on all those miles of wilderness road. So if the deer are that scarce they will have plenty to eat regardless of what is said.

President Will Speak

Civilian defense units of the Northwest have been asked by President Roosevelt to join with other national, state and local agencies in observing the 150th anniversary of the ratification of the Bill of Rights, December 15. The President will address the Nation over national broadcasting systems sometime between 10 and 11 p. m. EST and the address will be re-broadcast by shortwave in all languages.

THE TRUTH SIMPLY TOLD

Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of satisfactory use. And favorable public opinion supports that of the able physicians who test the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions.

These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorder of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Orient Bristles With Military Activity As U. S. and Japan End Conferences; U. S. Planes Aid British Libyan Drive; Nazis Admit Russian Recapture of Rostov

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

Here is a view of the U. S. S. Ellyson, new destroyer for the U. S. navy, during commissioning ceremonies at the New York navy yard. Officers and crew are facing aft as the colors are raised. The Ellyson is a sister ship of the U. S. S. Kearny, which proved her mettle by standing up and making port under her own power after taking what a German torpedo had to offer.

JAPAN:
Demands

Following exploratory talks between special Japanese envoy Kurusu and Secretary Hull which had more or less been kept secret, the latter suddenly issued a five-point ultimatum to Japan which showed plainly that the United States feared no crisis with Nippon, and that her attitude toward Japan's plans in the Pacific was unchanged.

The United States boldly asserted she was insisting on Japan's withdrawal from the Axis; that Japan must get out of China; that she must withdraw from Indo-China; that she must be willing to keep the open door in the Pacific.

This was followed closely by a welter of rumors—that Japan was sending 30,000 men in 70 transports to Indo-China—that the U. S. was going to patrol the supply lines to China along the Burma road with airplanes.

On top of all this came Premier Hideki Tojo's blunt statement that in the light of developments Japan considered Britain and the United States "hostile nations" accusing the Western powers of attempting to exploit East Asia, and saying:

"We must purge this sort of practice with vengeance."

Then came word from Singapore that all army leaves had been cancelled and that the entire British force there had been placed "on the alert."

There was little doubt but that the sword of war was dangling by a thread in the Pacific, a fact which President Roosevelt had recognized in taking a brief vacation to Warm Springs, Ga. As he left he remarked that his date of return "depended on Japan."

Tojo continued his tirade against Britain and America by taking note of the rumor that this country was planning a Burma Road patrol. He said that Japan "could not ignore" such a move, and would consider it a "deliberately hostile action."

Real spot that all eyes were turned upon was the border of Thailand, against which many believed that Japan would launch an invasion attempt as an "answer" to Hull's latest message.

Such a move, Washington observers felt, would instantly touch off war in the Pacific.

RUSSIA:
Gateway Gain

As the Russians admittedly had their backs to the wall in Moscow, they had claimed an outstanding victory in the central southern sector where they asserted their armies had reoccupied Rostov-on-Don, an important gateway to the Caucasian oil fields previously lost to the Nazis.

For several days the Russians had been talking about a counter-attack somewhat to the west of Rostov, an attack which was driving southward with some success.

At that time Pravda and the army paper Red Star had hinted that this counter-attack was seriously affecting General Von Kleist's supply lines.

Suddenly the Russian armies fell with full force on the Von Kleist army corps, and Kuibyshev reported the entire corps was annihilated and that the Russians had the Nazi forces in the Rostov district rushing off westward in "disorderly retreat."

The Germans admitted the evacuation, and ascribed it to an effort to gain time for retaliation against the attacks of the civilian population on the German rear "in defiance of international law."

Stripped of its Nazi propaganda angles, this seemed at least a partial admission on the part of the German High Command that the Russian attacks on the German communication lines, which had featured Red dispatches for a week, had played a big part in the German disaster at Rostov.

LIBYA:
British Ring

After winning battle after battle by swift encirclements based on the use of fast tanks and screaming dive-bombers, the Nazi forces in North Africa had evidently received a dose of their own medicine, and while dealing out deadly punishment to the British, had been unable to break the iron ring which had trapped an estimated half of the German armies.

The German High Command had blithely announced early in the battle that a "counter-offensive" had retaken Sidi Omar and was moving across the Egyptian frontier, despite the fact, obvious from the maps that in this maneuver the German tanks were going the "wrong way up a one-way street" as one British commentator put it.

The chief Italian mechanized force, the Ariete division finally managed to join forces with the chief remnants of general Rommel's tank outfits, and were attempting to break out near Rezegh. But Rezegh was at the extreme west end of the British trap, not the extreme east end, as was Sidi Omar.

It was obvious that it was at Rezegh that the main battle was joined, the battle that would spell success or failure for the British effort.

Despite the fact that Germany was sending airplanes from Europe to back up her tank forces in Africa, the British claimed they were still able to hold supremacy in the air, being equipped with hundreds of American planes in addition to their own.

The British also claimed they were steadily widening their wall within which the Nazis were trapped, and that each day the battle continued found them better able to continue it.

ARMS:
For Merchantmen

As America rushed to arm its merchantmen in accordance with the permissions under the neutrality act as revised, the controversy raged hotly as to what good the weapons would do the vessels.

Naval authorities pointed out that they would do little good if the vessel encountered a surface raider.

But against submarines it was a powerful weapon if the ship were able to fire a lethal weapon at its attacker.

Naval men gave figures from the last war, showing that of 302 unarmed merchant ships attacked, only 67 escaped; but of 310 defensively armed merchant vessels attacked, 263 got away.

The secret was this, they said:

Submarines attacking a ship while submerged, must get close enough to get a good view of the target through the periscope. Through a choppy sea this is well-nigh impossible because the vantage point is so close to the surface.

But if a submarine may attack a ship from the surface, then its chance of missing its mark is much less.

Hence the presence of guns, fore and aft, on the armed merchantman practically forces the submarine to remain submerged for its own protection.

Guns and depth charges on merchantmen may spell safety for a large percentage, navy men believe.

VICHY:
Surrendered?

London had become perturbed over reports it had obtained from a "reliable foreign source" that Vichy already had yielded to German demands for air and naval control in French North Africa.

While the reports had been current that Petain was ducking a final showdown with Hitler while watching anxiously the British offensive in North Africa, it was reported that the Nazis had taken over four French commercial airlines.

'Natural' Man

DETROIT, MICH.—To Russell Allen, 26-year-old die-maker of Detroit, shoes are only the dictates of dignity. Nightly he can be seen walking down Detroit's streets—sans shoes. He says shoes aren't natural and has gone barefooted for years. He was sickly until he adopted a diet of foods in their natural state. His only meat is raw beef.

U. S. ARMY:
Changes Ideas

Partly as a result of maneuvers in the South, partly as a result of reports from American observers with the warring armies in Europe and Africa, the U. S. army's ideas of a fighting force are undergoing rapid changes.

Modern arms had been accepted, also modern motor transport, and our army had its planes, tanks, anti-tank guns, anti-aircraft guns, and all the other appurtenances of modern warfare.

But this has not been deemed the best arrangement, and army officers now are rearranging the basic arm, the infantry, so that each unit is practically a whole mechanized army in itself.

Each infantry outfit, the new army idea envisions, will have its own screen of tanks, will be completely motorized as regards transport from place to place; it will have its own battery of planes; even its own self-propelled 75-millimeter guns.

Thus what used to be a regiment of foot-soldiers, working in conjunction with separate outfits of plane, artillery and tanks, will now become a complete little army in itself, with all the necessary arms.

FINNS:
Being Replaced?

The report by the British admiralty that submarines of the Royal navy had sent to the bottom eight Axis troopships and supply vessels recently in Arctic waters gave rise to the belief that the Nazis were seeking to replace Finnish troops on the northern Russian front.

This indicated a probability that Finland might not be as wholeheartedly in the war as the German High Command would have the world believe.

One submarine, the British reported, sank five ships and seriously damaged a sixth, and the other sub sent three to the bottom out of a convoy of seven and damaged the others so that "their destruction was believed probable."

At least two of the vessels were carrying troops, London said.

GILLETTE:
His Letter

Senator Gillette of Iowa, a Democrat who was the first target of one of the New Deal's unsuccessful purge efforts in 1937, and who has long been a relentless and capable foe of the President's foreign policy, had written a letter to the President offering his services in any capacity during the present emergency.

The President replied, in part:

"If the occasion should warrant it, I would not hesitate to ask you to place your abilities at the disposal of your country in some other capacity than as United States senator."

The incident was regarded as another spectacular development in the progressive collapse of opposition to the administration's foreign policy in the light of the extreme tension in the Far East.

The Iowan informed the President that he had not retreated from his viewpoint. He said, however, that he was utterly willing under the present circumstances to work for causes which were in conflict with his personal opinions. Said he:

"This is for the purpose of enlisting myself and all that I have in service for the duration of the emergency."

To Protect Youth

"A Tuberculin Test for every high school student."

This is the objective of the Christmas Seal program to find and prevent tuberculosis. In the above picture is shown Dr. Kathleen Jordan of the staff of the Minnesota Public Health Association. Dr. Jordan has administered the test to thousands of high school pupils in Christmas Seal school surveys to search out early boys and girls threatened by the disease.

Tuberculosis kills one out of every four young women who die from any cause, and one out of every six young men. For this reason the campaign concentrates on youth.

Give The Hens More Room

"More plates don't make more food," says Cora Cooke, extension poultry specialist at University Farm, "but more feeder space for hens definitely does mean a more efficient distribution of feed." Every hen can eat according to her needs if enough space is provided. The man who argues, "Can't they wait?" just doesn't know hens.

The trouble is that it is always the same hens that wait. The more aggresive hens alway manage to get whatever space there is. The more limited the amount of space, the more hens are deprived of the chance to get all the feed they need to do their best job of production. Such a situation is about like hiring 20 men with tools enough for only ten and let half of them stand araund and wait their turn.

A pretty good rule to keep in mind is that if there is less than one 5-foot feed trough (feeding from both sides) for every 50 hens, some of the hens are not doing as well as they might. "Good feeders can be made at home, so cheaply," says Miss Cooke, "that no one can afford to skimp." Extension Folder 103, just published by the Agricultural Extension Service, gives a plan and bill of material for a homemade feeder. The folder may be had at the county agent's office.

Chicks often suffer from a shortage of feeder space and with just as bad results. Many cases of slow uneven growth and cannibalism could be traced directly to lack of feeders. The winter months just ahead offer a chance to build enough feeders so that all chicks are well provided for, say county agent Reierson.

P. B. Malberg, pioneer farmer of Excel, was a visitor in Holt on Friday. Mr. Malberg who is soon 84 years old, gets around like a young man.

Mrs. Beckwith Spoke Here

At a meeting of the Ladies Aid the "Food for Defense" program was explained by Mrs. Harry Beckwith of Argyle, Farmer Fieldwoman of Marshall County.

Our country is asking the farmers for the greatest output of live-stock products in history, Mrs. Beckwith said. We need more of the protien foods, milk eggs and meat. Also more vegetables should be raised and canned for home use to relieve factories for defense orders and also to release railroad cars for other transportation.

This increase of food will be used to build up our own people, for reserves for use of our soldiers and factory worker. Some will go to foreign countries, under the terms of the Lease-Lend bill and we must have large supplies for distribution by the Red Cross.

The farmers can secure this increase in food by better care and management of live stock, by using more regard for the laws of sanitation and by keeping only highly producing animals and poultry.

Food is the corner-stone of our national defense and the nation that has plenty of food will be very influential at the peacetable.

There must be thought for the post war period. Farmers are urged not to incur new debts but to pay up the old debts and then if there is more money to spend to invest in defense bonds. The money will be in a safe place and they will be helping their country to win the war.

Wendell Ray, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Wegge, was baptised at his home on Saturday evening with Rev. T. C. L. Hanson officiating. The sponsors were Mr. and Mrs. John Benitt and the baby's two grandmothers Mrs. Wm. Paskewitz and Mrs. L. Wegge.

Many Turkeys Bought Here

Walter Larson, manager of the local creamery, states that the Christmas Turkey pool here amounted to over 30,000 pounds of birds handled. This in amount of turkeys represents a flock of over 2000 birds. The Thanksgiving pool ran around 27,000 pounds with about 2250 birds. The reason there were less birds for the Christmas market was because they all averaged a heavier weight.

According to reports from farmers there is a fine bunch of birds left in the community for breeding stock for a turkey crop for next year.

The local creamery also did a big corn business, states Mr. Larson, as they handled some over 2600 bushels of whole corn during the fall.

A large group of Luther Leaguers were out Christmas Caroling last Friday evening bringing to the homes in our village the beautiful Christmas message with their young, fresh voices.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Ben Maijala on Wednesday morning, a girl. Mrs. Maijala is staying at the Harry Engen home.

Village Council Minutes

Minutes of a meeting of the Village Council of the Village of Holt which was held on Wednesday evening, October 6, 1941.

The following members were present: Hartley Peterson, Gilbert Sanoden, O. T. Ness, Sam Lorenson and Geo. Fricker.

Minutes of meeting held Sept. 9th were read and approved.

Moved by Sanoden and seconded by Ness that the following bills be allowed and paid:

| | |
|---|---|
| Marshall County State Bank $500.00 bond issue due April 1, 1942 and 6 months interest of $135.00 | 635.00 |
| Orris Johnson Labor man and team on streets cutting the weeds. 22 hours at 60c and 17 hours at 35c | 19.15 |
| Marshall County State Bank Lights for September | 8.54 |
| Total | $662.69 |

Moved by Fricker and seconded by Ness that the Village pay the Holt Community Community Band an additional $15.00 to take care of outstanding obligations.

Motion carried.

Moved by Fricker and seconded by Ness that the Village Levy for the year of 1942 be set at $1500.00 and as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| General Revenue | $ 300.00 |
| Bond & Interest | 1200.00 |
| | $ 1500.00 |

Moved by Ness and seconded by Sanoden that the application of E. W. Henning for a license for both On Sale and Off Sale Non-Intoxicating Malt Liquors on Lot 14, Block 8 ending December 31, 1941 be approved.

Motion carried.

O. T. Ness and Gilbert Sanoden were instructed to hire someone to brush the one-half mile of the Village line next to the Township of Excel. Work to be done as soon as possible so that the brush may be piled and burned.

The Village Clerk was instructed to advice the two firms selling non-intoxicating Malt Liquors as to the regulations regarding the sale of non-intoxicating Malt Liquors within the village of Holt.

There being no further business a motion was made and carried to adjourn.

Geo. Fricker
Village Clerk.

Labor and Machinery Shortage

Threatening shortages of farm labor and machinery is giving new emphasis to the benefits of cooperative ownership and use of heavy farm machinery, according to H. W. Thelander, county supervison for the Farm Security Administraton. He said that because of the defense needs for iron, steel, and other metals, the purchase of new machinery and equipment should be on a group basis whenever possible, and he encouraged the group use of old machinery which may help to dispense with the need of purchasing new equipment.

"There is no doubt that cooperation is the cheapest as well as one of the easiest ways for farmers to get the advantages of heavy machinery," Mr. Thelander said, "Most of us know that this is true but the incentive to cooperative is stronger today than ever before."

The FSA community and cooperative services program makes individual loans at 3 per cent interest to eligible farmers who want to get together on the purchase of a tractor or other machinery. Funds loaned are pooled to buy such machinery. Repayment is made in one-to-five years from fees collected by the service in proportion to each farmer's use of the jointly owned services.

"Farmers who need heavy machinery or purebred sires are eligible for loans from Farm Security only if they are unable to get adequate credit at reasonable terms from other sources," Mr. Thelander explained. "However, this does not prevent farmers who have their own funds from joining such services as nonborrowing members or as patrons, unless the service is already operating at capacity."

"Because of new machinery shortages, we are now urging farmers who already own tractors, tractor equipment, and other heavy machinery to share the use of such facilities with neighbors who may need equipment - - with or without charge.

"Where such equipment is not fully paid for, the owner may be interested in inviting other farmers to purchase interest in it. FSA can often finance eligible farmers who are offered such an opportunity, and will be glad to supply operating rules and agreements for the group thus organized.

A few parcels of property here in the village of Holt were sold at the Tax sale at Warren on Monday. Betty Waagedahl bid in the 7 acres adjoining the Moberg farm in the north end of the village. Ole J. Westman of Viking bought the old Mickelson hotel for $130.00. He will rent out the structure for the time being, he stated on a visit here to look over the property better on Wednesday. H. O. Hanson purchased the 21½ feet of the south end of lot 13, blk. 8 for $75.00. No land was sold in the townships in this end of the county at this sale.

Word has received here that Rubin Ness is working at one of the packing plants at St. Paul, where he went to work last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Wegge and Beverly of Thief River Falls visited Mrs. L. Wegge Tuesday evening.

Mrs. C. O. Saastad left Saturday for St. Paul to visit relatives

The Weather

The weather the past week has been fine. The sun has been shining nearly every day. The temperature has been running an average high. Monday we had a small drizzle of rain at noon and on Wednesday afternoon we had another small shower. However, this did not cause much difficulty as it stayed thawed and yesterday we had a fine sunny day that cleared up the weather situation.

And They Said It Couldn't Be Done
It is a thrill of a lifetime, motorists say, to drive one's own car up the smooth, broad highway leading to the summit of Pikes Peak, nearly three miles in the air.
Some people shook their heads afew years ago and said such a road could never be built. Pessemists are always shaking their heads, about every new project man proposes. And then the man with the idea and the perseverance goes out and does the "impossible."

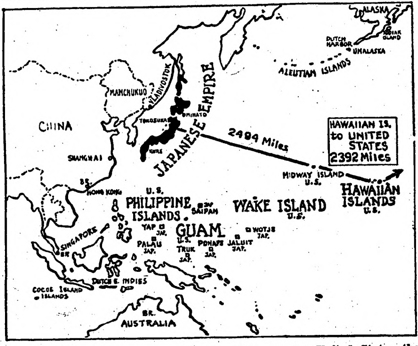
Japanese Follow Axis War Strategy Of Attack on American Possessions While Diplomatic Envoys Talk Peace; Nation Unites in All-Out War Effort

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)



With the opening of the Japanese blitz on the United States the spotlight of news swung to this section of the world. Above are shown the battle stations of the Pacific. First blow, a bombing attack, was aimed at the chief naval base of Pearl Harbor in the Hawaiian Islands. Several points in the Philippines were bombed. Guam was attacked by planes. The British port of Singapore was bombed and Japanese troops made a landing on the Malay peninsula north of Singapore.

WAR:
Sudden Attack

When war came to the United States it came with a sudden fury that startled the entire nation.

First news of Japan's attack on the great U. S. air and naval base at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii, came from the White House in Washington. Later reports told of the attacks on the Philippines and on the island outpost of Guam.

Though the nation was startled it was suddenly united. From former "isolationist" leaders and newspapers came pledges of support to the government in dealing with an unprovoked attack upon the United States.

Invoking the Nazi blitzkrieg tactic of striking with great surprise, Japanese bombers swooped over the city of Honolulu, the stronghold at Pearl Harbor and on the army's nearby flying base, Hickman field, even as the Japanese envoys in the United States were talking "peace" to state department officials in Washington.

Though the immediate attack came without warning the strong defense forces in Pearl Harbor went into quick action and heavy anti-aircraft fire shook the Pearl Harbor sector as the battle got under way.

After news of the attacks had reached Washington, radio listening outposts picked up word that Japan had declared war on the United States and Great Britain. By this time President Roosevelt had ordered U. S. army and naval forces in the Far East to execute "all previously prepared" orders. This order was carried out by U. S. aviators taking to the air and the fleet steaming out of Pearl Harbor to battle the enemy.

President Roosevelt called an immediate conference with cabinet members and legislative leaders to prepare plans for leading the nation through the crisis. As this conference was being held a report came in from Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, U. S. army commander in the Far East, telling of the several attacks on U. S. bases in the Philippines.

Planes participating in the bombing of Pearl Harbor were believed to be operating from an aircraft carrier somewhere in the region. A report by way of the Panama Canal Zone told of the sinking of a Japanese aircraft carrier in the Hawaiian area.

Immediate Allies

Support to the United States was immediately forthcoming from other nations. On the same day as the Japanese blitz got under way the government of the Netherland Indies declared war on Japan. In the Western hemisphere, Canada drew up its declaration of war, as did the Central American republic of Costa Rica. Australia joined the ranks of Nippon's foes.

Even before congress could get into session, Great Britain's parliament had been summoned to draw up its declaration. Winston Churchill, British prime minister, had previously pledged that should the United States be forced to go to war against Japan, Great Britain would join in the fight "within the hour."

As the Japanese began their long contemplated but currently unexpected drive Russia was expected to come with its forces on the side of the United States.

MISCELLANY:

Baltimore: Commendation went to Private Colas, selectee who was set to watch traffic at a street intersection while 12,000 troops passed through. He was to be picked up by a truck, which missed him. He remained on duty in the rain for 28 hours until M.P.'s picked him up. His commanding officer told him, "You understand that an order is truly an order."

ARMY AND NAVY:
Strength

"On any comparable basis, the U. S. navy is second to none," declared Navy Secretary Knox only a day before the attack made on U. S. possessions by Japanese bombers.

Compared to the status when the U. S. entered the First World war in 1917, both the army and the navy are on a larger scale. The army had approximately 1,600,000 in uniform the fatal Sunday when the bombs were let loose in Hawaii. In 1917, there were but 200,000 men.

While the character of naval vessels has changed in the capital ships group, so that comparison is not easy, it is significant to note the increase in destroyers and submarines. We have 170 destroyers today compared with 52 in 1917, and 113 submarines compared with 44.

The available number of U. S. combat planes on the outbreak of hostilities was estimated at 7,500.

As of November 1, 1941, the navy had in commission 17 battleships, 7 aircraft carriers, 37 cruisers, 170 destroyers, and 113 submarines.

SUB-ZERO:
Moscow Defends

Once again the weather man, having dished out weather much too warm for Russian comfort, turned again to aid the Red defense of Moscow, and Pravda was reporting the Soviet legions falling on the attackers in a temperature 17 below zero, and shoving them back all along the line.

Described battle lines on the southern, or Rostov front moved back beyond the Mius river, some 60 miles west of the "spigot city of Caucasian oil," and a score of miles west of Taganrog.

Russian reports described attacks upon fleeing Germans from the waters of the Sea of Azov, the fleet's guns hammering the Nazis and preventing them from reforming their lines along the coastal road.

The Reds also claimed having crossed the Mius, and trapping German forces attempting to make it back to Mariupol, currently General Von Kleist's headquarters.

From the Moscow front came dispatches claiming a big Red victory in the Mozhaisk-Volokolamsk sector, directly west of the city, halting and hurling back a German drive which Berlin claimed had brought them within 16 miles of the city.

Rome reports said that "a million and a half men and 8,000 tanks were driving on Moscow" but the Russians said the pressure was less, and that with the weather more favorable (the Reds seemed to pick up speed under sub-zero temperatures), the defense of the capital seemed more hopeful.

As to the Mius river crossing in the south, the Russians said they had executed a maneuver which trapped many Nazi regiments.

FINNISH:
Ships Seized

The British declaration of war on Finland, Hungary and Rumania had not been unexpected, but had been followed swiftly in the United States by the seizure of all Finnish vessels in American ports.

That was carrying out the formula of this country in "taking into protective custody" vessels of Axis-friendly countries, or those dominated by Axis powers on the theory that if permitted to leave they would be scuttled or captured.

New Role

When the Japanese started their attack on U. S. outposts, President Roosevelt faced the biggest of the many tough jobs he has had since he began his tenure in the White House. Shortly before news of the surprise attack by the Japanese was made the President had addressed Emperor Hirohito of Japan with a moving appeal for peace. But when bombs blasted loose over Pearl Harbor his job became not one of peace but of leading a nation at war.

PRESSURE:
In Libya

The British trap in Libya had remained closed, and the war which had been confusing and swift-moving had changed to a "pressure battle" in which the British contented themselves with slowly closing the ring instead of attempting head-and-head battles with small German formations.

A partial totaling of German-Italian prisoners taken up to this point had been 5,000 in "rear camps" and 2,500 in temporary camps nearer the front.

The 5,000 were divided 3,000 Italians and 2,000 Germans and the other group was split into 1,500 Italians and 1,000 Germans. In addition the British claimed huge amounts of material captured or destroyed.

In the most recent fighting, one day's toll at Ed Duda included 15 Italian tanks destroyed, 130 vehicles and 50,000 gallons of fuel oil taken, 400 men captured, two batteries of medium artillery; five anti-tank guns, 50 supply trucks and a big quantity of ammunition.

Amusing stories abounded. The best was the German prisoner who said he was, at the time of his capture, escorting a score of British prisoners to the rear.

The men kept spreading out, he said, and finally, two of them made a break to escape. They fled toward an emplacement of Italian machine-gunners. The German said the Italians, 11 in number, surrendered at once to the two fleeing Englishmen, who then grabbed the Italian guns and captured the German sentry, the whole group of one German and 11 Italians being taken back to the British lines.

PLANE:
Biggest Damaged

The world's largest airplane, the 200-foot-wing-spread Martin navy bomber "Mars," was damaged by an explosion and fire on its maiden "water test" and an investigation of possible sabotage had begun.

To watchers on shore it had appeared the plane had suddenly gone out of control, then there was a sudden roar, crash and one motor dropped off, to be succeeded by a burst of flame and smoke, the crew veering the ship to the river bank and then jumping overboard with fire extinguishers, and fighting the flames from chest-deep water.

Vice President and Pilot Ken Ebel said the fire was caused by a propeller blade coming off and shearing cleanly through the control room, injuring one man and cutting oil and gas lines, which started the blaze.

Investigation centered on the fact that the propellers were plastic, first time this material had been used on an American plane of large size, though it had been reputedly used with success in German and Russian planes.

LEOPOLD:
Weds Commoner

After being "out of the news" practically since his dramatic surrender during the Nazi sweep through the Low Countries, King Leopold, the "tragic recluse of Laekan," has been revealed as secretly married for months to a commoner.

The fatal automobile accident which almost took his life and in which his former wife, Queen Astrid was fatally hurt, occurred in 1935.

The bride was said to be Mary Leila Baels, a "well-educated, simple woman." She is a daughter of a former Belgian cabinet member.

The new consort of the "prisoner king" is much younger than he. It was said that they were married secretly in a church ceremony, and that a civil ceremony was planned soon.

Leopold's father, like his first wife, died a tragic death. King Albert was killed in a mysterious fall while climbing a mountain peak at Namur only a year before Queen Astrid's death.

Santa's Troubles

Our mechanized age certainly puts Santa at a disadvantage, because his reindeer never had troubles like this. Several inches of snow prove too much for his modern carriage, so Santa Claus has to wield a snow shovel in front of a New York store to free it. (Editor's note: Wonder what he does at the North pole where the snow is really deep.)

Christmas Marked In Early Colonies By Jollity, Feasting

Early American colonies along the Atlantic seaboard could have been located on different continents, so far as their Christmas celebrations were concerned.

Many of the customs of England were followed by the southern colonies of Georgia, Carolina, Maryland and Virginia. Here the Christmas season was a holiday in the true sense of the word. Feasting and merrymaking were common, but religious worship and prayer were not forgotten.

In sharp contrast to this happy celebration was the manner in which Christmas was marked in New England. Puritan leaders did their best to create a different conception of the day. Celebrations were declared pagan in origin, and it was believed such rites were out of keeping with the true spirit of the day. Their efforts were overcome after a number of years and New England yuletides gradually assumed a character more like those of old England.

Christmas in the middle colonies of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware was celebrated in the manner that the colonists followed in their countries of origin. In addition to England, these colonies were populated by people from Germany, Holland and Sweden. The Germans, for example, brought to America the custom of using the Christmas tree, but the Quakers of Philadelphia limited their observance to religious ceremonies.

Family reunions marked the season in both the middle and southern colonies. Houses were crowded with welcome guests who were treated to the best of fowls, wines and sweetmeats.

Along the frontier Christmas was a season of active merrymaking which in places verged on rowdyism.

As time went on, Christmas in the various sections of the colonies became fused until there is today a considerable similarity of practices throughout the United States.

St. Nicholas Loved For Piety, Grace

The name of Santa Claus is merely slurring the Dutch San Nicholas, which is, of course, Saint Nicholas. American children are probably the only ones who say it exactly that way.

Nicholas was an actual person. He was Bishop of Myra, in Lycia, Asia Minor, in the first part of the Fourth century, A. D. He was also the youngest bishop in the history of the church.

From the day of his birth Nicholas revealed his piety and grace. He refused on fast days to take the natural nourishment of a child.

But Nicholas was not a barefoot recluse vowed to poverty. His father was a wealthy merchant, and his riches enabled him to be a dispenser of the good things in life.

The feast of Saint Nicholas was originally celebrated on December 6. Later when church people in the late Middle ages tried to suppress the festivities which grew up around the Boy Saint's day, his festival came to be associated with Christmas day.

Christmas Celebrated in 98

Tradition says that Christmas was first celebrated in A. D. 98. It was ordered to be held as a solemn feast by Pope Telesphorus in A. D. 137. There is no record of any commemoration during the life of Christ.

About A. D. 340, St. Cyril made careful investigation as to the actual date of Christ's birth and reported December 25 as the most nearly correct date. Pope Julius accepted this and established the festival at Rome on this date, which was accepted by every nation in Christendom.

We Can All Be EXPERT BUYERS
● In bringing us buying information, as to prices that are being asked for what we intend to buy, and as to the quality we can expect, the advertising columns of this newspaper perform a worth while service which saves us many dollars a year.
● It is a good habit to form, the habit of consulting the advertisements every time we make a purchase, though we have already decided just what we want and where we are going to buy it. It gives us the most priceless feeling in the world: the feeling of being adequately prepared.
● When we go into a store, prepared beforehand with knowledge of what is offered and at what price, we go as an expert buyer, filled with self-confidence. It is a pleasant feeling to have, the feeling of adequacy. Most of the unhappiness in the world can be traced to a lack of this feeling. Thus advertising shows another of its manifold facets—shows itself as an aid toward making all our business relationships more secure and pleasant.

Jones Found It Difficult Matter to Change His Diet

Going to a new restaurant for lunch Jones ordered brown bread. The waitress brought him white. Jones, being a reserved fellow, said nothing. The second day he ordered brown and again got white. This went on for a week.

Then he decided that the only way to get what he wanted was to order the opposite. So he started the new week by adding to his luncheon order:

"And bring me some white bread."

"But," exclaimed the girl, "aren't you the gentleman who always has brown?"

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

HERE'S good news for belles-on-a-budget who yearn for the smooth smartness of a two-piece frock! Pattern No. 1485-B offers a streamline version—sleek, simple to make with a three button cardigan neck topper, a skirt with a front pleat and a dickey collar which gives a trim touch of white in a flattering line next to the face. This dickey is easily adjusted—doesn't need to be even pinned in place.

We easily can see the advantages of a suit of this type. The jacket emphasizing width at the shoulders and fitting smoothly over the hips helps the average figure achieve youthful slenderness—the skirt is comfortable to wear for walking, standing and sitting, the dickey provides a note of freshness for this costume so that it is always attractive to wear. Make it now for yourself in gabardine, twills, plaids, novelty rayons or serge.

Local Items

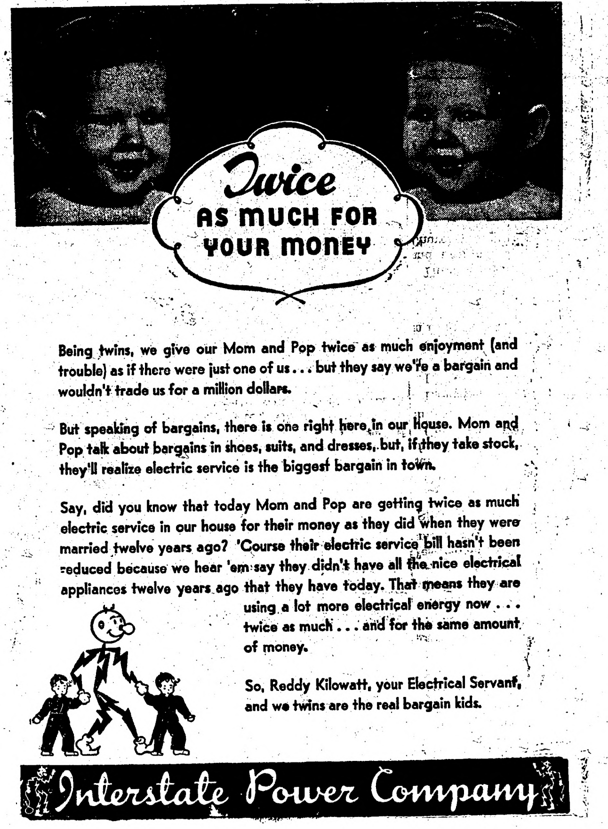
Mrs. Bill Larson left Saturday for a visit with relatives in Minneapolis.

Several Holt people motored to Newfolden on Sunday afternoon to attend the Candlelight Services given by the Lutheran Choir and the school choruses. The services were made up entirely of choral singing which was rendered in a very inspiring and touching manner. The young people from here who took part in the singing were Rnssel Sanoden, Lois Hanson, Betty Lou Lorentson and Opal Werner. Russel sang the solo part in the arrangement of "Beautiful Savior". The service was held at the High School auditorium.



Twice AS MUCH FOR YOUR MONEY

Being twins, we give our Mom and Pop twice as much enjoyment (and trouble) as if there were just one of us . . . but they say we're a bargain and wouldn't trade us for a million dollars.

But speaking of bargains, there is one right here in our house. Mom and Pop talk about bargains in shoes, suits, and dresses, but, if they take stock, they'll realize electric service is the biggest bargain in town.

Say, did you know that today Mom and Pop are getting twice as much electric service in our house for their money as they did when they were married twelve years ago? 'Course their electric service bill hasn't been reduced because we hear 'em say they didn't have all the nice electrical appliances twelve years ago that they have today. That means they are using a lot more electrical energy now . . . twice as much . . . and for the same amount of money.

So, Reddy Kilowatt, your Electrical Servant, and we twins are the real bargain kids.

Christmas Tree Headquarters

Minnesota may well claim the title as "Christmas Tree Hendquarters of the Nation", for not only does it export more trees than any other state, but apparently uses more at home as well.

Conservative estimates made by the Division of Forestry place at more than 800,000 the number of Christmas Trees used in Minnesota alone this year, and this does not include the additional thousands processed into various evergreen products. This would figure about one and a half trees per family in the state.

More than 2,000,000 trees were shipped out of the state this fall, going to every state in the union as well as a number of foreign countries. One Duluth concern alone processed and exported more than a half million trees, all between two and a half and three feet in height.

It is indicated more than 600,000 tags will be sold by the Division this year. A tag must be placed on every Christmas tree sold in Minnesota. Many persons, especially in the northern part of the state, cut trees for their own use, and these of course, do not need to be tagged.

In lieu of the two cent tag, operators may obtain a license at $200 which permits them to transport untagged trees and ship them out of the state. If these operators sell any trees in Minnesota, howeve, the two cent tags must be attached.

Prices for trees averaged slightly higher this year than last, and this resulted mainly from the fact that the man who cut the trees in the woods received better wages.

Red Cross War Relief Fund

A whirlwind campaign to raise Marshall County's quota of $1,800 for the American Red Cross War Relief fund of $50,000,000 will get under way immediately after Christmas and is scheduled for completion by January 1, Mrs. Evelyn Bierbaum-Peterson, who will head the campaign for the county chapter announced today.

The same volunteer organizations conducted the recent Roll Call is being requested to conduct the special War Relief drive, said Mrs. Peterson who has sent letters of instruction to all village and township chairmen.

"While the annual Roll Call which has recently been completed in the county has been most successful with $2,025.25 being raised, Marshall county people are appealed to again to show their generosity to this worthy cause by contributing liberally for Red Cross War Relief", said Mrs. Peterson. The money to be raised in the new campaign will be used to relieve suffering among bombed out civilians, including women and children in possessions of our country in the Pacific as well as in cases where there may be stress on continental cities.

It was announced yesterday by radio that Winston Churchill of England was at the White House in Washington confering with President Roosevelt on war measures. This is the second time in six months that the two men have gotten together and talked things over. The last time they met on an American battle ship on the Atlantic.

MERRY CHRISTMAS

WHAT two words on human tongue are more heart-warming than those! They not only represent a friendly greeting, but in them are summed up the whole spirit of the Yuletide—brightness and laughter, joy of living and joy of giving, health and happiness, peace on earth and good will to all men.

It is a greeting which we will hear often in this community of ours during these happy days of the Christmas season. We will hear it on our streets, in our stores, along our country roads and in our homes. For ours is a friendly community and nowhere is that friendly greeting more sincere. It is not possible, however, for each of us to say "Merry Christmas!" to everyone and thus complete the happy circle of Yuletide good cheer.

But there is one who has that rare privilege, one who has been a welcome visitor at the firesides of the homes in this community throughout the year and who now claims the right to be the first to wish you joy at this joyous time. That one is your Home Paper.

So your Home Paper carries from you to all the community and from all the community to you this friendly greeting:

MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Letter From Mrs. Ordahl

The following is part of a nice letter received from Mrs. M. B. Ordahl, Glenfield, N. D.: "We appreciate the Holt Weekly News so very much. It keeps us in touch with the people of Holt and vicinity. We still know many of them. It is interesting to notice the names of children and young people whom I remember as members of Sunday School, Confirmation Classes, and Luther League, now taking part as active members and citizens of church and community. We read of some as teachers here and there, in business, married, or off to college. Some of these I have seen being carried into church for baptism. It is interesting to follow these young people. Yes, time rolls on. You older ones, I think of at your establisned places of business and in your homes in town or country. Your church activities are very interesting to me. I also cherish the memories of those who have departed for their eternal home."

The News joins their many friends here in wishing Mrs. Ordahl and daughters A Merry Christmas and A Happy New Year.

Celebrated 75th Birthday

On the 11th of December, at the new home of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. E. Smith, former residents and old settlers of Marshall county, now living in Mc Gregor, Minn. a splendid gathering took place in honor of Mrs. C. E. Smith's 75th Birthday, many friends and relatives were present to bid her God's speed with health and happiness for the coming yesrs. Mr. Smith was also the bright light in the picture, soon to celebrate his 85th birthday. He is well and able bodied and his delight is to help with every opportunity that presents itself to him. They like their new home and location on the banks of the beautiful Bass LaKe. A grand place for the fisherman's skill and knowledge.

The birthday party was sponsered and prepared by Mrs. Alfred Swanson daughter of the honored guest, and Rev. Swanson did everything to make the occasion pleasant and cheerful. The grand attendance proves that the Smiths have made many friends during their short stay in this community and there is every sign to show that they will find more lasting friends as the days go by. A number of friends motored from Aitkin where Rev. Reuben E. Smith and wife are in charge of the Gospel Tabernacle.

Dinner was prepared by the Swansons and served by the ladies of the community.

We trust and pray that the Smiths will enjoy many such gatherings and that health and happiness be their lot for time and finally for eternity.

Ed. Note: The above was written by Rev. R. E. Smith of Aitkin, Minnesota.

Alfred Simonson arrived here last week from Oakland, California where he has been employed the past months. Art Sandland came with him to return to his home at Grygla.

Infants Under Year Old Enjoy Christmas Gifts, Baby Claims

"Of course we babies can enjoy Christmas gifts."

Dear World:

Of course, I'm disgusted. You'd feel this way too if folks said you were too dumb to enjoy Christmas. They say that we babies less than a year old don't need presents because we can't appreciate them anyway. The idea!

A lot of other babies are also complaining about this attitude. Why, we can talk better English than most grown-ups.

"Dud iddy biddy baby want pretty rattle-wattle? Daddikens will pick it up from the floorsie-worsie for oo."

Phoey! If I couldn't talk better than this I'd keep still. And then they have the audacity to assume that babies under one year are too young to enjoy Christmas.

Last month we conducted a poll among babies 12 months of age or younger, asking them if they considered themselves capable of enjoying Christmas.

Exactly 987 of the 1,000 babies questioned replied emphatically in the affirmative. The 13 who voted "no" are going to be a year old before Christmas and felt they would have a better chance of getting presents from relatives if their younger cousins were left out. But that's a purely selfish motive and doesn't affect the unanimity of the poll.

Now that you have had indisputable proof that babies enjoy Christmas, don't rush out to buy us an electric train or bicycle. After all, we act our age even though we know better.

There are several points you should keep in mind while looking through the toy department: We want toys that will attract our attention, and they must be cleaned easily. We babies have a bad habit of putting things in our mouths, so if the toy is too small, we might swallow it. Don't worry, though. We'll get over the habit.

Colored bakelite disks on a chain make one of the nicest and least expensive gifts for babies. We can have a lot of fun playing with those white, yellow, red and green disks. And they're real easy to keep clean, too.

Other children want only toys they can play with, but we babies can appreciate the more practical gifts such as cribs, playpens and jumper-swings. They are virtual necessities to us and make our lives much more pleasant.

Clothing also makes excellent gifts. A few of the many articles we would be glad to receive include shirts, night gowns, dresses, rompers, shoes, stockings and bonnets.

One of the most practical and welcome gifts for any baby would be an automobile seat. These can be attached to the seat of any automobile and permit babies to see out, but prevent them from falling out. Babies must be able to sit up before using them, but all babies learn to sit up before they are very old. And we enjoy looking out of the window of the car as much as you do. It's no fun just looking at the inside of the car when we're going some place. How would you like it?

Another practical gift would be a life-insurance policy that will mature in about 18 years and provide funds for a college education. Or, savings account can be opened in baby's name for as little as $1—but you don't have to make it that small.

We babies can't get Christmas presents for our parents and other grownups, but we certainly would if we could. Just wait a couple of years and see if we don't.

Signed, Disgusted "Youth."

Early Puritans Forbid 'Crime' of Celebrating Christmas

Celebrating Christmas was a crime to the early Puritans in Massachusetts. The practice was looked down upon with so much disfavor that anyone observing the date was fined five shillings. On May 11, 1659, the general court in Boston passed a law against Christmas celebrations which said:

"It is therefore ordered by this court and the authority thereof that whomsoever shall be found observing any such day as Christmas or the like, either by forebearing labor, feasting, or any other way, upon such account as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall pay for every such offense five shillings as a fine to the county."

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS

By Edward C. Wayne

Knox Makes Blunt Report on Hawaii: Army and Navy Losses Set at 2,897 In Surprise Attack on Pearl Harbor; Battleship Arizona Among Craft Sunk

(EDITOR'S NOTE—When opinions are expressed in these columns, they are those of the news analyst and not necessarily of this newspaper.)

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

HAWAII:
A Report

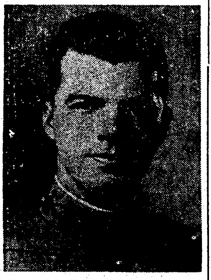
From Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, just back from a flying inspection trip to Hawaii came a report the nation had anxiously awaited—the extent of damage done by the Japanese in their first blast at Pearl Harbor and Honolulu. Army and navy casualties were set at 2,897 dead, 879 wounded and 26 missing. Six warships, including one battleship, the Arizona, went down.

Knox was blunt in establishing his points. First he said that Japan failed in what it set out to do—knockout the United States in the Pacific before the war actually got under way. Second, his report stated "The United States services were not on the alert against the surprise air attack on Hawaii. This fact calls for a formal investigation which will be initiated immediately by the President. Further action is, of course, dependent on the facts and recommendations made by this investigating board. We are all entitled to know if (a) there was any error of judgment which contributed to the surprise, and (b) if there was any dereliction of duty prior to the attack."



Here is one of the war's first heroes—Capt. Colin P. Kelly, who was killed while making a daring air attack on the Japanese battleship Haruna in a battle off the Philippines. He was credited with scoring three direct bomb hits on the vessel, leaving it in flames and later it sank. Kelly was an army flier and former West Pointer.

The secretary of the navy went on to point out that after the battle began the defense by both army and navy was "conducted skillfully and bravely." He pointed out many incidents of individual heroism, though the report did not mention the heroes by name.

Equally blunt was his statement of material and personnel losses. The navy lost the battleship Arizona, three destroyers, a mine layer and the old target ship Utah. In addition damage was inflicted to other vessels and Knox said some of these would take weeks and others months to repair.

He said that the entire rest of the fleet was now out on the Pacific seeking action with the enemy. Morale on the islands was high, said Knox.

Main army losses consisted of planes caught on the ground. Hangars were also damaged.

Enemy losses were declared to be three submarines and 41 aircraft.

PLAN:
Of Japanese

As the war with Japan progressed, and as Germany and Italy walked into the picture unbidden, Americans began to get a slightly clearer vision of just what the campaign of Nippon aimed at, and what it was likely to accomplish before the United States got its war machine moving in high gear.

It soon became evident that the disastrous raid on Hawaii had probably succeeded far beyond Japan's wildest hopes, but that it had been simply a "nuisance raid" in the first place, and not made with any faintest hope of occupying the islands.

The attacks on Guam, Midway, Wake islands were, on the other hand, apparent efforts to take those Pacific outposts, and were made with forces that the Japanese deemed sufficient to do the job.

The effort against the Philippines, however, was just as evidently the sole serious attempt against U. S. territory in any volume, and to this task the Japanese apparently had dedicated about 200-odd planes, which probably meant at least two aircraft carriers.

The chief Japanese objective unquestionably was Malaya and Burma, with Singapore as a necessary battle before the Japs could consider any permanent success had been theirs.

The cutting of the Burma road was another, but this, it could be realized, would only relieve the pressure from the Chinese army, and would enable the Japanese to remove forces from China only after a long period.

The vital need of Japan was oil, oil and more oil, without which it would be impossible for her to keep her fleet moving, her planes in the air, or to prosecute any sort of war at all.

And this oil was in the Dutch East Indies. Against successful occupation of any of these oil-bearing islands two great obstacles stand.

The Philippines stand astride the China sea at a point where it is only about 500 miles wide, and the huge Singapore base closes the neck of hoped-for Japanese operations at the east.

Hence the most serious invasion effort was made by the Japs via Indo-China and Thailand, with the landings at Malaya an effort to make the British tenure of the long neck ending in Singapore untenable.

The secondary attack was on the Philippines, chiefly to obtain naval and air bases far enough outside the circle of the island defenses to permit a serious effort at capture.

Army watchers saw little chance that the Japs would spread themselves out thin enough to attempt a strong attack on Hawaii or on the West coast.

DUTCH:
Do Their Bit

The Dutch are hard to beat—that's an old saying. The Dutch were doing their bit, though their native land was occupied by the Nazis, in the war in the Far East as well as in the Mediterranean.

In the sinking of an entire Italian flotilla by night by an inferior force of British ships, much credit was given the 1,800-ton Dutch destroyer Isaac Sweers for its part in the engagement.

RUSSIANS:
Refuse Peace

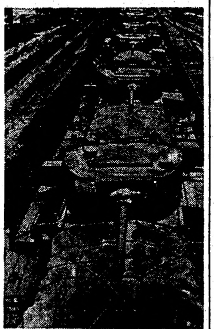
An effort by the Nazis to make peace with Russia in order that their armies might hibernate in their present positions and renew the war in the spring was indignantly turned aside by the Soviet, which had the victory taste in its mouth and was not to be denied.

Daily dispatches from Red army headquarters continued to develop the victory not only on the southern front, where it all started, but in front of Moscow as well, where the Russians said the German retreat was becoming a panic-stricken rout.



Help for Russia from Canada: This photo shows a long line of Canadian-built infantry tanks loaded aboard flat cars leaving Montreal on the first lap of the long journey to the Russian fronts for use against the Nazis. These are 28-ton tanks having a top speed of 20 miles per hour.

The Nazis, they said, were blowing up tanks in the path of the advancing Russians, and were abandoning hundreds of vehicles and guns.

War cannot be fought at 17 degrees below zero, Hitler had told his people in announcing that "no further effort at advance would be made in Russia during the winter."

"Yes it can," shouted the Russians, as, dressed, in their warm clothing and with the enthusiasm given them by one success after another they continued to move the Germans back.

The Reds' figures were so large as to be almost unbelievable. They claimed 75,000 Germans killed in front of Moscow.

Their total claim for German losses during the entire campaign was 6,000,000 dead, wounded, prisoners.

Though the Russians did not immediately declare war on Japan, Litvinoff, new emissary to Washington, called Japan "the common enemy," another "of the gang of Axis criminals," and indicated that Russia would be glad to "do anything to help."

DEFENSE:
At Home

Grim reality of war has come to many U. S. coastal cities. Here in this startling picture big ramparts of sand bags are being hastily constructed in front of one of the telephone company's buildings in San Francisco.

While 99 per cent of the "air raids" reported on American continental cities had been rumors or tests, home defense was bustling ahead.

Blackouts were being practiced busily from one coast to the other, and the rules during air raids were being read and re-read in American homes, while men, women and children repeated to themselves the magic words "keep calm, stay at home, lie down"—and all the rest of the litany.

From it all was coming a stronger realization that home defense was needed chiefly to bind the morale of the nation, and as an ever-present safeguard against fifth-column activities, of which there was more than a little.

The sabotage-fifth-column activities in the United States were not, of course, a fraction of what they were in Manila nor in Hawaii, but they were serious and the widespread calling out of the home guards had a much more important effect than did the same move in the last war when territorial United States was safer from attack.

First evidences of the dangers of Pacific shipping were the mandatory halting of rubber tire sales pending a permanent rationing plan, and the freezing of all stocks of sugar.

From these the nation learned it was at war and the man in the street began slowly to get the idea that it was not play.

CHINESE:
Fight Jap Rear

Though the troops necessarily were of the guerrilla type, there were reports that the Chinese were making a serious and important attack on the Japanese rear in the Canton neighborhood, a most welcome diversion as the British sought to hang onto Hongkong.

Hongkong was reported completely surrounded by Japanese troops, and the British did admit that their troops had been withdrawn from Kowloon, its stronghold on the mainland, about 20 miles north of Hongkong itself.

The British, however, had said it was part of their plan to abandon Kowloon and to concentrate on a defense of hilly Hongkong itself.

The Chinese attack, they said, tended to divert the Japanese from attempting to attack Hongkong from the Kowloon side.

Messages of cheer following the triple war declarations went back and forth from time to time between the British and American commanders and Chiang Kai-shek at Chungking.

BRITISH:
In Malaya

The frightful loss suffered by the British fleet in the first days of the Malaya campaign, in which two capital ships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, totaling practically 70,000 tons, had gone to the bottom either the victims of Jap submarines or planes or both, had been somewhat offset by the steady resistance of the troops to Japanese advancing efforts.

By the time the war was in its second week the British were able to report that the "Malayan advance of the Japanese was at a standstill."

The British commanders seemed to have been able to fathom the general Jap plan of attack, and to meet it step by step with the loss of as little ground as possible until something like a plain battle line could be developed.

Day after day the report had been "the situation in Malaya continues to be confused."

Finally the British stated that they were "holding the invaders to a standstill," and that the battle was being "confined to the northern jungles."

BRIEFS:
Heroes of Hawaii

Heroes of Hawaii:

Second Lieut. George S. Welch, Wilmington, Del., 23, downed four Jap planes in one combat. A Purdue boy, he finished his flying training 14 months ago at Kelly Field and later was sent to the Far East.

Second Lieut. Kenneth M. Taylor, Hominy, Okla., 22; destroyed two Jap planes in his first fight. A University of Oklahoma junior, graduated Brooks Field in April.

PATTERNS SEWING CIRCLE

BRAVO for the new silhouette—shaped by this long, torso-molding top, low waistline and full, swirling skirt! If you are out to get the world by the tail you simply must have one of these dirndl frocks—and it is typical of the young spirit of the times that you'll probably be your own dressmaker and turn out this style perfectly for yourself! Pattern No. 1479-B offers nothing fancy—merely that perfect button-front top with its immaculate, snowy white collar, short sleeves set in with a smooth straight shoulder line and a skirt gathered on at a slinkily low waist.

It's a dress for stiff fabrics, faille, taffeta or moire if you desire swish. Or, if you prefer flaming colors, make it in a soft wool crepe.

JUST JESTING

That's Stone

Diner—Waiter, take this chicken away. It is actually so tough it seems to be made out of stone.

Waiter—Nothing strange about that, sir. It's a Plymouth Rock.

His Foresight

The father was interviewing his daughter's suitor.

"What are your prospects?" he asked

"Pretty good—unless your daughter's been misleading me!" came the reply.

One or the Other

Suitor—If you don't marry me, I shall not care to live . . .

Girlie—And if I did, I shouldn't.

A teaspoon of salt added to the water in whch eggs are boiled makes them easier to remove from the shells.

* * *

In mixing flour and water for gravies, use a fork or egg beater to make it smooth and free from lumps.

* * *

A termite shield must be made of some material that ants cannot work through. Metal is the best one, because ant-tight joints can be made in metals.

* * *

Be sure to arrange the dishes cooking in your oven so that there is plenty of space between them and the food will brown evenly.

* * *

If you like a faint flavor of onion rub a slice of onion around your salad bowl or serving dish. The resulting flavor is light, but satisfactory. Garlic, used in the same manner, requires much more careful handling, since fewer people enjoy a garlic taste.

Celery leaves, sprigs of parsley and slices of onion may be used effectively and economically to season soups. Add the seasoning to the soup while it is cooking and strain it before it is served.

* * *

Cigarette ashes, put on potted plants, will kill the insects that often infest them.

* * *

Lipstick stains on linens and cotton can nearly always be removed by the use of warm water and mild soapsuds.

Minneapolis—There is nothing about the government's order forbidding the sale of new automobile tires and tubes which should unnecessarily alarm the public. This statement was issued by the Minneapolis district priorities office. Officials explained that the order is temporary and was imposed only to control the buying of tires until an allotment plan can be worked out. Used tires, retreads and tires on new or used vehicles are not included in the order.

New York, N. Y. - The people of the United States were urged to view the war situation calmly and not allow themselves to become panic stricken over false rumors which in many cases are entirely groundless. Mayor F. H. LaGuardia director of civilian defense, issued the following statement in wires to the Minnesota, Montana, North and South Dakota state defense councils: "The army and navy will issue factual reports to the public, if and when danger is imminent. This information will be issued by authorities fully conversant with the situation.

The Weather

The weather the past week has been on the mild order with the thermometer reading up to 40 above late Sunday afternoon. That day we had a shower of rain that left the roads in a bad shape. They still are very icy and careful driving is needed to stay on top of them.

Several parties have hit the ditch because of ice. Reports come to us that Theo. Ness of Red Lake Falls lost his large beer van in an accident on Monday when the van loaded to full capacity hit the ditch near Green bush and cracked up and also ruined the load. The driver and helper were lucky to escape with only a shaking up.

Red Cross, OCD Look to Volunteers For Civil Defense

Washington, D. C.—To the question, "What can I do for America?" the Red Cross is providing an answer for hundreds of thousands of men and women who want to do their part on the civilian defense front.

For women, the Red Cross is providing an 80-hour training course to recruit a corps of 100,000 Nurse's Aides. It is the Red Cross' newest project, undertaken at the request of the U. S. Office of Civilian Defense to relieve the current pressure on nursing facilities.

With thousands of nurses being taken into military service with our armed forces, civilian nursing has suffered a direct blow, the Red Cross points out. Moreover, the defense program has created additional health problems which has heightened the need for civilian nursing.

Red Cross Nurse's Aides will serve as assistants to registered nurses, performing scores of important duties which will enable nurses to care for more cases. The Red Cross stresses that Nurse's Aides will not take the place of the registered nurse, but will serve in an auxiliary capacity.

On the more dramatic side of civilian defense, the Red Cross is gearing its far-flung disaster fighting machine to handle mass feeding, housing and clothing of exacuees under wartime conditions. In cooperation with the Office of Civilian Defense, chapters are strengthening disaster relief committees to cope with man-made disaster much on the same scale as relief operations following natural catastrophe. Organization along these lines include preparedness measures for fires, explosions and epidemics which may be expected to result from accelerated industrial activity incident to national defense or sabotage.

Strictly as a precautionary measure, the Red Cross is devising means of confronting emergency relief in the event of sporadic air or sea attacks, considered conceivable hazards in some coastal and boundary areas.

The need for First Aid in civilian defense has not been neglected by the Red Cross. Last year nearly 600,000 were trained in emergency treatment of the injured. This year the figure is expected to go much higher with special emphasis being placed on the formation of detachments which would serve as units in factories, office buildings, schools and other places where persons are concentrated.

Red Cross courses in Home Nursing and in Nutrition also are being expanded as a feature of the civilian defense program, it was pointed out. Mounting health hazards and the shortage of civilian nurses may at any time obligate the housewife—or even the man of the house—to assist in caring for the sick. Likewise, the Red Cross is placing greater emphasis on Nutrition courses designed to teach householders the art of purchasing and preparing well-balanced meals within the range of the family pocketbook.

Greetings

We wish to thank our many friends and customers for their patronage and wish them a
